NEW EDITION OF

Mrs. Palliser's History of Lace.

Under the Editorship of M. JOURDAIN and ALICE DRYDEN.

This important work was originally published thirty-six years ago. It went through several editions both in English and French, and has always been recognised as the great authority on the subject. It has been out of print for several years, and copies are now very scarce. This edition will be enlarged to royal 8vo., retaining all the original illustrations, and being supplemented by some 200 reproductions, many specially taken by Miss A. DRYDEN, and with over 500 pages of letterpress.

Very handsome binding, cloth extra, gilt edges, price Two Guineas net.

The Royal Navy from the Earliest Times to the Present.

Edited by WILLIAM LAIRD CLOWES. Illustrated by Photogravure Portraits, Maps, Plans, &c. Each volume will be complete in itself, with an index, and orders will be taken either for sets or for separate volumes.

President Roosevelt has contributed to this volume a long and critical account of the naval operations of the war between Great Britain and the United States in 1812-15. The characteristic of Colonel Roosevelt's chapter is its unflinching impartiality in the bestowal alike of praise and of blame.

'The portraits, illustrations, and photogravures contained in the volume, as well as the printing, fully maintain the high standard of excellence which was attained in the first, and has since been so adequately sustained in all the subsequent volumes.'—DAILY NEWS, November 21.

NEW WORK BY CAPTAIN MAHAN.

Types of Naval Officers.

With some Remarks on the Development of Naval Warfare during the Eighteenth Century. By ALFRED T. MAHAN, LL.D., D.C.L. With 6 Photogravure Portraits. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

Captain Mahan has in this work supplemented his 'Life of Nelson' with narrative anecdotal memoirs of popular character of six British admirals, whose personal characteristics and professional career make them conspicuous examples of naval seamen of types differing from one another, but all continually recurrent in naval history, viz., Lord Hawke, Lord Rodney, Earl Howe, Earl St. Vincent, Lord De Saumarez, Lord Exmouth, all of whom raised themselves to their rank in the peerage by their distinguished professional services.

The Animals of Æsop.

Æsop's Fables adapted and pictured by JOSEPH J. MORA. Crown 4to. cloth, gilt edges, 10s. 6d. net.

'An almost ideal Christmas book for either boy or girl. . . . If the stories are good, the pictures are at least as good, and are the great attraction of the book. They are admirably drawn, and some are showily coloured. They are intensely humorous. Each picture speaks, and each figure has its own individual story and charm. Wisdom never yet presented itself to the young mind and eye in more alluring and delightful garb than in this clever and beautiful book.'

New James=Molé Dictionary

JUST PUBLISHED.

Published at the extremely low price of Six Shillings, in cloth.

Dictionary of the English and French Languages.

By W. JAMES and A. MOLÉ.

Sixteenth, entirely New and Modern Edition, completely Re-written and greatly Enlarged.

By LOUIS TOLHAUSEN,

FORMER CONSUL-GENERAL OF FRANCE, OFFICIER DE LA LÉGION D'HONNEUR, AND

GEORGE PAYN,

ASSISTED BY E. HEYMANN, OFFICIER D'ACADÉMIE.

Crown 8vo. bound in cloth, 6s.

Although the present work still bears the name of JAMES and MOLÉ, it has been, in point of fact, completely re-written by the present editors, whose names as finished scholars of the two languages will be sufficient guarantee of the soundness and excellence of the New Edition.

Among its more salient advantages are:—

1. The enlarged compass and size—1250 crown 8vo. pages of 3 columns (325 pages more than the original edition).
2. Inclusion of all phrases in general, and even in familiar use in both languages. Indication of obsolete and obsolescent words and phrases by means of an asterisk.
3. A new system of pronunciation of the words of both languages which stands unrivalled for clearness and comprehensibility. Every title-word is accompanied by a complete phonetic respelling. Key words will be found at the bottom of each page of the English-French part.
4. Careful arrangement of the work and selection of type, securing a maximum of clearness and easy reference.
5. A movable book-mark, on which the lists of abbreviations and tables of pronunciation, given at the beginning of the volume, are repeated.

The Dictionary can be had of all the principal booksellers.

Publishers' Circular

ST. DUNSTAN'S HOUSE, E.C.

February 28, 1902.

PROPOSED BRITISH AND IRISH BOOKSELLERS' BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.

We are glad in this issue of the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR and BOOKSELLERS' RECORD to be able to place before our readers in all parts of the United Kingdom a suggestion which deserves—and will, we feel sure, receive—due consideration by all who are interested in the bookselling trade.

But it is more than a suggestion, it is a carefully considered and well formulated proposal for the establishment of a Provincial Booksellers' Benevolent Society, by Mr. Henry R. Brabrook, who in his letter, in his prospectus, and in his comparative table of work done by existing benevolent societies, shows that he thoroughly understands the subject which he has at heart. Mr. Brabrook, of course, does not pretend to have evolved a final scheme, but after a careful study of existing societies and aided by the advice of his father—whose official position and unrivalled knowledge in connection with these societies and their work is well known—he has given what is always so useful in matters of this kind, viz. a definite plan to work upon. It would be perfectly easy to criticise details in the prospectus, but the time has not yet come for that, and when it comes it will, we hope, be done by a Committee or Council properly appointed and thoroughly representative of the booksellers of the country.

It is more than sixty years since we chronicled the establishment of the London

Booksellers' Provident Institution, and what we have since said in support of that admirable society and in reporting its work would fill a big volume; but no one knows or can know the immense amount of good it has done. We read in the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR or the Bookseller that at the monthly meeting of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, Mr. C. J. Longman in the chair, relief to the amount of so many pounds was voted to so many cases. It is a simple statement; we read it, let us hope, with a feeling of indebtedness to the President and officers and Council of the Society for so ungrudgingly devoting themselves to the work—we read it, but we get only a faint idea of what it may and often does mean. Why, if the Society had done no more since its establishment than relieve the cares and lessen the anxieties of one poor widow, it would not have existed in vain; since it has done this in thousands of such and other cases of distress, who can tell the amount of good it has done? You cannot weigh anxiety or measure distress with a tape.

Mr. Brabrook points out, not quite correctly, that the work of the Booksellers' Provident Institution is limited to London,* if it is not a contradiction in terms to refer to any such work carried on in London as being 'limited'—where six millions of us live, each only knowing the outside cases of a few score fellow souls. A 'ten-mile radius from St. Paul's' is a diocese that even the great Apostle of the Gentiles himself would not have found too small; and for our part we hope there will be no suggestion of interfering with or extending the radius of action of the London Booksellers' Provident Institution. By the way, there is a remark about this institution which we regret to see in Mr. Brabrook's letter, as it will do no good; he says the institution 'has to a great extent, perhaps undeservedly, failed to gain the confidence and support of the younger men.' The B.P.I. does not pretend to be perfect, but it will be time enough for critics living hundreds of miles outside its radius of action to talk in this way when they can point to any provincial society with such a record and doing such good work. The London Booksellers' Provident is an old society, but it is not too old to learn, and if our friends in the provinces can establish—as we sincerely hope they will—a society which secures the hearty confidence and support of the younger men, the lesson will not be lost in London.

The fact that appeals for subscriptions for deserving cases appear so constantly in

* It is true that a candidate must be within the radius at the time of election, but a very large number of the members subsequently go to the country.

our columns and in those of the Bookseller is the best proof that there is a genuine but unorganised desire in the trade to assist unfortunate fellow-workers. But the cases which are made known in this way are unfortunately but a small proportion of those which occur; it wants some moral courage, as well as an unselfish devotion of time and trouble, for individuals to send the hat round the trade, and it would be infinitely better if it could be done in some properly organised way. We have given the matter publicity, and are quite sure our friend the Bookseller will do the same. If the suggestion grows into such a movement as secures the hearty support of the Provincial Book Trade Associations there can be no doubt of its success. If it is fortunate in securing the services of such a conscientious and hard-working secretary as Mr. Larnier, of the B.P.I., we shall hear before long of the establishment of a Provincial Booksellers' 'Retreat' in London, where our friends from the country can come for a little 'Folly and Fresh Air,' or to see 'Fresh Woods and Pastures New.'

OUR SPRING ANNOUNCEMENT NUMBER.

It is not a bad sign, we think, that both here and in America the Spring Announcement Lists of the publishers are not, on the whole, so long as usual; it is to a certain extent a recognition of the undoubted fact that the book market has suffered from over-supply. Some of the publishers are not yet ready with their Spring Lists, but our pages this week again bear striking testimony to the activity of authors and the enterprise of publishers. We always endeavour to make our Special Numbers widely known beyond the thousands of our regular readers, and this week we shall send the P. C. by post to the reading-rooms of over a thousand of the best literary and social clubs in the Empire, taking the addresses from that most useful little work, 'Clubs 1902,' edited by E. C. Austen Leigh, M.A., and published by Messrs. Spottiswoode & Co., Limited.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

'The Life of Queen Alexandra' will shortly be published by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton. It is the first full and authentic biography of the Queen to be written, and we understand that the author, Mrs. Sarah A. Tooley, who is well known as a royal biographer, has been given special facilities for her work. The book will be well illustrated, many of the pictures being rare, while others are reproduced by the Queen's permission.

* * *

A very fine edition of 'The Compleat Angler of Walton and Cotton' is to be published in March by Messrs. Freemantle & Co., of Piccadilly. The editor is that good angler and angling writer, Mr. Geo. A. B. Dewar. There will be an essay by Sir Edward Grey, Bart., and many illustrations by Mr. Wm. Strang and Mr. D. Y. Cameron. It is to be known as the Winchester Edition.

We regret to record the death of Professor Samuel Rawson Gardiner, the historian, which occurred at his residence, South Park, Sevenoaks, on Sunday night, February 23. He was taken ill about the end of July last year, and he never actually recovered from the attack of paralysis with which he was then seized.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will publish immediately a new novel by Lilian Bell, author of 'The Love Affairs of an Old Maid' &c., entitled 'The Expatriates.' This is a story of American life in Paris, and the author, who writes from first-hand knowledge both of America and Paris, exposes the despicable characteristics of a certain class of modern Parisians.

Messrs. Methuen will publish in a few days Mr. C. H. Firth's 'Cromwell's Army: a History of the English Soldier from 1642 to 1660.' The object of the book is to give an exact and lifelike picture of the New Model army, and to show how the machine worked. The author has made use of unpublished MSS. throughout, and of many printed sources which escaped the notice of earlier writers on military antiquities.

That fine old sportsman and angling writer, Mr. George Rooper, who is over ninety years of age and still fishes for salmon, contributes a bright and lively account of some amusing canvassing experiences he had as a young man, seventy years ago, to Longman's Magazine for March.

Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to accept a copy of 'Louis Wain's Annual,' published by Messrs. Treherne & Co.

Macmillan's Magazine for March opens with an article by the Hon. J. W. Fortescue, entitled 'The Close of a Great War,' in which the author urges the country to avoid in these days errors committed by our rulers at the time of the American rebellion.

Miss Adeline Sergeant has laid the scene of her last novel—'The Master of Beechwood'—partly in Australia and partly in England. The hero inherits an estate in an English county, and takes with him to England his two old aunts and their young lady companion, with consequences which may be imagined. Messrs. Methuen will issue the book at once.

Part 10 of Living London, edited by Mr. George R. Sims, includes special articles entitled 'Football London,' by Henry Leach; 'Table Land in London,' by J. C. Woollan; 'Gardening London,' by Walter P. Wright; 'A Coroner's Inquest in London,' by A. Braxton Hicks and C. Duncan Lucas; 'Round London's Big Markets,' by Arthur Rutland. Each is accompanied with several photographic and other illustrations.

Temple Bar for March contains some extracts from the 'Poetry of a Scottish Pedlar' (James Macfarlan), with a brief account of the poet, by Mr. Thomas Bayne. The complete stories in the number are 'In Silence,' by Mr. John Oxenham; 'Brown Eyes,' by Miss Craigie Halkett; 'Bullwhack Joe,' by Mr. R. B. Townshend; and 'A Lack of Appreciation,' by Mr. Edward Shaw. Commander Shore contributes a paper entitled 'Napoleon and the Handy Man,' in which we are reminded of Napoleon's reluctant tribute to the excellence of the British sailor; Miss Dora M. Jones give a résumé of the 'Life and Work of Pasteur'; and 'Tycho Brahe,' the sixteenth-century astronomer, receives a seasonable tribute. The serials by Miss Broughton and Miss Simpson are continued.

Messrs. Bell will publish next week a new edition of Webster's 'International Dictionary,' revised throughout, with a new supplement of 25,000 words and phrases. The supplement, which fills 238 pages, constitutes practically a dictionary of new words which have come into use since the 'International' was published in 1890, and probably renders 'Webster' the most up-to-date dictionary in the market.

'The Victors' is the title of Mr. Robert Barr's new novel which Messrs. Methuen will issue immediately. It is a story of political life in America, and recounts the history of a political boss. The recent overthrow of Tammany will give this book a particular interest, and another interest is added in that the climax of the book is closely connected with Christian Science, which seems the topic of the day. Mrs. Eddy's disciples provide favourable material for social satire, as well as for more serious treatment.

Messrs. Crosby Lockwood & Son will publish early in March a comprehensive work on 'The Deep-Level Mines of the Rand and their Future Development, considered from the commercial point of view,' by Mr. G. A. Denny, of Johannesburg, consulting engineer to the General Mining and Finance Corporation, Limited, of London and Johannesburg, in which the author deals with the past records and present position of the deep-level mines of the Witwatersrand district of the Transvaal, and discusses both their immediate and their future prospects—in the light, on the one hand, of the probable course of development in exploiting the deep-level reefs, and, on the other, of the changes in conditions of working, and the economies in working the mines, which one may expect to see effected within the next five years. Among the illustrative diagrams given in the work are numerous sections of gold-bearing reefs, demonstrating various fallacies to be guarded against in framing a valuation of the productiveness and estimated money returns of a particular mine.

Mr. Homer Folks, in his volume on the 'Care of Destitute, Neglected, and Delinquent Children,' published by the Macmillan Company, reviews the various attempts, public and private, to cope with the problems suggested which have been made in America during the past century, and discusses the present tendencies and the institutions now existing. They include many interesting experiments; for instance, a 'junior republic,' in which the children are organised into a miniature community, with a special currency, a system of payment for services, and a charge for living expenses. 'Probation work' for delinquents is also adopted in varying forms.

Max Adeler, author of 'Out of the Hurly Burly,' 'Elbow Room,' &c., has written a story for the March number of the Leisure Hour, entitled 'The Persecution of John P. Tadcaster.'

The next number of Messrs. Methuen's Sixpenny Library is Mr. Robert Barr's 'The Mutable Many.' This story will be of particular interest at the present time when so much is being written and said about the crisis in British history. It is practically the story of a great strike.

Professor Huddleston has written a work under the title of 'Lessons from Greek Pottery,' in which, after a general survey of Greek vase-painting, he elaborates the facts which can be gathered from the figures as to such details of Greek life as furniture and utensils, pursuits of women and men, burial customs, &c.; and then connects his subject with literature by showing the scenes from epic poetry which are depicted on surviving vases. The work is fully equipped with illustrations, and is well adapted to the interests of the ordinary reader.

The Empire Review for March contains a timely and important article on 'Remounts,' written by Colonel St. Quintin, late Director of Remounts for the Imperial Yeomanry.

The Toronto Globe, in its issue of Feb. 8, reprinted the suggestion in our last Educational Number respecting 'Rifle teaching in schools.' Other papers have also done so, and we are glad to say many headmasters have expressed their warm approval of it.

Messrs. W. Thacker & Co. have nearly ready a 'Practical Companion' to the Indian Merchandise Marks Act, with copious explanatory notes, examples, and Government rules, notifications, and circulars, &c., by A. M. Jagtiani.

The late Dr. A. B. Davidson was engaged upon the editorial work of Isaiah for Messrs. Dent's 'Temple Bible' at the time of his death. He had corrected the proofs and revises of his Introduction and the proofs of the Notes, but these had not been finally revised. 'The Synchronism of Ancient History,' with which he was good enough to assist the general editor, was only completed on the evening before his death. The volume is to appear immediately.

Messrs. Methuen have just added another volume to their series 'The Churchman's Bible,' viz. 'The Epistle of St. Paul to the Ephesians,' edited by Mr. G. H. Whitaker, Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Truro.

'Thoughts and Counsels of Many Years' consists of extracts in prose and verse from the published and unpublished writings of Archbishop Alexander, the venerable Primate of All Ireland, who has himself contributed a short preface to Mr. Burn's selection. The book deals with a great variety of subjects, and is adapted for reading at weekly services in church, as well as for private meditation at home.

Messrs. R. A. Everett & Co., Essex Street, Strand, will publish this month 'Broadland Sport,' written and illustrated by Nicholas Everitt, author of 'Shots from a Lawyer's Gun.' The work will be illustrated by a series of upwards of 100 reproductions, in line and half-tone, of original drawings by the author, including numerous unique photographs. Judging from the prospectus, we should say this will be a very interesting work. There will be a very limited édition de luxe, of which half is already sold to America.

Messrs. Methuen are about to issue 'The Land of the Lost,' by William Satchell. It is a story of New Zealand gum-diggers, and should prove of great interest.

Mr. E. Seale, Imperial Arcade, Ludgate Circus, will publish in a few days a useful book for horsebreeders, entitled 'A Stallion Service Record,' by J. Stockwell. Each book is arranged for the stallion and forty mares.

'The edition used by Shakespeare' is an attraction claimed by Mr. F. Fehrenbach, of 50 Division Street, Sheffield, for a copy of the first edition of Holinshed's 'Chronicles of England, Scotland, and Ireland,' black letter, profusely illustrated, 1577.

All interested in book plates—Early English, Jacobean, &c.—should get Mr. Wm. Downing's price list, published at The Chaucer's Head Library, Birmingham.

The next volume of Messrs. Methuen's 'Little Guides' is 'Norfolk,' which Mr. W. A. Dutt has written, and Mr. B. C. Boulter has illustrated. It contains an elaborate map.

SALE JOTTINGS.

Messrs. Hodgson & Co. included in their sale last week:—Reeve and Sowerby's 'Conchologia Iconica,' 20 vols.—£80 (Sotheran); Curtis's 'British Entomology,' 16 vols. in 8—£13 (Bain); 'Quarterly Journal of Microscopical Science,' 1861-97—£42. 5s. (Bumpus); South Kensington Museum Catalogues, 7 vols.—£12; also an interesting autograph letter from Charles Lamb, in which he speaks of himself as 'the old gentleman in black (not the devil),' which realised £10. 5s. (Denham).

PROPOSED BRITISH AND IRISH BOOKSELLERS' BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.

How frequently do we hear of the death of some member of our trade and the sad circumstances of his dependents. The usual pathetic appeal is made through the trade journals and help is given. In a great many cases the appeal never reaches the trade press, and the subscription list, usually on behalf of some poorer brother who has passed away or is laid by in sore distress, is passed from hand to hand; and I think the time has come when the more fortunate of our trade should very carefully consider the matter.

The employees of the book trade have no Benevolent Society, with the exception of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, which is limited in its useful work to a 10-mile radius from the G.P.O., London; and even in this limited sphere that Society has to a great extent, perhaps undeservedly, failed to gain the confidence and support of the younger men.

I believe that a trade Benevolent Society for the whole country—managed by elected representatives of the members, and conducted in accordance with the best actuarial advice—would be a real boon to many of our brethren, and I believe that if such a Society existed it would meet with hearty support. For this reason may I crave your kind favour in bringing before the trade this question which affects one and all of us?

The past ten years have seen many changes in our trade. It has risen from disorganisation to organisation, and we hope the next ten years will see still greater advancement in the same direction. The publishers have their Association, the booksellers in various parts of the country have their Societies, and in some towns there are Associations for Assistants. These various trade protection bodies are growing in strength year by year to the mutual benefit of all.

I beg respectfully to appeal to these various Associations to consider the question of a general Benevolent Society. Could not a committee (consisting of, say, a representative from each) meet and discuss the question?

Then a canvass could be made throughout the trade to learn the actual support which would be forthcoming. Who better could do this than the excellent body of publishers' representatives? They cover the whole ground, and I feel sure they would find many willing to help us to start a Society.

You, Mr. Editor, have been continually preaching the advantage of making provision against hard times, and many letters have appeared in your columns on the need of a trade Benevolent Society, but there the matter has stopped. May I now take one step further and place before you a scheme of the proposed Society? It is planned on much the same lines as several successful societies in any other trades, and I bring it before the trade for consideration and amendment as experience will suggest.

I shall be glad to hear from any member of the trade, and if by your able influence you can get together a number of our brethren to act as a committee I will supply the same with a suggested set of 'Rules' for their consideration.

I also give you particulars of several Benevolent Societies in other trades, an object lesson of what might and could exist in our own trade.

HENRY R. BRABROOK.

12 Battlefield Gardens, Langside, Glasgow.

[Mr. Brabrook's suggestions are referred to in our first article. His remarks respecting the Booksellers' Provident Institution are not quite correct.—Ed.]

WOMEN WHO WRITE 'DARING' BOOKS.

Mr. Andrew Lang, in Longman's Magazine for March, has some interesting remarks on a class of books which some women writers are responsible for. We shall have done good service if we can bring home to them the fact that there are laws in force in this country against the publishing of books of a certain character, and because action has not been taken it does not follow that it may not be taken at any moment. As Mr. Lang says, some of these women writers are absolutely shameless in the lengths to which they go.

From 'At the Sign of the Ship,' in Longman's Magazine for March.

'An engaging writer in the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR asks why we "literally hunt to death" a poor devil who tries to earn a living by secretly selling "indecent literature," while "most of the leading literary journals" praise the lady authors of two novels which he names. I never heard of one of them: I have read bits of a chapter in the other. It was not a nice chapter: it was voluptuous, but boring. Now I conceive that what distinguishes this and similar works from the books which are "hunted down" is their dulness and their "moral purpose." To be sure the hunted-down books may be tedious also—I never saw them—but it is unlikely that they are tedious in seven hundred pages, or that they brandish a "moral purpose." The legal functionaries who watch over our morals probably cannot wade on to those daring passages which my brother critic reproves. They weary, and desist from the pursuit.

'It is women who write these "daring" books, and it is women who read them. A man cannot read them, unless he is a long-haired ass who babbles of art and letters in the press. When lovely woman stoops to this kind of thing, she "is neither to haud nor to bind," as my countrymen say. Our sex, to parody Mr. Thomas Jones, can never appreciate the grossness of the other, when the other—contrary to the nature of things—is gross. Mrs. Aphra Behn acquired quite a distinct and separate reputation for "daring virility" of phrase and idea, in an age which certainly was not prudish. When once the fair do take their bonnets off, they are not content with that, they throw them over the windmills, as the French say. Men do not like this kind of thing. It not only disgusts but bores them. It is a particular kind of woman, usually earnest and very stupid, who enjoys these excesses. Clever women, nice women, good women, loathe them perhaps even more than men do. But there must be a great many earnest stupid women, a great many morbidly curious women, who take a delight in works which Lady Mary Wortley Montagu characterises in a passage very frank, concerning naturalists and the oyster. Mr. Fielding and Mr. Tobias Smollett, though free spoken, would not have relished some fictions that are praised and popular. These authors, especially Mr. Smollett, had little of shrinking delicacy, but they had a sense of humour. The ladies who write the kind of stuff now in question have none at all, and that is one reason why they "dare" so greatly. They do not in the least guess how poor a figure they cut when they tell those stories; which, apart from their licentiousness, always have an element of absurdity. The worst that I ever saw was by a lady who clearly meant to "see" her sisterhood, and "go one better." She went it with a vengeance, and with a will. But, somehow, nobody took any notice of her and her abominable nonsense. Who can tell why it failed? It was really very curious and disgusting, and seemed to have all the qualities necessary to secure a certain kind of popularity. I cannot even hint at the plot, as I do not particularly address the earnest, the dull, and the prurient. To be sure it did not exceed 250,000 words, or seven hundred pages. That was, probably, the reason why so remarkably dull and loathsome a performance failed to be highly recommended by the cultivated critics, and warmly welcomed by the sort of ladies whose polished conversation might make a casuist, or Mr. Bob Sawyer, nervous and uncomfortable. Our sex, if all this goes on, must provide itself with fans to blush behind. We must leave the ladies before the coffee and cigarettes begin to circulate. But, to secure success, it is not enough for the youngest or oldest lady to be "daring" and "virile." Miss Austen really has been more successful, somehow, in the long run. Miss Austen, though far from immodest, had humour; humour which these audacious modern ladies never possess. For a mere temporary (though lucrative) vogue, audacity may do much, but only if united with an owl-like gravity. Nobody would prosecute the possessor of these qualities. Plain people may steal a horse, we all know, while pretty people must not even be aware that a nag is grazing on the other side of the hedge. As long as you are not lively, you may safely and successfully publish anything.'

A NEW TEST FOR PAPER.

The fibres used in paper-making are cotton, flax, hemp, wood celluloses, esparto, straw celluloses and mechanical wood-pulp. All of these bodies except cotton and hemp act on a photographic plate in the dark, although if bleached the action is lost by all of them. The ordinary first-class papers have no such photographic action. Of the London daily newspapers tested by W. J. Russell, the Standard, Daily Express, Daily Mail, and Pall Mall gave strong pictures, the Times and Globe faint ones, and the Telegraph, News, Graphic, and Leader none at all. Punch paper gave no picture. With books and periodicals the least expensive are usually the most active. Ordinary writing ink is inactive and opaque to these 'dark rays.' Printing ink is active, and when it loses its activity through age allows the rays to pass freely.—Ex.

A COPYRIGHT CASE.

NISI PRIUS COURT—BEFORE MR. JUSTICE BRUCE.
STEPHEN v. STRETTON.

This was an action in which J. T. Stephen, journalist, Leicester, sought to recover damages from Clement E. Stretton, civil engineer, Leicester, for infringement of the rights of co-authorship in the work, 'The History of the Midland Railway,' or, alternatively, to recover payment of £780. 5s. 3d. for professional assistance rendered in the compilation of that work.—Plaintiff conducted his own case, and defendant was represented by Mr. Stanger, K.C., and Mr. Walker (instructed by Messrs. Partridge & Co.).

The Judge, in summing up the evidence, said the main question was what were the terms on which the plaintiff was employed by the defendant. Plaintiff's case was that he was not employed as a literary assistant by the defendant, but that he was accepted as co-author. Defendant, on the other hand, contended that he merely employed the plaintiff as a literary assistant. Had they any corroboration of these versions by the parties? Plaintiff said he told the publishers that he was to be co-author, but Mr. Webster, Messrs. Methuen's manager, denied that plaintiff made any such statement at the interviews he had with him. Plaintiff also said he told the officials of the Midland Railway that he was to be joint author of the book, but Mr. Jeffery, who had been mentioned as one to whom he had made this statement, denied that plaintiff had said anything of the kind to him. It was for the jury to decide which version of the story they believed. If they decided that there was no understanding of co-authorship, then they should decide what remuneration plaintiff was entitled to as literary assistant. The learned counsel for the defendant had told them that in coming to a decision on that point they ought to take into consideration the two trips plaintiff had had at defendant's expense. £25 had been paid into court, and if they found that plaintiff was employed as literary assistant it was for them to decide whether that was sufficient remuneration. If they considered it was not, then it was for them to determine what sum should be paid the plaintiff.

The jury, after a brief deliberation, found that the plaintiff was not co-author of the book, but that he was employed by defendant as literary assistant, and they awarded him £100 for acting in that capacity.

His Lordship gave judgment accordingly, and on the question of costs decided that each party was entitled to costs in relation to those issues on which he had succeeded.—(From the Leicester Daily Post, in which a full report of the case will be found.)

TO AMEND THE AMERICAN COPYRIGHT LAW.

Senator Platt, of Connecticut, has introduced an amendment to the copyright law granting copyright for twelve months to books written in a foreign language and printed abroad, such authors to use this time in making arrangements to perfect their rights under existing law. The amendment was suggested by the Copyright League.—Publishers' Weekly.

BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

'THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE.' ENGLISH ADDRESSES OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS.

SIR,—In reply to a letter on page 208, allow me to point out that when an American publisher has an English address, that address is given in the Directory of English Publishers. See, in 'The English Catalogue' for 1901, Harper, pp. 238, 234; Putnam, pp. 238, 236; Lippincott, pp. 238, 235; Funk & Wagnalls, pp. 237, 234, &c.

Yours truly,
THE EDITOR OF 'THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE.'

P.S.—The present edition of the annual volume is not far from sold out. Should a second edition be required, I shall be glad to correct any omissions in the list if sent in at once.

'SHAKESPEARE IN ORAL TRADITION.'

SIR,—In an article with this title in the Nineteenth Century and After for February, Mr. Sidney Lee endeavours to prove from 'Oral Tradition' that Shakespeare wrote 'Shakespeare.' It is about all that Shakespeareans have to buttress up their case—'oral tradition.' This is some of Mr. Sidney Lee's 'oral tradition':—'To Shakespeare and his plays, in his lifetime, was invariably extended the fullest favour of the Court and its leading officers.' This dictum he extracts from the dedication of the First Folio. For this assertion there is not the shadow of foundation to be found in the prefatory matter. If there is, I shall be glad to know on what words he founds his statement, authority as he is on the First Folio. Then he says that among the statements made by the editors of the First Folio was, one to the effect 'that death deprived him (Shakespeare) of the opportunity he had long contemplated of preparing his literary work for the press.'

This is surely a new fact in Shakespearean history. Heminge and Condell say: 'It hath bene a thing, we confesse, worthe to have been wished, that the Author himselfe had liv'd to have set forth, and overseen his owne writings; But since it hath bin ordain'd otherwise, and he by death departed from that right,' &c. There is not the smallest evidence to support the statement that Shakespeare at any time contemplated the preparation of his literary work for the press. In fact, in his 'Life of Shakespeare,' Mr. Sidney Lee states that Shakespeare during his lifetime 'showed utter indifference to all questions touching the publication of his works,' even when they were stolen from him by piratical printers. The editors of the First Folio regret Shakespeare did not live to revise and prepare his notes for the press. He lived some years at Stratford doing nothing but lending money; but his editors do not say that he had any intention of saving to the reading world the immortal works which now pass under his name. May I ask Mr. Lee's authority for his statement in the Nineteenth Century? Next, as one of his 'contemporary allusions,' we are informed by Mr. Lee that a gentleman named Fuller described certain 'wit combats' between Shakespeare and Jonson at the Mermaid Tavern in Fleet Street. Now, as Fuller was three years old when Shakespeare left London for Stratford, and was only eight years old when Shakespeare died, the said Fuller must have commenced tavern frequenting at a very early age of his career. Of course there was no Act of Parliament in those days, as there is now, preventing the supply of drink to children under the age of fourteen! There certainly ought to have been.

Then we are told that Shakespeare wrote rapidly. He must have done it he wrote, at the command of Queen Elizabeth, 'The Merry Wives of Windsor' in the space of fourteen days. I would ask Mr. Sidney Lee, if he believes this, to look at the five signatures—the only remnants of Shakespeare's 'unblotted lines' that are extant—and inform me if it is possible.

It is on the strength of such 'facts' as these that Shakespearean biographers and critics think themselves entitled to dogmatise and abuse those who are not convinced by what they have the courage to believe. It seems to be with them a case of 'faith without reason.'

CIPHERS AND BACON v. SHAKESPEARE.

SIR,—In the desire to save space it is evident from the editorial note to my letter in your last issue that I was too brief to make my meaning clear. An example will best illustrate. Let (1) an example, written out at random, be the true cipher that the inventor intends to be buried in the printing. Out of the dozen sorts of errors that could occur in the execution of his intention, let us take that of the omission of an occasional letter in the particular method—not a cipher-letter, but an ordinary letter composing the cipher. Examples of the very different results produced are given in (2) and (3), the omission in (2) being the letter of (1) printed in lower-case roman, and in (3) the additional letter in small capitals:—

- (1) abbab | asbba | bbaab | baabb | aaabb | abbbba | aabab (&c.)
(2) ababa | abbab | baabb | aabba | aabba | bbbba | ababa (&c.)
(3) ababa | bbaab | aabba | abbaa | abbab | bbaaa | babab (&c.)

Now my contention is this:—In a book printed after the author's death it would be impossible for it to contain a secret cipher of the above kind. In the multiplicity of mistakes (undetectable to any but the author himself) that would be bound to occur the cipher would be destroyed, and the meaning of the author rendered absolutely undecipherable. The context would not show the errors. In the millions of different combinations necessary to be produced for discovery, they would be undiscoverable. Besides, the decipherer would have no clue to the kind of mistake committed, or indeed that any mistake had been made at all. Nothing less than absolute accuracy, unattainable except under the author's personal supervision, would be sufficient to produce the cipher.

ADVERTISEMENTS AND REVIEWS.

DEAR SIR,—I thought so! My statements, which you characterised as 'much too sweeping,' were not so after all, for here comes another correspondent with twenty-five years' experience who says it is true. 'Not proven,' I hear you say. Yes, that may be, in so far as your own journal is concerned; but what of the others—the dailies, the weeklies, and monthlies? What have you now to say about the 'journals' whose literary opinions are worth anything, and whose advertisement columns you assert have no influence whatever on the editorial side of the paper?

Yours truly,
A LONDON PUBLISHER.

[Since our correspondents 'name no names,' how can we estimate whether the opinions of the papers they refer to are worth anything or not?—ED.]

UNIFORMITY OF SPELLING AND PRINTING.

SIR,—If Mr. Robinson had only read my article in the Author before writing about it, he would have found, not only that I do not propose to determine 'once and for ever correct spelling and the use of italics,' but that I especially disclaim it in the following words:—'I use the term basis, for, like everything in this world, evolution would take place in it, leading in subsequent years to developments and improvements which at the present time cannot be foreseen.'

Mr. Robinson then proceeds to ask why I 'decide' certain matters. On reading my article—which would really be less trouble than writing about it—he will see that I purposely 'decide' nothing. I have merely quoted from Mr. Horace Hart's 'Rules for Compositors and Readers,' which of course everyone knows would not agree with Webster's Dictionary as it now stands.

As the great majority of manuscripts sent to the printer are sent without any special instructions from the author as to orthography, the spelling of such a word as 'judgment' in the printed book merely indicates 'the custom of the house' where it is printed in reference to this particular word.

Your humble servant,
F. HOWARD COLLINS.

Iddesleigh, Torquay.

'DON'T WORRY!'

SIR,—I notice in your current number an article headed 'Don't Worry.' The advice is excellent, but is not so easily followed. Who would worry if he knew how to avoid doing so? Some men have actual and very real worries. Others there are whose nature it is to worry, and who, though in the most comfortable circumstances, will invent worries unto themselves. The man whose worries are most real is the most serious case, for it is in the time of difficulty that a clear head and unclouded brain are most necessary. This then is the time of all others when a man should not worry, if he wish to steer clear of his troubles.

My cousin, the late Mr. Andrew Tuer, once remarked to me that the man who walked regularly at least three miles a day would take a different view of life. There is no doubt that regular exercise and plenty of sleep are the best panacea in the world for worries, whether imagined or real, and I would strongly recommend the man whose life is a burden to him through worry to try it for a month.

Your obedient servant,
W. L. NEWCOMBE.

The Leadenhall Press, Ltd.

[No doubt there is much truth in what Mr. Newcombe says, but there is also no doubt that English-speaking people worry far more than the French or Italians.—ED.]

PARTICULARS OF FORTHCOMING BOOK WANTED.

SIR,—As a London sporting journalist I have been unable to trace the publisher's name and price of Mr. J. F. Mainwaring Sharp's Stud-Book and Racing Record, 1700-1900, 2 vols., in press (to appear shortly). If you can give me the above information I shall be extremely obliged. I have sent a notice to New York of the work, which is for subscribers only.

Yours truly,

'A SERVANT OF THE SHELLEYS.'

SIR,—As the writer of the article in the Melbourne Book Lover, quoted under the above heading in your issue of November 23, 1901, is seriously misinformed as to facts relating to the subject, I will, with your permission, state those which have come within my own personal knowledge.

When in the early fifties of the last century the late Mr. Pond had emerged from the well-appointed cellar beneath a public-house in Bourke Street, Melbourne, in the occupation of which he first became well known and esteemed as a restaurateur by the Melbourne public, he took the late Mr. Spiers as a moneyed partner, and opened the handsome establishment near the Theatre Royal in the same street, known as 'The Café,' where Mrs. Braun, née Henry (she had married a German named Braun), the servant alluded to by the writer of the Melbourne Book Lover, obtained employment as caretaker of the table-linen &c. After leaving this occupation she earned a living as a sempstress, and was employed in this capacity by my wife at brief intervals for a number of years. Mrs. Braun was very proud and fond of referring to that portion of her life passed in the service of the second Mrs. Shelley, née Wollstonecraft, the daughter of Godwin and author of 'Frankenstein' and some volumes of Continental travel, where on the title-page of one I have seen her name, written, as she stated, by her late mistress, and in which she is alluded to as 'my travelling companion.' She entered Mrs. Shelley's service in 1836 or 1837, when she was a girl of about sixteen. She never saw the poet nor his first wife, and it is noticeable that she stated her mistress, although often in familiar conversation with her, never mentioned his name in her hearing, nor in any way alluded to him; whatever she knew relating to the poet or his first wife she stated was gained from an old servant of the Baronet, Sir Peter, Percy Bysshe Shelley's father. She understood that the Baronet allowed her mistress £800 per annum—£400 for her private income, and £400 for the bringing-up and education of her son, the heir to the baronetage.

Her mistress bequeathed to her an annuity of £30, which she afterwards sold to Sir Percy, and she used often to complain, justly or unjustly, that he paid her a very inadequate sum for it. Sir Percy, as I am informed, died without leaving male issue, consequently the baronetage became extinct.

From the above it will be patent that the lamentations of the writer of the Melbourne Book Lover were uncalled for.

I remain, Sir,
Yours faithfully,
PAKEHA (C. BEEBY).

Lake Wakatipu,
Otago, New Zealand.

OBITUARY.

MR. JOHN MOLYNEAUX.

Mr. John Molyneux, manager of the Religious Tract and Book Society of Scotland, died in Edinburgh on the 20th ult. from an acute attack of pneumonia. Born in County Antrim, he received his business training in the depôt of the Bible and Colportage Society, Belfast. He succeeded so well in his position there that it was not long before he was promoted to the management of the Society's branch in London-derry. While there he won the respect and good opinion of all, and conducted the affairs of the branch in a most successful manner. About twenty-one years ago he came to Edinburgh to take up the position of trade manager in the Religious Tract and Book Society of Scotland, a position which he has filled with marked 24th ult., and was attended by a very large gathering, which included the Rev. Dr. Whyte, the Rev. Hugh Black, Sir Archibald Campbell, Professor Simpson, ex-Professor Wood, Mr. Frowde, of the Oxford University Press, and most of the leading members of the book trade in Edinburgh, as well as many representatives from a distance, and testified to the high esteem in which he was held.

Dr. EMIL HOLUB.

Dr. Emil Holub died February 21 at the age of fifty-four years. Dr. Holub was engaged in the exploration of Africa south of the Zambesi from 1872 to 1887, and he was the author of several works on the subject, including 'The Colonisation of South Africa,' 'From Capetown to the Zambesi,' and 'Seven Years in South Africa,' published in two volumes by Sampson Low & Co. in 1881. He had recently received a pension from the Emperor Francis Joseph.—Morning Post.

THE UNIT LIBRARY.

After considerable preliminary announcement the issues of the Unit Library are now appearing at weekly intervals in three bindings, viz. in paper, cloth, and leather.

These reprints are published and sold in accordance with a system new to the English book-trade. 'The retail purchaser,' we are informed, 'pays for each printed page a fixed pro rata price. Each set of 25 pages is sold for $\frac{1}{2}d.$, and this number of pages is the unit of measure. It is this idea which the general title of the series is intended to emphasise. The price of the whole book is found by multiplying the number of units of 25 pages by $\frac{1}{2}d.$ This gives the purchaser the price of the printed sheets without the cover. If a paper cover is desired $1d.$ must be added to the price of the sheets, for a cloth binding $5d.$ must be added, and for a leather binding $1s. 2d.$ must be added. These prices are regulated by the cost of the actual materials and workmanship which go towards the making of the book.

'The books are composed in a bourgeois type, and printed on a white, light, opaque paper made of Esparto grass. The size is $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $6\frac{3}{4}$ in., convenient for both pocket and shelf. Cowhide is being used in the leather binding for the first time in England. [Query?—Ed.P.C.]

'The terms are unusually liberal. The volumes of the Unit Library will be sent to all booksellers and newsagents on sale or return.'

THE LATE MR. MOLYNEAUX AND HIS FRIENDS

Our picture, which will interest a great many of our readers, was taken during a trip in the North of Ireland which Mr. Molyneux had organised, and in which some members and other friends took part.

ability ever since. During his management the business of the Society largely increased, and new premises were built in George Street, the retail book saloon being one of the handsomest in the kingdom. Mr. Molyneux was an elder in St. George's United Free Church, and was convener of the seat-letting committee. This gave him a great amount of labour, but he discharged the difficult duties of the office to the satisfaction of everyone. He leaves a widow (the second daughter of the late Mr. Robert Anderson, of Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier) and a young family of two daughters and a son. Mr. Molyneux was in his forty-eighth year. Dr. Alexander Whyte, at the morning service on Sunday last, made a feeling reference to the loss which both he and the congregation had sustained by the death of Mr. Molyneux. The funeral took place on the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The bills were brought to protect a copyright on a part of 'The Minister's Wooing,' by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, and on 'The Professor at the Breakfast Table,' by Oliver Wendell Holmes. The Court of Appeals agrees with the lower court that sufficient notice of the copy-rights was not given.—Publishers' Weekly.

THE PROBLEM OF THE BACON-SHAKESPEARE PLAYS. By GEORGE COX BOMPAS. (London: Sampson Low & Co.)

A BACONIAN SUMMARY. By EDWARD HARDING, with Preface by Mrs. HENRY POTT. (London: Robert Banks & Son.)

[These notices have been written at our invitation by fair-minded Baconians. We think the subject is not only interesting but instructive, and cannot but do good if it does no more than make people study Bacon and Shakespeare.—Ed. P.C.]

Public discussion on Bacon and Shakespeare has been most abundant during the last few months, but Mrs. Gallup's Cipher, its methods and results, have rather shunted the primary question of authorship. Consequently, discussion has turned on trifling and unimportant side issues, while those of great and lasting interest are neglected. Doubtless the entire result will be to bring the whole question to the front; the cipher will be dismissed as unproved and perhaps impossible, while the main question will remain, and the arguments and facts to which it appeals will be more impartially considered. The two little books now before us discuss the question on its merits, and both in a very able and reasonable way. The leading lines of argument must be the same in all these discussions. Mr. Harding's book gives a good summary of them, but he rather damages his case by a little cipher-dallying at the end—of a slight and unimportant character, but such as most sound Baconians refuse to countenance.

Mr. Bompas's small book is of a very much more important character; it is, taken as a brief summary, by far the ablest and most conclusive that has ever been written. It is a wise and weighty volume, a book of short paragraphs, every one of which contains either a fact or an argument. The historical evidences for Bacon's authorship are grouped and presented in a masterly way, and very many of them have never been produced before. The collective force of them, taken as a whole, will to most unbiassed readers seem absolutely irresistible; it approaches far more nearly to historic demonstration than anything that has yet appeared, and brings the Shakespeare plays and poems en rapport with the events and historic environments of Bacon's life so clearly and forcibly that it is not easy to resist his conclusions. Mr. Bompas brings a number of new facts to support his thesis, and adds many corroborating facts to those already adduced. He shows, for instance, that not only did Bacon himself speak of himself as a 'concealed poet,' but many of his contemporaries did also, and his poetical reputation was of a character that his avowed compositions do not explain. The composition of the Shakespeare plays, it is almost demonstrated, began before William Shakespeare left Stratford, or when he was still holding horses outside the theatres. All these and many other considerations Mr. Bompas supports by clear citation of authorities, and thus disproves the Stratford claimant's authorship by evidences not easily gainsaid. And all this mass of evidence, concisely and plainly put, is given in a calm judicial style which must make the case respected whether it is accepted or not. Not a word of vituperation, not a note of intolerance, no hint of resentment of the measureless invective against the Baconians and their arguments which has been so freely hurled at them by their critics, is to be found in this volume. In the face of such an argument as that presented by Mr. Bompas, the assertion that 'ignorance, vanity, inability to test evidence, and lack of scholarly habits of mind,' are the invariable characteristics of Baconians—an assertion made and often repeated by Mr. Sidney Lee—seems a shocking outrage on decency of debate and common sense. The exact reverse of all these attributes is found in every page of Mr. Bompas's book, and it is really time that fair-minded critics of all persuasions should resent and rebuke the 'ignorance, vanity, and inability to test evidence' which these Shakespeare apologists themselves so conspicuously show. Whatever resistance may be made to the Baconian theory, the courtesies of debate ought to be always observed, and such books as those recently published by Mr. Bompas, Mr. Harding, and Mr. Theobald are not to be set aside by supercilious and scornful treatment. Let the case be fairly tried, and equal justice meted out to both sides.

Mr. R. M. Theobald's 'Shakespeare Studies in Baconian Light,' recently published by Messrs. Sampson Low & Co., contains a thoughtful and scholarly comparison of the Shakespeare plays with Bacon's prose works which may give those who will study it much food for reflection. The comparison is not limited to the citation of isolated phrases and forms of expression, though the eleventh and twelfth chapters make a valuable and striking addition to the multitude of parallelisms already collected by different writers; but Mr. Theobald points out and develops the identity of the philosophy which underlies both series of works and the correspondence between Bacon's character and the thoughts and expressions of the characters created by the author of the plays.

One of the most interesting chapters contravenes effectively Tennyson's well-known criticism that the author of the 'Essay of Love' could not have written 'Romeo and Juliet.' Mr. Theobald proves, on the contrary, that the delineation of the passion of love in the plays anticipates and exactly corresponds with the philosophy of love as taught in the essays.

In public life, Love, according to the essay, 'checks with business, it troubleth men's fortunes, and maketh men that they can in no way be true to their own ends,' so 'great spirits and great business do keep out this weak passion.' Such men 'sever it wholly from their serious affairs and actions of life.' Coriolanus and Brutus, Hamlet and Hotspur, are examples of this philosophy. The 'perpetual hyperbole' of Love is shown by Troilus and Proteus and Florizel. 'Transported to the mad degree it does much mischief, sometimes like a syren, sometimes like a fury,' as in Mark Antony or Romeo or Othello.

Two other chapters, fourteenth and fifteenth, dwell on the classical knowledge evinced by the plays; not merely by allusion to classic authors, but by the construction of the sentences, and still more by the multitude of words derived from the Latin or used in a strictly classical sense. This usage agrees with Bacon's prose works, and is not one of the least difficulties which beset the attribution of the plays to William Shakespeare.

THE DICKENS OF A PRICE!

DICKENS AT NEARLY £27,000 A COPY.

George D. Sproul, the subscription book publisher of New York, is preparing an edition of the works of Charles Dickens at $130,000 a set. The edition, which is known as the 'St. Dunstan's Illuminated Dickens,' will be as complete as it will be notable as one of the most costly publications ever offered for sale. Fifteen sets of 130 volumes each will be printed, of which eight are for this country and seven for England. Six volumes are now in type, and the work will be completed in three years.—New York Publishers' Weekly.

MAXIM GORKI AND STAGE ADAPTERS OF HIS NOVELS.

Of all contemporary Russian novelists the most popular in Russia, after Count Leo Tolstoi, is Maxim Gorki. One result of this popularity is an ardent desire on the part of theatrical managers to produce his works on the stage, and several Russian theatres advertised so-called authorised adaptations of his 'Foma Gordjeff.' Whereupon the author announced in an open letter, which went the round of the press, that he had given permission for the dramatisation of his novel to one writer only, that he now bitterly regrets having committed that imprudence, and, furthermore, that he has forgotten the writer's name! Since this declaration every one of the adapters maintains that he is the sole authorised playwright. Considering the defective state of the Russian press laws, there seems little probability of the novelist being successful in the unequal combat with these literary pirates, who very likely share the opinion of the 'literary gentleman' in 'Nicholas Nickleby,' who said, 'When I dramatise a book that's fame for its author.' We shall await with interest the sequel of this affair in the Literarisches Echo, from the February part of which these particulars are taken.

THE PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

The agent for the Publishers' Association in Melbourne, Mr. A. G. Melville (of Messrs. Melville & Mullen), has succeeded in stopping the importation of American pirated editions of the Oxford Bible containing copyright matter. The Association's agents in our Colonies are doing excellent work in this way. We shall be glad to hear from booksellers in our Colonies who can give information about American and other pirated editions offered to them.

Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co.

Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co. will publish the following books during the Spring Season:—King and Consort, a popular account of the lives, public and domestic, of Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, fully illustrated; Queen Alexandra, the Nation's Pride, the life-story of the 'Sea King's Daughter,' by Mrs. C. N. Williamson, 8 illustrations; Cameos from Nature, by Lydia Gumersall, including 25 illustrations; Power for Witnessing, by A. F. Ballenger; Mosaics, a Thought for Every Day, by J. C. Wright. To their 'New Century Leaders' Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co. are adding the following new volumes: Dr. Barnardo, by Rev. J. H. Batt; F. B. Meyer, B.A., by Miss Jennie Street; J. Clifford, D.D., by C. T. Bateman. In addition to the above, Messrs. Partridge will include a new volume in their well-known 'World's Wonder' series, entitled The Conquest of the Air, a Romance of Aerial Navigation, by J. Alexander. To their 'Thrilling, but Pure' series, the following books are being added: The Home of his Fathers, by Lillias Campbell Davidson; A Great Patience, by L. Moberly.

Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons.

A Banquet Book, by Cuyler Reynolds. The first half is devoted to a conveniently arranged compendium of quotations, witty and serious, for the convenience of anyone who has been called upon to arrange a toast-list or prepare dinner cards, &c. This makes the volume of value as a hand-book, and for many occasions other than banquets. The latter half is devoted to a chapter on important dinner details, such as proper wines for the proper courses, and other facts concerning which a host is often doubtful and without a mentor to advise him. There is a chapter on the mixing of beverages (including cocktails), and the concluding pages are filled with toasts of all sorts—new and old, verse and prose, solemn and frivolous. The volume does not tread on the skirts of a cook-book, but avoids the vexing questions of menu—rightly supposing that he who uses its pages has left that problem to the caterer. The Social Evil, with special reference to Conditions existing in the City of New York: a Report prepared under the direction of the Committee of Fifteen. History of the Scotch-Irish Families in America: the Scot in North Britain, North Ireland, and North America, by Charles A. Hanna, 2 vols.; Famous New York Families, by Margherita A. Hamm; The Writings of James Madison, edited by Gaillard Hunt, to be completed in 7 vols.; Short Talks with Young Mothers on the Management of Infants and Young Children, by Charles G. Kerley, illustrated; The Life of John Anceum Winslow, Rear-Admiral United States Navy, Commander of the U.S. steamer Kearsarge in her action with the Confederate cruiser Alabama, by John M. Ellicott, Lieut. U.S.N., illustrated; Shakespeare's Plots, a Study in Dramatic Construction, by William H. Fleming, A.M.; Humorous Masterpieces from American Literature, edited by Edward T. Mason, 8 vols. in one. Students' Edition: Comparative Administrative Law, an Livingston, illustrated; The Home Life of the Wild Birds, a New Method of Bird Study and Photography, by Francis H. Herrick, illustrated with 150 photographs from life; The Doom of Dogma, and the Dawn of Truth, by Henry Frank; Heroes of the Nations Series: Edward I., or the Old Law and the New, by Edward Jenks, illustrated; Johnnie Courteau, and other Poems, by William Henry Drummond, M.D., illustrated by F. S. Coburn; One World at a Time, a Contribution to the Incentives of Life, by Rev. Thos. R. Slicer.

Mr. Grant Richards's

Announcements include:—Part X. of The Edinburgh Folio Shakespeare, edited by Mr. W. E. Henley, to be issued on March 12. Lord Granville Gordon has in the press a volume entitled Sporting Reminiscences. A new series entitled 'Music in the XIXth Century' series, the inaugural volume of which will shortly be published under the title of English Music in the XIXth Century, by J. A. Fuller Maitland. The aim of the book is to give in a brief space an account, as exhaustive as possible, of the progress of music and musical knowledge in the nineteenth century in England. Future volumes will deal with the development of music in other countries—Emile Zola's Thérèse Raquin has been translated by Mr. Edward Vizetelly (shortly). A new volume of the 'Dumpy Books for Children,' entitled The Adventures of Samuel and Selina, and the verses and coloured pictures are by Miss Jean C. Archer.

Messrs. Rivingtons

Expect to publish next week the following theological books: 'The Diaconate of Jesus, Ordination Addresses,' by the Rev. C. R. Davey Biggs, D.D., Vicar of St. Philip and St. James, Oxford; 'The Continental Reformation,' by the Rev. B. J. Kidd, B.D., of Keble College, Oxford; 'The Kingdom and the Empire, Ten Sermons for the Present Times,' by Richard Orme Assheton, M.A., formerly Rector of Bilton, co. Warwick.

Messrs. Seeley & Co.

Cornish, author of 'Life at the Zoo' &c., with many illustrations; New China and Old, Personal Recollections and Observations, by Archdeacon Moule, new edition, revised and enlarged, with many illustrations; On the Banks of the Ouse, Life in Olney in the Days of Cowper, a story by Emma Marshall, with 8 illustrations, new and cheaper edition; Up and Down the Pantiles, a story of Tunbridge Wells a Hundred Years Ago, by Emma Marshall, new edition, with 8 illustrations; Winifrede's Journal, a story of Exeter and Norwich in the Days of Bishop Hall, with 8 illustrations, new and cheaper edition.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.

Novels: Nora Lester, by Miss Anna Howarth, Author of 'Jan, an Afrikaner,' 'Sword and Assegai,' &c. (plot laid in South Africa, to do with the war) (shortly); Nicholas Holbrook, by Miss Olive Birrell, Author of 'Love in a Mist' &c. (Author, sister of Augustine Birrell, K.C.)

(March 26); My Lord Winchenden, by Graham Hope, the Author of 'A Cardinal and his Conscience,' a successful first novel of last spring (April 30). A New Trafalgar, by A. C. Curtis, is the title of a volume (not a novel) describing in an interesting manner the warfare of the future (April 15). Other works not ready to announce at present.

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.

The Barbarian Invasion of Italy, by Professor Pasquale Villari, illustrated and with 8 maps, 2 vols.; Sand-Buried Cities in Turkestan, by M. Aurel Stein, Principal of the Calcutta Madrasah, with upwards of 60 illustrations. The speculation as to what shall be 'when the sea gives up her dead' is old as human nature. It was reserved to these later days that the sands also should restore their secrets. The tale began in Egypt, then Layard took it up in Babylon, others uncovered Toztec and Aztec in Mexico, and now the scene is shifted to the very cradle of our race.—The Library of Literary History, each with photogravure frontispiece. New volume: A Literary History of Persia, from the Earliest Times down to the Mongol Invasion (XIII. Cent.), by Edward G. Browne, M.A., M.B., Fellow of Pembroke College, and Lecturer in Persian in the University of Cambridge. This work is intended to be not so much an account of Persian literature, in the narrower sense of the term, as a History of Persian thought and of the part played by the Persians in the sphere of religious, philosophical, and scientific speculation.—The Beginning of South African History, by Dr. G. M. Theal, author of 'South Africa,' 'Theal's Little History of South Africa,' &c., with maps and illustrations. The object of this volume is to set before us some account of our predecessors in South Africa.—Augustus, Life and Times of the Founder of the Roman Empire (B.C. 63—A.D. 14), by E. S. Shuckburgh, late Fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. In this study of the Founder of the Roman Empire the writer has endeavoured to arrive at an impartial estimate of the character and aims of Augustus, and of the problem with which he had to deal in the Roman world as he found it.—The Welsh People, their Origin, Language, and History, being Extracts from the Reports of the Royal Commission on Land in Wales and Monmouthshire, edited by John Rhys and David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P.; Labour Legislation, Labour Movements, and Labour Leaders, by George Howell, with frontispiece portrait. Conway and Coolidge's Climbers' Guides.—New volume: The Dolomites, by May Norman-Neruda. This volume describes ascents in the mountain ranges of the Eastern Tyrol, now universally known as the Dolomites.—A Lion's Whelp, by Amelia E. Barr; Mistress Barbara Cunliffe (The Combers), by Halliwell Sutcliffe; Blue Lilies, by Lucas Cleeve; The Strange Adventure of James Shervington, and other Stories, by Louis Becke; Breachley, Black Sheep, by Louis Becke; The Saving Child, by Mrs. Fraser; The Sons of Glory, being Studies of Master Intellectuals, by Adolfo Padovan, translated and adapted from the Italian by Janie, Duchess of Litta-Visconti-Arese; The Lake of Palms, by Romesh Dutt, C.I.E.; Captain John Brown of Harper's Ferry, by John Newton, fully illustrated. There are few to whom the lines are not familiar, but few are now aware that they came into being as the marching song made and used by the followers of 'John Brown of Harper's Ferry,' or of 'Ossawatimie,' after he had been executed.—Up from Slavery, the Autobiography of Booker T. Washington, new edition; The Long Arm, by Margaretta Byrde; The Deep of Deliverance, by F. Van Eeden; A Girl of the Multitude, by the author of 'The Letters of her Mother to Elizabeth'; Japan To-Day, by Alfred Stead, with an introduction by the Marquis Ito, fully illustrated. The rapid strides made by Japan as a world power call for some authoritative book dealing with that country in a comprehensive manner.—The Papal Monarchy: From Gregory the Great to Boniface VIII. (590-1303), by William Barry, D.D., author of 'The New Antigone' &c. Historians are now agreed that it is impossible to separate the great events which have made modern Europe what it is into purely secular and purely ecclesiastical. We cannot understand the Middle Ages if we overlook the Papacy.—Medieval Rome, 1073-1600, by William Miller; The Flute of Pan, a comedy in five acts, by John Oliver Hobbes; God's Scourge, a drama in four acts, by Moreton Hall. The Modern Chronicles of Froissart, told and pictured by F. C. Gould, with special cover design, decorated title, and 44 illustrations. This pleasing chronicle gives a quaintly humorous, but veracious account of political events from the days of Home Rule to the present time. It tells, among other things, of the vigil and renunciation of Sir Joseph de Birmingham, and what befel him thereafter. Also is seen how Sir Walter de Long did muzzle the dogs of distressful widows; and how the Lord de Kitchener did make a great boar hunt. The illustrations, it need not be said, are in perfect accord with the humour of the text.—Tales about Temperaments, by John Oliver Hobbes; The Welsh Library, edited by Owen M. Edwards, author of 'Wales,' Vols. 1-3, The Mabinogion; The Confessions of a Match-making Mother, by Lillias Campbell Davidson; The Grandmother's Advice to Elizabeth, by the author of 'The Letters of her Mother to Elizabeth.' The Summer Library. Vol. 1, Shacklett, the Evolution of a Statesman, by Walter Barr. This book is a study, partly of heredity and partly of contemporary American politics, the latter subject being one unfamiliar to the English novel-reading public.

John Brown's body lies a 'mould'ring in the grave
But his soul's marching on,

Mr. Philip Wellby.

Fiction: Ludus Amoris, a novel, by Benjamin Swift, author of 'Nancy Noon' &c.—This novel deals with London life as observed in the neighbourhood of Covent Garden, W.C., and country life on the Sussex Downs—ready on March 24; Godfrey Merivale, a Part of his Career, by H. B. Marriott Watson, author of 'Diogenes in London,' ready first week after Easter; Flaxius; or, Leaves from the Life of an Immortal, by Charles Godfrey Leland, author of 'The Breitmann Ballads.' Mr. C. G. Leland's forthcoming work, Flaxius; or, Leaves from the Life of an Immortal, ranges from prehistoric time unto the future of a millenium hence. Among its wild and humorous sketches, one which depicts Roosevelt as King of the Netherlands in the old Nibelungen times—with the Ritter Hans Breitmann as his poet laureate—will be found very interesting by all friends of the President of the United States of America as an enthusiastic defence of the latter in his treatment of the coloured man. Several new 'Breitmann Ballads' will be included in the work—ready first week in April. Psychology—Have You a Strong Will? by Charles Godfrey Leland, second and enlarged edition; The Gift of the Spirit, a Selection from the Essays of Prentice Mulford, second edition. Poetry—A Book of Mystery and Vision, by Arthur Edward Waite, author of 'Devil-Worship in France,' ready March 24.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Baillière, Tindall & Cox.—'The Imperial Health Manual,' edited by Antony Roche, M.R.C.P.I. &c. The first edition of this work was published nearly six years ago. It is a translation of the official manual of the Imperial Health Department of Germany, and the editor hopes it may 'do something towards teaching the public the rudiments of preventive medicine.' For this purpose it is admirably written in a popular style, and the illustrations do much to make clear the meaning of the author.

From Messrs. Bemrose & Sons, Limited.—'Memorials of Old Buckinghamshire,' edited by P. H. Ditchfield, M.A., F.S.A., with many illustrations. It is difficult in our limited space to do justice to this interesting volume and its twenty-one articles, by ten different contributors, including the Editor, himself so widely and favourably known as an archaeologist. In his preface he pays a just tribute of gratitude to his fellow labourers, one of whom, the Rev. Randolph Pigott, representing one of the oldest families of the county, has been called away from his earthly labours since writing his most interesting paper on 'Shakespeare in Bucks,' from which we cannot help quoting the following as some slight testimony in favour of William Shakespeare having written his own plays; even if Mrs. Gallup should venture to assert that Pigott means Bacon, who may still wish to refrain from laying claim to his own property. The late Rev. Mr. Pigott writes:—'Grendon Wood, now one of the most favourite coverts for foxes in the Bicester hunt, is said to be the spot represented in the woodland scenes in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The traveller in the train will notice even now how some of the fields are full of ant-hills, some of them rising two feet above the ground. On these mounds still grows the wild thyme, and they are probably the banks alluded to in the well-known lines in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," commencing, "I know a bank whereon the wild thyme grows." In the village of Grendon, about two miles from Calvert station, stands the old house, still called the "Shakespeare Farm," where tradition asserts he stayed several times and wrote "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Much ado about Nothing." In Shakespeare's time this house was "The Old Ship Inn." . . . Besides Aubrey's statement that Shakespeare took "the humours of the constable in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at Grendon in Bucks," there is the local tradition that has always connected Shakespeare with the old house near the church. This house, in Shakespeare's time, was the property of the Pigotts, and still continues in the same family. All this helps to prove the identity of the house. The tradition asserts that Dogberry and Vergas were the Grendon constables who arrested Shakespeare for sleeping in the parish church. He was charged with robbing the church, but on being arrested he asked that the chest should be opened, and finding nothing gone he said, "Much ado about Nothing." One of the constables must be Dogberry in "Much ado about Nothing," whom old Aubrey in error mentions as being connected with "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The house still contains the Elizabethan fireplaces, where we can picture Shakespeare sitting, and the narrow windows in the gable where he slept, overlooking the forest land, which his imagination peopled with Puck, Oberon, and Titania.' Among the most interesting articles is Lady Verney's 'Claydon House and the Verneys,' wherein we are told that Sir Ralph Verney was as much set against smoking as King James I.' 'I do not hire any servant that takes tobacco, for it not only stinks up my house, but is an ill example to the rest of my family.' He was especially anxious his son Mun should be 'no swearer and no tobaccoist' (sic). Mrs. Climensson's 'Medmenham Abbey,' with its account of the notorious Franciscan Order of the eighteenth (not last) century; 'St. James's Hand,' and 'Fawley' are also very delightful reading and the same may be said of the Editor's four papers, and indeed of all the rest. The twenty illustrations are worthy of the text.

From Messrs. Burns & Oates, Ltd.—'A Few First Principles of Religious Life, a Spiritual Instruction to Religious Men and Women,' by Fr. H. Reginald Buckler, O.P., author of 'A Good Practical Catholic.' This little work appears to be very earnestly written. The titles of its chapters will indicate its contents: I. Perfect Charity the End of the Religious Life; II. Means for Attaining the End of Perfect Charity; III. The Knowledge of Good and of Self; IV. Prayer and Mortification; V. The Vows; VI. The Rules; VII. The Works of Daily Life. It is published with the sanction of Cardinal Vaughan.

From the Christian Literature Co., Edinburgh.—'In His Presence: Verses on the Christian Life,' by William J. Govan. This is a new and enlarged edition of a volume of verses published by desire of several of the author's friends in November 1893. We are told in a prefatory note that the author died on September 21, 1901, and that the present edition contains twelve additional pieces. Among the sacred poems, numbering nearly eighty, contained in this handsomely printed volume there are many of great beauty, and some seem destined to find a permanent place in more than one collection of hymns.

From Librairie Armand Colin, Paris.—'Éléments d'une Psychologie politique du Peuple Américain,' par M. Emile Boutmy, Membre de l'Institut. M. Boutmy reminds his readers that in his work on the 'Development of the Constitution and Political Society in England' he showed that parliamentary government could only dawn and create its traditions by the industry and merits of an oligarchy of great families. Arrived in England at the plenitude of its type, borrowed from thence by almost all civilised nations, it only adapts itself with difficulty to the general and local conditions of democracy which everywhere levels social and political inequalities. Even in England, France, Italy, and Spain, according to the degree in which the aristocratic elements have been eliminated or disclassified, this system of government finds a difficulty in existing. It is, therefore, not astonishing that political thinkers turn to the sole country in the world where free government has been realised in a way and with forms completely purged from aristocratic elements. M. Boutmy divides his work into seven chapters: I. The Method. In this he deals exhaustively with the works of Mr. James Bryce and Alexis de Tocqueville, and, while praising the American commonwealth, finds much to approve in Democracy in America. II. Population and Society; III. The Nation and the Country; IV.-V. The State and the Government. VI. Religion and the Ideal. In this chapter he dwells with evolution in the Roman Catholic Church and on Mgr. Ireland. VII. Imperialism and the Constitution, in which the author deals with comparatively recent events. M. Boutmy, who has a vast and thorough knowledge of his subject, gives an admirable summary of the constitutional, political, administrative, and financial system of the United States. He ventures to predict of Imperialism that it will change nothing violently.

From 'Country Life,' 20 Tavistock Street, W.C. — 'Lilies from English Gardens: a Guide for Amateurs,' by Gertrude Jekyll. This book is compiled from information recently published in the Garden, with the addition of several original chapters. The illustrations form a considerable attraction of the volume. The intention is to supply amateurs with a short concise handbook that shall tell them the most important facts in regard to the cultivation of lilies. It does not concern, except from the general interest of the subject, the professional gardener or the botanist.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co. — 'In Memory of W. V.,' by William Canton. Many records of an interesting child nature are included in this volume. But we are afraid the book will warmly appeal to those who knew Winifred Vida personally, and not to the general public. No doubt, too, there may be some who have lost little ones of their own, and in the thoughts suggested by Mr. Canton's volume will find tender consolation. In addition to the recollections of Winifred which occupy about half the book, and embrace several of her early attempts at verse, there are a number of stories and poems closely identified in the author's mind with the deceased. Several portraits are also included.

From the same. — 'The Christian View of Human Life,' by J. Wilson Harper, D.D. The object of the author in this absorbingly interesting and ably written work is to ascertain what it is that Christianity teaches with regard to human life. Beginning with an examination of its teaching as to the value and development, the law, and the end of human life, he proceeds to consider man's relation to God and to his fellow-man. The whole subject is exhaustively dealt with in ten chapters; the first four of which treat of the value, development, rule, and end of human life; the next three treat of man's relation to God and man; and the three last discuss the economics of social life, the Christian view of the State and the Church in relation to social duties. From beginning to end this book displays extensive knowledge of the subjects dealt with and great ability in the handling of them. An instructive and helpful work.

From the same. — 'Kiartan the Iclander: a Tragedy,' by Newman Howard. If a little unequal in execution, Mr. Howard's work possesses sufficient interest of plot and poetic merit to hold the attention of the reader. It has considerable dramatic force, and the blank verse in which it is written often shows much beauty of expression. The following lines are taken from the 'Epi-logue':

Time's waves, that foam, and fall and mount again, Drown not that conquering voice. Its chords are sped

Like mighty music rolled from some far shrine,
Through secular isles, and cloisters serpentine,
Now ruined: but the stars burn overhead,
And in our souls the unfathomed splendours shine:

For life on loveliness is 'established:
Nor shall the triumph of that voice decline

Till in one diapason Man hath said:
'Brother, by your hand I was slain
Than did you die by mine.'

From Messrs. Digby, Long & Co. — 'The Calling of the Weir,' by Frederick Langbridge. Up to a certain point Mr. Langbridge is very interesting in this story of Irish life, but after the estrangement between the two lovers, Mary and Docwra, brought about by a reprobate brother, he seems to lose hold over his characters, and their actions become purposeless, and to some extent irrational. Once or twice we are led to suppose that Docwra is about to develop manly traits, but instead of this he weakly accepts everything Edgar tells him, and shows himself still more undeserving of sympathy by at once proposing to Mary's sister Hildegunde, who has ever treated him with the utmost coolness, almost amounting to contempt. This may be human nature, but, as shown in Mr. Langbridge's book, it is extremely weak human nature. The story, however, as a whole, is by no means devoid of attraction. If loosely constructed, it has the charm that belongs to a frank, unaffected style, and there are many touches of humour. The title of the book, it may be mentioned, is taken from an old Irish legend, which assigns the wild melancholy sound, almost like a woman 'keening' at a funeral, which at times is heard from above the weir of a river to be the cry of a drowned fisherman, who thus kindly, if unpleasantly, warns others from the fate that befell himself and his sweetheart.

From the same. — 'Fallen from Favour,' by Jean Middlemass. The incidents of this story are not particularly novel, but since there are many of them, and they impart vivacity and movement to the plot, the ordinary reader should find little cause for complaint. From the very first Irene Lambton's life is full of excitement. She is recalled from the school where she acts as junior teacher by the tidings of her mother's serious illness. Before dying Mrs. Lambton is only incoherently able to indicate that there is a secret and jewels in a certain casket. After her death the casket cannot be found. Irene vaguely suspects a mysterious gentleman whom she has met on the stairs of the lodging-house, and who is said to be the doctor's assistant; but he also disappears. Then she takes a situation as nursery governess to the little granddaughter of the Countess of Cranmore, and, of course, it is quite natural in this position that she should be treated as an intimate friend by Lady Yvonne, the Countess's daughter, and that Lord Temple, the Countess's son, should fall truly and honourably in love with her. Another gentleman also makes his appearance at the Cranmores' ancestral hall, and who should this be but the erstwhile doctor's assistant, who, it seems, is a man of position (but indifferent character) and possesses a secret regarding 'little Lambton's' birth. We are sorry our space will not admit of any further revelations of the heroine's experiences, but most readers, we fancy, will regard this as a very good beginning, and they may confidently be assured of even stranger developments to follow.

From the same. — 'Through Peril for a Wife,' by Mrs. L. T. Meade. Mrs. Meade's fruitful pen here supplies us with another sensational story in her usual well-known style, and we are driven to use the cliché that 'from the first page to the last it is full of interest.' Hester Molloy's love affair is the theme of the book; she loves and her love is reciprocated, but poverty is in the way of marriage. In the meantime an utterly disgusting man, Jabez Morgan, claims her hand, and Hester is obliged to consent to give it, as her father is in Jabez's debt and they are threatened with eviction from their home if £5,000 is not paid within six months. Jim Harlowe, the accepted lover, is only in receipt of an income of about £200 per annum, and it does not require extraordinary perception to see that this will go but a very little way towards paying the debt. However, Mrs. Meade is nothing if not courageous, so she sends him on an utterly absurd errand to the other end of the globe, and at the last minute of the eleventh hour he arrives in time to marry Hester. The story is good enough fare for those who can go the whole hog with their authoress; if they are not in complete sympathy with her, they will throw up the book in disgust.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co. — 'Saint John Chrysostom (344-407),' by Aimé Puech, translated by Mildred Partridge. The series of volumes known as 'The Saints,' to which this is an addition, has seldom received a more interesting, well-written contribution. The book is arranged in four parts, respectively treating of Chrysostom's youth—growth and development; his priesthood and preaching at Antioch; episcopate at Constantinople; and the period of his exile. In the concluding chapter it is pointed out that he was neither a politician nor a theologian. The subtleties of dialectics attracted him as little as the arts of politics. 'He was great by reason of his intelligence, but more great by reason of his large heartedness. . . . In the midst of the fourth century he was full of the purest apostolic spirit.' In these few words of general praise of the volume, mention should not be forgotten of the work of the translator, which has been very efficiently executed.

From Messrs. Funk & Wagnall's Company. — 'The Real Latin Quarter,' by F. Berkeley Smith, with illustrations by the author, introduction and frontispiece by F. Hopkinson Smith. This is a full, true and particular account of the Quartier Latin, written by an artist who knows it thoroughly, having paid it long and frequent visits; for, as that gifted artist and author, Mr. F. Hopkinson Smith, writes in his introduction: 'This writer in the Rue Falguière would come back year after year and study his subject and compile his impressions of the Quarter in the very atmosphere of the place itself.' The successful result of this method of work is at once evident in Mr. F. Berkeley Smith's lifelike sketches, both by pen and pencil. This delightful volume will charm all who have or have not visited Paris and the Latin Quarter, and more especially readers of 'Tribly,' on which masterpiece of the late George Du Maurier it seems in some sort an illustrated comment. The numerous illustrations are well reproduced, and Mr. F. Hopkinson Smith's pretty water-colour drawing 'In the Luxembourg Gardens' makes an effective frontispiece.

From Mr. John Grant, Edinburgh. — 'Poems and Ballants,' by J. Wilson M'Laren. The pathos, humour, and natural expression of these verses will warmly appeal to those acquainted with life across the Border. Thoroughly to understand the national characteristics of a people one must have associated with them closely. The author is evidently a lover of Burns, and seems to have caught something of his master's genial humour and gay spirit. Most of the 'poems and ballants' are written in the Scottish dialect of the East Coast, and exhibit genuine depth of feeling and insight into human nature. The volume was first issued in 1892, and went out of print immediately after publication. To the present edition a number of more recent pieces have been added.

From Mr. Philip Green. — 'A Minister of God: Selections from the occasional Sermons and Addresses of John Hamilton Thom,' edited with a Memoir by V. D. Davis, B.A. Of this book the editor modestly says in his preface that 'it is not for ministers of religion only, though very specially for them. Whoever has been touched by the wonderful power of the sermons in the two volumes of 'Laws of Life after the mind of Christ' must desire to know more of the author; and for the memoir included in this volume it may at least be said that it contains some passages of great autobiographical interest, while in the occasional sermons from which selections have been made the author also strikingly reveals himself.' This is quite true. We have read Mr. Green's memoir with great interest. Thom's father was a native of Lanarkshire, who crossed over to Ireland and became Presbyterian Minister at Newry. There J. H. Thom was born Jan. 10, 1808 received a good education at school in Newry and at Belfast Academical Institution, entered the ministry in 1829, and was called to the pulpit of old Toxteth Chapel near Liverpool, in 1831. Two years later he succeeded his friend John Hincks of Belfast at Renshaw Street Chapel, Liverpool, where he continued until forced by failing voice to retire in 1867. The rest of his life was passed in retirement, though never in idleness, and how fervent he was in spirit may be learnt from one and all of the sermons contained in this volume. Thom was a Unitarian, but the Christian spirit which animated him was conspicuously shown by his founding of the Liverpool Domestic Mission to the Poor in 1839; and the practical as well as charitable side of his character is displayed in his sermons headed 'Preventive Justice,' and 'Religion, the Church, and the People.' A book for people who take life in earnest.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—'The Church's One Foundation: Christ and Recent Criticisms,' by the Rev. W. Robertson Nicoll, M.A., LL.D. The contents of this little book have previously been published in the British Weekly, but in their present form have undergone considerable revision and have been added to. They display the author in what may be described as his best theological aspect, and are full of sound reasoning and earnest counsel.

From 'Home Words' Publishing Office.—'Near the Throne,' by Charles Bullock, B.D. Mr. Bullock's sketch of the life and work of Frances Ridley Havergal has passed into a new edition with several illustrations. It is tastefully got up with an attractive binding.

From Messrs. Jarrold & Sons.—'The Oddity: a Story of High School Life,' by Isabel Stuart Robson. The incidents of this tale are a little commonplace, but describe very fairly the experiences of the ordinary school girl in her acquisition of knowledge. If the events are natural enough, however, scarcely as much can be said for the language of the prominent actors, which at times seems strangely old-fashioned and elderly. We suspect that a teacher is the author, and that her vocation has caused her to forget much of the impulsive lightheartedness of young people. The moral tone of the story is excellent.

From Mr. William R. Jenkins (851 Sixth Avenue, New York).—'A Course of First Year Latin for Regents' Examinations and Introduction to the Reading of Caesar,' by W. W. Smith, B.A. Though this is a volume primarily intended for circulation in America, it has many good points that should render it acceptable in this country. The arrangement is excellent, and the book, generally speaking, has a directness of application that is very characteristic of our neighbours on the other side of the herring pond. We can safely say that no space is cut to waste in its pages.

From Mr. John Lane.—'Walt Whitman's Poetry: a Study and a Selection,' by Edmond Holmes. This little work revives the fierce controversy that raged round the poet's works many years ago, some holding him to be a great genius, others just as warmly contending that his verses were sheer nonsense. We do not know that Mr. Holmes adds anything particularly original to the subject; but his criticisms are always thoughtful, if at times a little egotistical. The selection of poems exhibits a thorough acquaintance with his subject.

From the same.—'Thomas Wolsey,' by Ethelred L. Taunton. Father Taunton proves by the publication of his book that there was still a good deal to be said about the famous legate and reformer of Henry VIII's reign. His monograph is a decidedly valuable addition to the study of the causes which led up to the Reformation, and he has a deep insight into the character of Wolsey. He gives a complete account of Wolsey's relationship to Henry VIII., and throws new light on the subject of the famous Divorce. The illustrations are particularly beautiful, several of them being reproductions of paintings by Holbein. There is a complete index.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—'Princess Puck,' by U. L. Silberrad. The story opens with a sympathetic account of the struggles of Miss Brownlow, of Langford House, Wrugglesby, a small town in the Eastern Counties, to keep her accounts, her four nieces, and her school in these days of competition from high schools for girls. Of the four nieces—Polly, Theresa, Bella, and Bill—the second had married six months previously Robert Morton, a small farmer, and Bill, the youngest niece and heroine of the story, goes to stay at his farm on a visit which is fraught with momentous consequences to herself and many other personages. Although her cousin Polly says she is ugly, silly, and without gumption, Bill, who is but seventeen, develops extraordinary energy, resourcefulness, and powers of work during her sojourn at Haylands, and displays coolness and tact when Robert comes home intoxicated from market after his wife has gone to bed, and also in her interviews with Harborough of Gurnett. Indeed, Bill is a strikingly original and fascinating character, quite a host in herself, and capable of making the book a success even without her cousins, who are all skilfully drawn. The rather complicated relations which Bill entertains with the three Harboroughs are cleverly managed. The story is full of movement and skilful delineations of scenes and characters, reminding one of Jane Austen. The title of the story itself, the heroine's repellent names, and the author's long withholding from the reader the surnames of Miss Brownlow's four nieces are the only drawbacks to what were else the unalloyed pleasure afforded by this delightful tale.

From Mr. John Macqueen.—'The Autobiography of a poacher,' edited by 'Caractacus.' Poachers have always been an interesting section of the community, and innumerable articles have been written descriptive of their doings. The present volume, however, is largely concerned with the life of a member of the fraternity as apart from the actual profession of his trade. It forms a singularly attractive study. Of the truth of the narrative we have little doubt, for there is a certain self-satisfied air about the author's confessions that testifies very strongly to his sincerity, making allowance for a considerable amount of exaggeration. As for being in any way ashamed of his idle, nondescript life, it is apparently foreign to his nature. He tells of his ups and downs, experiences in prison, exploits of poaching, servitude as a keeper and river watcher, with a candour that is positively refreshing. Of his moral delinquencies he seems to have no appreciation whatever. Truly he is simply a clever, uneducated scamp, but with a fascination of personality denied to far superior men. The book is full of information for those who would penetrate beyond the limitations of their own class, and will be found interesting by all who have an appreciation for original character. It need scarcely be said that it will be peculiarly acceptable to sportsmen.

From the same.—'The Diamond Necklace: being the True Story of Marie Antoinette and the Cardinal de Rohan,' from the new documents recently discovered in Paris, by Frantz Funck-Brentano. Authorised translation by H. Sutherland Edwards, with twelve full-page illustrations. About sixty-eight years have elapsed since there appeared in 'Fraser's Magazine,' Nos. 85 and 86, what the late Mr. Froude said was, in his opinion, 'the very finest illustration of Carlyle's literary power,' 'The Diamond Necklace.' That beautiful historical romance, for such it really is, since it belongs to what its writer himself terms 'the never-ending age of romance,' had been unaccountably refused by the editor of the 'Foreign Review.' Mr. Funck-Brentano's official position has enabled him to make use of recently discovered documents which throw a new light on this dark and discreditable case of fraud and forgery, and to lay before his readers the true story of a portentous incident in the history of France, which, as Goethe predicted, boded earthquakes, and, as Mirabeau said, was the prelude of the Revolution. There is very much extremely interesting matter in this book, wherein the Cardinal de Rohan and Cagliostro loom more largely than in Carlyle's masterpiece, whose principal character is Madame de Lamotte. The illustrations are a great acquisition to the true story, but the translation is far too literal, and does not bear comparison with Carlyle's trenchant and epigrammatic style.

From Messrs. Marshall Brothers.—'Between Life and Death: the Story of the C.E.Z.M.S. Medical Missions in India, China, and Ceylon,' by Irene H. Barnes. With illustrations by Percy R. Craft and J. D. Mackenzie. So much has been written and said on the subject of Christian Missions of late, especially since the Boxer rising in China in 1900, and such persistent attempts have been made in some quarters to make the missionaries responsible for the hostile attitude of the Chinese towards foreigners in general, that it is refreshing and invigorating to read a book like this before us. For if there be cause for complaint as to the methods adopted by some missionaries of divers creeds or nationalities, little doubt can remain in the mind of any unprejudiced and dispassionate reader of Miss Barnes' intensely interesting history and description of the Church of England Zenana Medical Missions that the methods adopted have been excellent and the results eminently satisfactory. As Miss Barnes says: 'It is time the apology for Medical Missions ceased, and that unfair criticism passed away. Yet there are those to-day who, unacquainted with such work except in theory, are ready to avow that the system is at least open to question. They represent the medical missionary as one who, by the bribe of healing, is slyly seeking to subvert his patient's faith in a religion "good enough" for him.' Let such cavillers read this book and see from what superstition, degradation, disease, and insanitation the medical missionaries are slowly but surely rescuing the natives of India, China, and Ceylon, and they will thank those self-denying men and women. The account of the Hakims, or priest doctors, and other native medical practitioners will be startling revelation to many readers, and touching and terrible are the stories of plague and famine in India. The book is beautifully illustrated and produced, and ought to be read by every Briton professing himself a Christian. The handsome volume of 300 pages costs only 3s. 6d. net.

From Messrs. Horace Marshall & Son.—'The Story of Burma,' by Ernest George Harmer. The author manages in this little book—one of the excellent volumes known as 'The Story of the Empire' series—to convey a very faithful impression of Burma, and to render his subject interesting within limited space. His work is an excellent example of the adroit compression of copious material. It has even been possible to include a useful index.

From Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd.—'Valour for Victoria,' by James A. Manson. This little book is an account of various deeds of daring that have won the Victoria Cross, and if for no other reason than that they are factually true, they will be interesting to those whose practical natures are tired of fiction. The opening chapter gives an account of how the first 'V.C.' was awarded, and is told with dramatic effect. Many illustrations by various artists adorn the volume.

From Det Nordiske Forlag, Copenhagen.—'Adressebog for den Nordiske Boghandel,' XVI Aargang, MDCDI. This directory of the Scandinavian book trade includes the book-selling and publishing firms of Denmark, Finland, Norway, and Sweden. This is the sixteenth yearly issue of the directory, which contains much information of interest and utility to the book and stationery trades. It is well printed and bound, and embellished with portraits of MM. Albert Bonnier, Jacob Dybwad, G. W. Edlund, and Ekblad.

From Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.—'A Crazy Angel,' by Annette L. Noble, with the collaboration of Grace Lathrop Collin. The curtain rises on a Kindergarten in the little town of Glenock recently formed, but complete in all its paraphernalia. As the exercises are about to begin, Mrs. Lyman Ward, one of the mothers, begs the assistant to wait for Professor Boyd, late Master of Glenock Academy, who had retired because his scholars all left him for a new up-to-date high school. His son Tom is at college, and is somewhat smitten by Elvira Allen, the Kindergarten assistant, whom the old Professor had adopted. When again about to strike a chord on the piano the young lady is once more stopped by Mrs. Ward, who announces that Lyman is coming upstairs, and that she wants him to see their daughter Katie. But Katie refuses to admit that Kindergarten wood blocks are anything else than blocks. Indeed, she is as realistic as Peter Bell. Miss Ingalls, the schoolmistress, is naturally annoyed at such strange wilfulness, and the children's mothers' laugh; whereat Katie weeps. But Lyman Ward comforts 'Papa's own girl,' who shall not be made to call the blocks anything else. Mrs. Ward reproves her husband for thinking his daughter an angel, while she herself fears the child is crazy. Lyman Ward is a man who has made his pile by speculating in wheat, and when the old professor dies he offers Tom, who at college had not come up to the old man's expectations, a place in his office, which the young man declines until he shall have regained his credit at college. Ward had told his mother when a boy that he meant to be rich, and then he would go to the home of the Norway spruce that grew in the front yard of the house where he was born. He has now built a grander house, but has spared the tree. Then, ten years after the opening of the story, the Wards go to Norway, taking with them their daughter Katie and Elvira Allen. Here the plot of the story really begins, and we can promise readers much enjoyment in following the footsteps of the genial American tourists and the rough course of the true loves of Katie Ward and Elvira Allen. The characters are capital without exception, but we can no more help falling in love with Huldah Clukey than could that good, absent-minded visionary, the New England minister, Mr. Howard. We have no means of knowing what share of praise is due to either of the ladies whose name appears on the title-page, but congratulate them on having presented the public with such a good story as does not often fall to the lot of jaded critics to light upon.

From MM. Schleicher Frères, Paris.—'La Vie Artistique de l'Humanité,' par Alphonse Roux, avec 52 figures dans le texte, dessins de A. Collombar. The author of this twenty-fifth volume of the series 'Les Livres d'Or de la Science,' defines Art as 'a perceptible interpretation of the lives of nations; it is as much one of the manifestations of their activity as politics or literature. . . . We shall not have an exact knowledge of our seventeenth century, for instance, if we do not add to the study of the political and literary events of the time the study of its artistic manifestations.' Which is to say that Art has not merely its own proper and personal interest, but that it also contributes to our general knowledge of the life of nations. This little book is not a history of Art, but is intended to make Art in general understood and appreciated, and to serve in some sort as an introduction to special studies of particular branches of Art. It is divided into four books. The first treats of Egyptian, Oriental, Grecian, and Roman Art; the second speaks of Ancient Art in the Middle Ages and of Gothic Art; the third treats of Moorish Art in Africa and Spain, and of Art in India, China, and Japan; and the fourth book deals with the Art of the Renaissance and with Art in Belgium, England, France, and Spain down to the end of the nineteenth century. The author augurs from the present condition of Art in France a favourable prognosis as to its future. His criticisms on English Art will be read with interest, but in some cases with dissent. A handy and useful treatise.

From Messrs. Skeffington & Son.—'Grace and Calling: Instructions in aid of those who, having been baptised, have need of furtherance in the way of Christ,' by H. W. Holden. The title of this work pretty well indicates the character of its contents. It consists of six addresses or sermons dealing with aspects of the religious life. The author lays stress on the fact that Christian living is the one and only absolute need of everyone—Christian doing and Christian obedience.

From Mr. Edward Stanford.—'Central and South America: Vol. II. Central America and West Indies,' by A. H. Keene, F.R.G.S., edited by Sir Clements Markham, K.C.B., F.R.S. This work forms part of the new issue of 'Stanford's Compendium of Geography and Travel.' It may be remembered that in the original scheme only one volume was devoted to Central America, the West Indies, and South America, but this is now replaced by two, each being somewhat larger than their predecessor. So many discoveries have been made, however, in regard to Central and South America within recent years that the additional space has been found no more than sufficient to embody the more important results of the scientific expeditions undertaken by Whymper, Conway, Fitzgerald, Crevaux, Rodway, Ehrenreich, Reiss, Stübel, Ball, Thompson, Hill, Stoll, Moreno, and other distinguished geographers, archaeologists, naturalists, and anthropologists. The volume now before us consists of twenty-one chapters, the first two being devoted to a general survey of the subject in its physical, biological, ethnical, and historical relations. Then follow six chapters on Mexico, in which the physical features, outlying provinces, and inhabitants are very fully dealt with. The remaining chapters treat respectively of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras and British Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, the West Indies, the American Antilles (Cuba and Puerto Rico), Hispaniola (San Domingo and Haiti), Jamaica, the Lesser Antilles, and the Guianas—the last-named being considered under the twofold aspect of the land and people and the political divisions of the country. Mr. Keane has prepared his work very thoroughly and with manifest mastery of the subject. The volume is well supplied with illustrations, including many excellent maps. It possesses the somewhat unusual attribute of being both interesting and instructive.

From Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell.—'Nellie: or, a Chequered Life,' by Ethel Chilvers. This story is stated to be founded on fact, and its incidents are not sufficiently surprising to cause us to doubt the statement. But their treatment shows a great want of experience; and though simplicity of style is a great gift when disguising a plot that has been carefully thought out, in the present instance it only shows up the crudeness of the situations. The book is of a strongly religious type.

From the same.—'Memorials of a Ministry,' by the Rev. B. Hackett. Mr. Hackett has a weakness for quotations, italics, and marks of exclamation; otherwise his sermons are not particularly remarkable. Though imbued with religious feeling and spirituality, he has nothing new to say, and his reiteration of commonplace thoughts becomes somewhat wearisome.

From Mr. Albert Sutton, Manchester.—'An Historical and Topographical Description of the Town and Parish of Bury,' by James Butterworth, with Memorial Introduction and Bibliography. This carefully compiled and interesting account of Bury in Lancashire was first published in 1829. Its author was the youngest of a family of eleven; his father, a hard working man, gave him as much schooling as he could afford, and the boy made good use of it. For, beginning life as a hand-loom weaver, and that industry failing on the introduction of machinery, he became a schoolmaster. But he had married at one-and-twenty, and soon had a family of ten children to support. He attempted authorship as a poet; but we are told that 'his poetical productions are not of much account, and it is by his antiquarian and genealogical labours that he will be best remembered.' The specimen before us certainly does poor James Butterworth great credit and deserved to be reprinted, all the more because it is doubtful if more than two copies of the original exist. The story of the struggles of James and Edwin Butterworth as here recorded is very touching.

From Mr. C. J. Thynne.—'Wayside Poems: a Book of Memorial and Occasional Verse,' by James Silvester, M.A., Rector of Nympsfield, Gloucester. A volume of pleasing poetical pieces written in diverse tones and varying moods, and which, although of somewhat unequal merit, are never doubtful in their tendency. For the author, as might be supposed from the sacred nature of his calling, takes a high and serious view of life, and yet is neither harsh nor severe, but rather are his verses cheering, consolatory, or compassionate.

From the same.—'The Rich Man and Lazarus,' by the late Brownlow North, B.A. Oxford. Fifth edition. It is unnecessary to insist on the value of the gifted divine's practical exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus, since it is evidenced by the fact of a fifth edition being demanded.

From the same.—'Trust in Trial: Lessons of Peace in the School of Affliction,' by the late Rev. W. O. Purton, M.A. New edition. A new and revised edition of a manual of short meditations on words from Holy Writ for the use of invalids. Each meditation is accompanied by a prayer and a hymn.

From Messrs. Frederick Warne & Co.—'Kitty's Victoria Cross,' by Robert Cromie. Kitty—or, more plainly speaking, Miss Kathleen O'Neill—lived with her mother, Mrs. O'Neill, an officer's widow, at Woodbine Cottage, Innisboffin, overlooking a semicircular strip of sand washed by the waves of the Atlantic. There is a visitor at the cottage, Captain Peterson, whose first commander had been Mrs. O'Neill's husband, and the Captain, having to arrange the billeting of a detachment of soldiers in the village in view of anticipated eviction disturbances, had fulfilled a long promised visit. A scene of flirtation opens the story. Then we are introduced to some amusing amphibious inhabitants of the village at the launching of a lifeboat, which is attended by some comical incidents. Captain Peterson brings his senior sub. to stay as his guest at the village hostelry. This sub., named Linton, is a very bright young fellow, who makes friends with everyone. He and Linton carry on desperate flirtations with Kitty and her Girton friend, Nannie Oakley, the rector's daughter. Another prominent character is Mr. Kendrick, the son of an American millionaire. We can promise the reader of Mr. Cromie's capital Irish story plenty of incident and adventure, including a dangerous boating excursion, an exciting steeplechase, a race ball, a terrible adventure which befalls Captain Peterson when belated on the moors on his return from shooting and its still more horrible sequel, and scenes of riot and battle in Ireland and India. Mr. Cromie's hand has certainly not lost its cunning, and his admirers will welcome this remarkably clever example of his skill in story telling.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co., Limited.—'Deacon and Actress,' by Archibald Claverling Gunter. We remember the days in our distant boyhood when Mr. Gunter's 'Mr. Barnes of New York' thrilled us through and through; unhappily, those days are now past, and we can find very little merit in his work. His style is really execrable, and his well-developed dramatic sense fails to redeem his work from mediocrity. His irritating use of the present tense is pushed to extremes: no sense of actuality or vividness can be obtained by the unlicensed use of this method. But perhaps we are criticising the book by too high a standard; there are, no doubt, people who will enjoy reading it, though, we are glad to say, we do not know them.

NEW EDITIONS.—Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co. have sent out a second edition, revised and enlarged, of 'India and Imperial Federation,' first published some twelve years ago. This includes an original article, and several letters and press comments that have appeared since the first edition was issued. It is an excellent work, throwing great light on the opposing arguments in an important question.—We have received from the Office of 'Knowledge,' 326 High Holborn, a copy of the second edition of Mr. G. W. Tunzelmann's popular treatise on 'Wireless Telegraphy,' which explains the mysteries of the subject to the uninitiated reader with admirable clearness, and is assisted thereto by many well-designed illustrations.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

ESTATE OF HERBERT ALFRED BURLEIGH, DECEASED.

SALE BY TENDER.

LOT 1.—The old-established and well-known Printing Business, recently carried on by the late Mr. Burleigh, at No. 53 Park Row, Bristol, together with the goodwill of the business and the whole of the valuable plant, machinery, and effects connected therewith. The tenancy of these premises expires on June 24, 1902, but the business can be transferred to the premises comprised in Lot 2.

The Stock-in-Trade shall be taken at valuation by the nominees of the vendors and the purchaser.

LOT 2.—The Leasehold Warehouses,
Factories, and Buildings, situate in Narrow Lewins Mead, Bristol, recently acquired by the late Mr. Burleigh, and now in thorough good order and condition.

These premises are held for the residue of a term of 14 years, from June 24, 1897, at £190 per annum rental.

Part is sublet to Messrs. Jameson, Pim & Co. at £60 per annum rental, for ten years, from June 24, 1901, determinable by either lessor or lessee at the end of the third, fifth, or seventh year of such term. Possession of the part unlet can be at once had.

LOT 3.—The Stock-in-Trade of a General
Stationery Business carried on by the late Mr.
Burleigh at No. 53 Baldwin Street, Bristol, together with the benefit of the lease of the said premises for three, five, or seven years, from March 25, 1899, at £65 per annum rental.

LOT 4.—The Machinery and Stock-in-Trade, together with the goodwill of the business, carried on by the late Mr. Burleigh, under the name of the 'Forbes Glassine Enamel Company,' at No. 44 Merchant Street, Bristol, which premises are held under a yearly tenancy at £48 per annum, and such tenancy can be continued.

All tenders for the whole or for either of the above Lots to be made under cover marked 'Tender re H. A. Burleigh,' and delivered at the offices of the vendors' solicitors (as below) by 3 o'clock on Tuesday, March 11, 1902, at which place and time they will be opened in the presence of those who may attend. The highest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted, and the vendors reserve to themselves the right to accept or decline a tender for any or either of the lots.

Inventories, conditions of sale, and forms of tender, with orders to view, may be inspected and obtained of

THE HYMNAL COMPANION

TO THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER

Edited by the Right Rev. Bishop E. H. BICKERSTETH, D.D. (late of Exeter)

NEW REVISED AND ENLARGED EDITION

The present Edition contains 600 Hymns, of which only 466 appeared in the last Edition—84 Hymns of that Edition which contained 560 having now been omitted, whilst 134 New Hymns have been added; and it is hoped that the loss of those omitted, some of which time has proved were rarely sung, will be far more than compensated by the gain of those introduced.

The new Musical Edition has been edited by CHARLES VINCENT, Mus.D. Oxon., Organist of Christ Church, Hampstead, and by D. J. WOOD, Mus.B. Oxon., Organist of Exeter Cathedral, with the counsel and assistance, throughout their laborious work, of Sir JOHN STAINER, M.A., Mus.D., Professor of Music in the University of Oxford.

Grants are made in special cases on the introduction of the 'Hymnal Companion' into poor parishes.

The following refers solely to the 1890 EDITION, which is quite distinct from the old book and cannot be used with it. The Original Editions are kept in print.

SOME PRESS OPINIONS

STANDARD.

'Lovers of lace—and their number is steadily on the increase—will welcome the richly illustrated "History of Lace" just published.'

DAILY TELEGRAPH.

'A volume of singular beauty and completeness, giving an exhaustive history of what is one of the daintiest and most exquisite products of industry.'

DAILY CHRONICLE.

'Probable the most exhaustive, complete, and efficient treatise on any one handicraft existing.'

DAILY NEWS.

'Still remains the standard treatise on the subject. . . . The "History" is a monument of various, minute learning. . . . We recommend this new edition to all who are interested in the progress of a beautiful art, and not least to the Technical Education Committees of County Councils.'

GLOBE.

'Always valuable, the "History" is now still more so, and should secure a fresh and long lease of life among the many who are interested in its subject.'

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.

'The book contains the most accurate account that has been written . . . and it ought justly to meet with the success and admiration it undoubtedly deserves.'

SCOTSMAN.

'The number, variety, and interest of the illustrations give the book unusual distinction and value. . . . Nothing has been left undone to keep the treatise worthy of its position.'

YORKSHIRE POST.

'The completeness of the work and the magnificent array of illustrations will enable Mrs. Palliser's "History" to hold its own still.'

THE CLASSICAL WORK ON LACE

MRS. PALLISER'S

HISTORY of LACE

REVISED AND ENLARGED

BY

M. JOURDAIN AND A. DRYDEN

Handsomely bound in White Buckram, gilt edges, royal 8vo. TWO GUINEAS net.

CONTAINING 520 PAGES OF LETTERPRESS, 108 FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS, AND MANY ILLUSTRATIONS IN TEXT.

BOOKSELLER.

'The work now enjoys an established reputation of years, and has been reprinted again and again, though never (that we remember) in such handsome shape as the beautiful volume now published.'

LITERARY WORLD.

' . . . which seems to have been inspired by intimate first-hand knowledge of the subject. . . . The volume is most handsomely produced.'

GLASGOW HERALD.

'The careful and thorough revision to which it has been subjected, and the additions that have been made to it . . . give it quite an independent value of its own.'

FIELD.

'The book is beautifully produced. . . . A more suitable birthday or wedding present for a lady we have not seen.'

STUDIO.

'Mrs. Palliser had the rare gift—and her present successors share that gift in a marked degree—of writing on a technical subject in such a manner as to make her narrative interesting.'

LADIES' FIELD.

'The book, besides being a complete education on the subject, is a mine of historical wealth, and provides the most entertaining reading, apart from its technical value.'

NOTTINGHAM GUARDIAN.

'It still remains unchallenged as the classical authority on hand-made lace, both in regard to history and technique. . . . For practical purposes the hundred odd photographs which have been added to the list of illustrations are almost as useful to the student as the original articles themselves would be.'

NOTTINGHAM DAILY EXPRESS.

'In point of binding, printing, and illustration, it is entirely worthy of the subject with which it deals. The illustrations are superb, and this new and enlarged edition should meet with the success which it undoubtedly merits.'

THE BOOK OF PSALMS. With Introduction and Notes by A. F. KIRKPATRICK, D.D., Master of Selwyn College, Cambridge; Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Cambridge. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

The edition of the Psalms prepared by Professor KIRKPATRICK for the Cambridge Bible for Schools having been completed and published in three volumes, the whole work is now also published in a single volume. The page is larger than in the separate volumes, and, a thinner paper being used, it is thought that this edition will be found convenient in size and that many readers will prefer it to the separate volumes.

A COLLEGE OF ADVERTISING.

'Learn to be an ad. writer.'

'Utilise your spare time by studying at home.'

'THE CHICAGO COLLEGE OF ADVERTISING.

'The most solid institution of its kind in America.'

'Supported by the brainiest advertisers in the West.'

This accounts for it; now we understand how it is that American advertisers manage to make their advertisements twice as attractive as those of a similar nature to be found in our papers and magazines, and in half the space. There are exceptions, of course, but for skill in 'catching the eye' and compelling you to read, the Americans are unquestionably far ahead of our advertisers. In the matter of ruination of landscapes by posters in fields and on bridges and cliffs we must all most heartily wish the American system confined to America. Mr. Balfour—brilliant, brainy, bi-metallic Balfour, as an American admirer described him—was observed to read one of those field advertisements which desecrated the neighbourhood of the golf links, and the vicious way in which he struck at his ball all the afternoon gave the impression that he took it for a certain pill, and was calculating its presumable worth at a guinea a box was a great opening for a much needed new tax on field advertisements.

'Is Munsey out for March?' we asked a bookstall clerk recently. 'There it is,' said the clerk, pointing to a pile of it, with an attractive picture of a fair American golfer, who is just about to make such a drive as would clear any bunker—and Bunker's Hill as well. Munsey will sell well this month; it always does so, for that matter, and deservedly, for it always shows as much 'vim' and 'go' and is as bright and as attractive as the fair young golfer on its March cover.

'They are spoiling it,' said the clerk regretfully, as he took our sixpence.

'How?'

'Why, they are taking advertisements.'

And sure enough, on opening our Munsey in the dim but hardly conducive to religious-feeling light of the dirty old oil lamp of a C(—) & D(—) & S.W.E.A.R. compartment, we found that Munsey was full of 'ads.'

But there are ads. and ads., and our disappointment at the trick Frank A. Munsey has played on the British public speedily vanished when we found they were American ads. When his magazine first appeared here it was with the bold announcement that there were no ads. in it. That itself was a clever 'ad.' But in this March number there are no less than one hundred and seventeen pages of advertisements, and they are so interesting that we have not yet had time to do more than glance at the hundred and fifty pages of contents; but we know the reading will be as attractive as the illustrations, and that is not saying a little. Munsey is immense—especially at sixpence.

Trust Mr. T. J. Barrat to know a good advertising medium and to get the best place in it. It is quite grateful and comforting to find our old friend the Soap of Pears at the head of this really grand array of 'ads.' Yes, 'it's a good habit,' as Mr. B's ad. says, and reminds one of Scadder, the 'Eden' promoter, who said to Martin Chuzzlewit: 'Feel of my hands, sir! Air they dirty or air they clean?' while displaying a pair which would have tested the cleansing qualities of even Pears'.

But we mere men must take to fans, as Andrew Lang suggests, if these advertisements addressed to the fair sex go on at this rate. Really, Mr. Munsey, you are a little too-too with your pictures of the female figure in 'erect form' corsets (the newest has 'a very long hip,' fancy that) in budding forms dressed in dainty corsets and—split infinitives—and in forms which can be made to bud. It is quite 'shocking,' as the British matron would say only that she is as extinct as the Dodo.

'Pneumatic bust forms—inflated by a breath, light as air, natural as life'—described by an 'eminent woman' as 'more an inspiration than an invention,' 'a grateful relief to nursing mothers'—do American babies live on air? One would like to hear their opinion on these 'inspirations.'

'We would give fifty thousand dollars in cash if the people of the United States could in some way be made to realise that the greatest offer ever made in real estate, or probably ever will be made, is embodied in our offer to sell a lot in New York City with all improvements for $480. We are selling lots for less than $500 which are intrinsically worth $20,000, &c. &c.' One would have imagined that it would cost less than $50,000 to get our American cousins to 'realise' that.

The Hayner Co. offer their pure Rye Whiskey on approval. 'If, after testing, you are not satisfied, return at our expense and we will return your $3.20.' No wonder they have sixty-five thousand customers; no stingy restrictions as to how much you are to test before you are satisfied, or how you are to return what you have tested if not satisfied.

Fancy an English railroad company advertising an illustration of a clean shirt cuff, 'worn by Eli Perkins from New York to Buffalo and back' as an inducement to travel on their line, because their locomotives 'burn hard coal.' Punch once advertised the Underground Railway by giving a picture of a very dirty hand as an effect of opening a carriage door on that line, but this was rather a back-handed, not to say black-handed, compliment.

On the same page San Francisco advertises that 'no other city of America has so great a number of so great a variety of population.' If there is any truth in the old adage, then San Francisco must indeed be charming.

On the next page is a taking picture of a young damozel in bed, about to take a dose of 'a gentle aperient, and one especially meeting all requirements of the delicate organisation of women'—indispensable with 'transparent waists.' Mr. Lang, where's that fan?

'True Beautifier': new Liquid that Clears the Skin. Send your Name and Get a Quart of it without One Cent of Expense. When it Helps You, then Pay for it. . . . Write Now, this Introductory Offer won't Last Long.'

Here's a testimonial from a Tennessee gentleman who tried a cure for intemperance: 'Gentlemen, after taking your treatment ten days, the small draught of whiskey which I took according to your directions made me deathly sick; its memory will last for ever.'

'Do you scowl? don't scowl, use the B. & P. Wrinkle Eradicator, discovered by two women.'

And read Munsey's capital magazine.

No, we hope the booksellers will not cut the advertisements out of Munsey; it is true they add a bit to the cost of carriage, but they'll help to sell it, and that's what's wanted.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

'We understand that a movement shortly will be made by the patrons of Christie's sale rooms to endeavour to have the principal sales held either earlier on Saturdays, or on Fridays. The time of commencing sales varies curiously in different countries. In Paris an important sale begins as a rule on a Monday or a Tuesday at one or two o'clock in the afternoon. In New York important auctions are always held in the evening, beginning at six o'clock, usually in the middle of the week. The Saturday afternoon sales at Christie's have been an important institution in England for a long time; but recently, owing to the change of customs and the tendency to enjoy the country from Friday night till Monday morning, the attendance in King Street has been seriously affected. It would appear, therefore, that the authorities would be well advised to consider the question of holding all their important sales on Thursdays or Fridays. It must be within the knowledge of those who are interested in such matters that whenever a good picture comes into the market, whether it be sold at Christie's or Robinson & Fisher's, it fetches a large price even in the middle of the week. For example, the two Van Dyck portraits from the Peel collection were sold on a Thursday, and as £24,250 was paid for them, it is quite certain they would have fetched no more on a Saturday afternoon.'—From the Art Journal for March 1902.

No. 1 of The Country, edited by Dr. Harry Roberts and published by Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co., was published last Monday. It is produced in the excellent style we are led to expect in the publications of Messrs. Dent. Size 10 x 13, price 6d. monthly, in attractive cover, well printed, well illustrated, and with a capital series of articles on all kinds of interesting subjects. The Country deserves the success which we hope it will attain.

'For weeks I have read vague hints, in the newspapers, about the institution of a British Academy, like L'Académie Française. British, one says, to please one's countrymen, but I do not know whether the Academy contains any of these, any kindly Scots, or whether it is exclusively English. The learned, where I dwell, seem, I do not say ignorant of, but profoundly indifferent to, the subject of these eager inquiries. What is the Academy, what is its object, who are the members, who elected them, have they an uniform, are they going to write a dictionary?

These are the questions nobody can answer,

These are the problems nobody can solve;

Only we know that Man is an advancer,

Only we know that the centuries evolve.

Nobody, here, can answer, but a friend suggests, in language very unacademic, that "a lot of dismal Johnnies have elected themselves, and got in on the ground floor." From such phrases I disassociate myself—or is the word "dissociate," and can any of the Academy tell me? The only names of these Immortals which have reached me are those of Messrs. Skeat and Swete.—Mr. A. LANG, in Longman's Magazine.

Very early editions of Izaak Walton's works are to be sold by auction on Friday, March 21, by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, Wellington Street, including a fourth edition of the 'Compleat Angler,' 1668, and a fifth edition, 1676. (The item called in the catalogue 'The Compleat Angler, First Edition, 1676,' must be a mistake, as the first edition was published in 1653.) Then there are copies of the first edition of the 'Lives,' of the Life of George Herbert, and a copy of 'The Vanity of Humane Inventions,' with Walton's autograph (initials) on title.

Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co. have in the press a 'Manual of Indian Timbers,' by Mr. J. S. Gamble, C.I.E., F.R.S., &c., a retired Indian Forest Officer. This is the second edition of a work of which the first edition was published in India in 1880. The first edition, now long out of print, proved itself of great value to officers of the Forest and other Government Departments in India as a guide to the economic botany of the Indian forests and to the structure and properties of the timbers they afford. The great variety of the Indian forest flora is at once seen when it is remembered that there are in the forests which extend from sea-level to the line of perpetual snow in the Himalaya some 4,000 to 5,000 species of woody plants. The 'Manual of Indian Timbers' is a 'wood-flora'—that is, it gives, instead of the ordinary botanical descriptions of the stem, leaves, flowers, and fruit, the descriptions of the woods, and the characters by which they are distinguished. It was probably the first work of the kind prepared in the English language for any part of the British Empire, and is the first attempt on any scale to describe the structure of woods, a study to which considerable attention has recently been drawn through papers read before the Society of Arts, articles in Nature, and so on. Mr. Gamble describes the woods of about one-third of the trees, shrubs, &c., known to the Indian forests, and his work supplements that description by full accounts of the distribution of the trees and their uses for timber or any other purpose, and it gives, in addition, notes on the treatment best suited to their growth. It is illustrated by pictures of nearly a hundred of the more important kinds. To officers in any of the Indian Services, to planters and industrial workers in India, and to travellers in the country, Mr. Gamble's manual is recommended as a guide to the forests and a help in the study of the immense natural resources of that wonderful empire.

In 'Pilots,' Mr. Bernard E. J. Capes, the author of 'The Comte de la Murette,' 'The Lake of Wine,' and other popular novels, has collected a number of short stories which have appeared serially in various periodicals here and in America during the last few years. Messrs. Methuen are the publishers.

The feature of Scribner's Magazine for March is an article on London, entitled 'The Heart of England,' with some very clever illustrations by André Castaigne. The view of the Port of London from a balloon is one of the most extraordinary bits of drawing we have ever seen of a view not one Londoner in a million ever sees. The picture of a 'Boat-load of Kent Porters and Watermen returning Home' reminds one of Doré, and might well be taken as representing one of Charon's trips across the Styx.

A book which will possess a somewhat special interest for English readers in the present year is now in the press, and will be published by Mr. Murray in the first week in April. It consists of a series of letters written during the years 1725–1729, by Monsieur César de Saussure, a descendant of the French family of that name, who came over to England for an educational visit, and wrote a continuous and detailed account of what he saw and did. As he had introductions to members of the best Society in London, he had ample opportunities of studying and describing English life at that time, and one of the principal features of his narrative is a minute account of the proceedings at the Coronation of George II., at which M. de Saussure was present. Commencing with an account of his journey from Switzerland down the Rhine to Rotterdam, and of the voyage to England, he describes the Court of George I.—the Opening of Parliament—the Streets and Buildings of London, including the Tower and its Menagerie—the Investiture of the Knights of the Bath—the ways and doings of English Society, with anecdotes of those who are best known in it—Sports and Pastimes—Highwaymen—the Coffee Houses—the Suburban Villages of Kensington, Islington, Hackney, &c.—the King's Savage—the Penny Post—River Boats. The book is, in short, a most careful and remarkable description of London, its life and society two hundred years ago. After a residence of nearly five years in England M. de Saussure accompanied Lord Kinnoull on his Embassy to Constantinople. These letters were shown to Voltaire, who, after reading them, wrote: 'On ne peut trop remercier Mons. de Saussure de la bonté qu'il a eue de prêter un ouvrage si amusant et si utile.'

Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons will publish the American edition of Mr. E. Marston's little volume, 'Sketches of some Booksellers of the Time of Dr. Johnson,' with a photogravure portrait of the Doctor and other portraits. Much new matter has been added since the articles appeared in our columns.

Members of the Bookselling Trade will regret to learn of the death of Mr. William Simpson, for many years head of the firm of Puttick & Simpson, the well-known auctioneers of Leicester Square. The deceased gentleman had attained the ripe age of 87 years, and was esteemed and respected by all with whom he came in contact.

His Majesty the King has just desired that a copy be sent to him of Mr. R. M. Sillard's book 'Barry Sullivan and his Contemporaries,' recently published by Mr. Fisher Unwin, London.

'A Heroine from Finland,' a new novel which Messrs. Methuen will publish from the pen of Paul Waineman, will have the charm of freshness, for few novels dealing with Finnish life have been hitherto published in England. The opening chapters are laid in Moscow during the coronation of the present Czar.

Mr. Fisher Unwin will publish next week 'The Modern Chronicles of Froisart,' told and pictured by Mr. F. C. Gould. This pleasing chronicle gives a quaintly humorous but veracious account of political events from the days of Home Rule to the present time. Mr. Gould is one of the best caricaturists of our or any age.

In spite of the fact that the new editor of 'Crockford' was not appointed until last July, the 1902 edition of this old-established Clerical Directory will be published on the 20th of this month, two months earlier than the issue of 1901. The volume has been carefully revised throughout, and the corrections have been brought up to date. Although the size of the work has increased, the price remains the same.

In Messrs. Methuen's 'Little Library' there will be published at once a complete edition of 'The Essays of Elia,' in which Mr. E. V. Lucas has written an introduction and has added notes. The publishers believe that this is the only edition at present in existence which has been reprinted from the first.

Mr. Unwin will publish immediately 'The Confessions of a Matchmaking Mother,' by Lillias Campbell Davidson. The mother in question is an Indian officer's widow, left with no less than eight daughters on her hands.

BENEFICENCE OF HUMILITY.

Persons who cannot pick up a sheet of paper from the floor, but send for a boy to do it instead, who sneak away and let someone else put up stock, who spend as much time straightening and smoothing their clothes as in attending customers, who have a particular aversion to a broom, who are too good to dust or who are averse to multitudinous duties which they are always shifting off on someone else, and have a superior opinion of their own worth, are among those extraordinary young men who shrink when the test of the actual worth comes.

The idea of some wonderful superiority which possesses the soul of some business men does not prove a fact when superiority is needed in them; their extraordinary worth is gone when that worth is most needed.

The fellow who plods along and finds nothing beneath him, or to which he should not lend his strength when it counts for the upbuilding and success of business is the winner every time; instead of shrinking in activity, he expands with the absorption and assimilation of everything which he can turn to usefulness. He is the man who is in business to learn all he can, and never thinks that he has learned or is capable of knowing it all.

Gladstone once said that every day of his life taught him how little he knew, and it is a good plan for the business man to under-estimate rather than over-estimate his accomplishments. He is a genius, indeed, who cannot learn from others.—Ex.

ASSOCIATED BOOKSELLERS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

Report for the Year ending Dec. 31, 1901.

Just as we go to press we received this Report, from which we give the following extracts:

The Council in presenting their Annual Report to the members of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland, have pleasure in congratulating them upon the successful efforts that have been made during the past year in maintaining and developing the net system inaugurated two years ago.

The Council is also pleased to report that, with few exceptions, no difficulty has arisen in securing the net prices from the public, and now that the system is becoming better known, it will, they think, still further tend, not only to benefit the trade at large, but also to cement the good feeling already existing between Publishers and Booksellers. It is a source of much gratification that so few cases of discounting net books have come to their notice—every case that has been reported has had very careful consideration, and by the assistance of the Publishers' Association energetic steps taken, which resulted in the discontinuance of such discounting.

A very successful dinner of the Publishers and Booksellers' Associations was held in May, and it is hoped that similar reunions may be held periodically, so as to give publishers and booksellers the opportunity of meeting together in a cordial manner.

New branches have been formed in Newcastle-on-Tyne and in Belfast, and both are carefully watching the trade's interest. More of these branches are wanted, especially in the Midlands, and it is hoped that now some tangible results have ensued from the work of the existing societies, the members of the trade in these still unrepresented districts will be induced to co-operate. The Council will readily give every assistance in their power in the formation of such local Associations.

* From the interesting statistics compiled by Mr. Bowes, it appears that there were published from January to December 1901:—5,607 non-net books of a total publishing price of £1,211. 8s. 7d., and 2,322 net books of a total publishing price of £983. 3s. 4d.

Subscriptions for the current year are now due, and the Council hope that a hearty and generous response will promptly be made from the trade generally, in recognition of its appreciation of the useful and successful work the Association has accomplished, and is accomplishing for them.

Subscriptions and Donations should be forwarded to the Hon. Secretary, Edwin Pearce, 1 Bathurst Street, Hyde Park Gardens, London, W., or to either of the Hon. Secs. of the various branches.

Northern: E. W. Coates, Station Street, Huddersfield.

Scottish: J. Macniven, 138 Princes Street, Edinburgh.

Western: Edwin Pearce, 41 Fore Street, Taunton.

Newcastle: L. E. Robinson, 4 Nelson Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Belfast: H. H. Mayne, 3 Donegall Square West, Belfast.

HENRY W. KEAY, Chairman.

EDWIN PEARCE, Hon. Secretary.

INFECTION CARRIED BY BOOKS.

According to a contributor to the New York Sun, 'Experiments have shown that the bacillus of cholera will live in books 48 hours or more, that of diphtheria 28 days, that of tuberculosis 103 days. Hence it is essential to disinfect books under some circumstances. The disinfection can best be done by an exposure to steam, under pressure, for forty minutes. No damage is done to the pages. Pasteboard and linen bindings recover their shape after pressing. Formic aldehyde and sulphur vapour are less satisfactory than steam.'

THE GUARDIAN AND THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE.

'The English Catalogue of Books for 1901' (Sampson Low) follows, without deviation, the thoroughly satisfactory lines of recent editions, and therefore calls for no particular notice. To bookmen it is not only one of the most useful but also one of the pleasantest of all annuals—an ideal volume, say, for an odd half-hour of waiting.—Guardian.

Letters to the Editor

THE PROPOSED BRITISH AND IRISH BOOKSELLERS' BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.

SIR,—Every sympathiser with human frailty will wish success to Mr. Brabrook's scheme for a British and Irish Booksellers' Benevolent Society; but from the rough draft which appears in your issue of March 1 it seems to me likely to meet with the same fate as other schemes which have been suggested both from within the London Booksellers' Provident Institution and outside it.

From the prospectus the only advantage I can find over the present Booksellers' Provident Institution is that its benefits are applicable to the whole of Great Britain and Ireland; but it contains the one clause to which the lack of interest in the old Society is attributed—viz. that 'temporary assistance and burial grants be given at the discretion of the management.' This is the bone of contention, and forms the stock argument of the opponents of the Booksellers' Provident Institution. I see it is also intended to have its head office in London; this does away with its provincial character. I am quite sure there is no room in London for a second Booksellers' Benefit Society.

I am quite prepared to acknowledge that by judicious action the benefits of the Booksellers' Provident Institution could be greatly extended. This might be done by a consistent system of devolution in the following manner. Supposing some of our large country towns, or groups of towns, started for themselves a Booksellers' Institution on similar lines to the Booksellers' Provident Institution; when they attained a certain position as to capital and members, they might be in some way affiliated with the Provident Institution in London without losing local identity. This is the only way, I think, possible of forming one big society for the whole of the United Kingdom. It is a pity Mr. Brabrook did not take his figures respecting the Booksellers' Provident Institution from its rules issued in 1900; he places the age scale for annual subscriptions at £2. 2s., this is the old scale for twenty yearly subscriptions. Annual subscriptions can now commence at 13s. 11d., and a life membership bought for £16. 6s. 10d., and not £21, as stated in Mr. Brabrook's table. As far as I can gather from the suggested scheme, all and greater advantages there proposed are offered to the members of the Booksellers' Provident Institution. What we want in London is for young men to take more interest in their future welfare, and support an Institution which has already done and is doing much good work.

Yours, &c.,

JOSEPH SHAYLOR.

4 Stationers' Hall Court:

March 5, 1902.

SIR,—I am very pleased to find that an able man like Mr. Brabrook has taken up the above question. As many of my friends are aware, it has been my dearest wish to see established on a firm basis a Society such as he suggests, and I, for one, am quite willing to do all that lies in my power to assist such a scheme, and if some influential provincial friend will call a meeting I shall be pleased to attend, wherever it may be. I feel with Mr. Brabrook that it is high time something was done. Our comrades are falling by the wayside on every hand, and we have no organisation that can help those who are left behind. Would you, sir, call a meeting for the purpose of discussing the matter, say at the Memorial Hall, Farringdon Street, E.C., at an early date? I would willingly share the responsibility for any expense such a meeting would entail, and feel certain that there are many more who are interested enough to do the same.

Thanking you in anticipation,

Faithfully yours,

Ilford:

FRED J. RYMER.

March 5, 1902.

WHAT IS AN 'UNCUT' BOOK?

DEAR SIR,—Will you, or your readers, give your opinion as to whether a book, the edges of which have been cut with a paper knife, can pass as an 'uncut' book? A person sent us books 'cut open' in this way, and insisted that they were technically 'uncut.' Is this so?

Yours faithfully,

Peterborough. TAYLOR & DOWNS.

[We believe that most people understand by the term 'uncut' that the original margins of the book have not been cut down by the binder's knife, and so reduced in size. Merely cutting the edges with a paper-knife does not at all destroy the margin, if properly done. In some books you can see how the binder has so slashed off a top or other margin as to cut into the text—this is mutilation.—Ed.]

A QUERY IN SPELLING.

SIR,—Under above heading 'H. G. V.' states that 'Oxford cads' pronounce Oxford as though spelt 'Hawksphut.'

I spent twenty years of my life in that city and never heard an Oxonian pronounce it thus.

Yours truly,

OXONIAN.

UNIFORMITY OF SPELLING AND PRINTING.

SIR,—Will you allow me one word of rejoinder to Mr. Collins's acrid letter in your last issue?

Mr. Collins is very incensed at my wickedness in not having (as he supposes) read his letter to the Author. My interpretation was on similar lines to that of your leader on February 15; and if Mr. Collins does not suggest uniformity, I should like to know to what he would have his arguments tend? From the first paragraph to the last Mr. Collins proffers his services to this end (in his own words) of 'developing typographical uniformity.'

I do not agree that the spelling of the word 'judgement' with the 'e' in George Meredith's books is by reason of 'the custom of the house' printing them. It is the author's judgement.

Yours faithfully,

W. HENRY ROBINSON.

Walsall: March 5.

'OUR KING AND QUEEN.'

We hope Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will have all the success they deserve with their new serial publication, 'Our King and Queen,' some notice of which we have already given. After seeing a specimen copy of No. 1 we can only say that it is incomprehensible to us how so much excellent material can be given for sevenpence—82 illustrations, two coloured plates, and brightly written text printed on the 'finest art paper made, and without the plates it weighs over half a pound, which must mean at least 2d. for paper before it is printed on.

FIXING THE PERCENTAGE OF PROFIT.

In estimating the profits that a stock of goods should earn, too little attention is sometimes paid to the cost of carrying on the business.

No matter how small or how large a business may be, its success depends on a thorough understanding of the figures. Invoices must be compared with orders and carefully kept, a cost book provided and each item recorded, and every matter of expense be thoroughly guarded against if the business is to be preserved against loss. In figuring cost so as to determine the rate of profit, not a single known or ascertainable item should be omitted. It is generally a good plan for the owner to credit himself with a certain salary each month, and to charge the amount against expense or merchandise account. When a credit business is done, a certain percentage should be provided for a loss on bad bills.

In figuring on the rate of profit, it is a common mistake to group all goods under one head and to add a fixed percentage of profit. Under this system, all goods are expected to realise the same percentage, even though some are necessarily quick sellers and others comparatively slow. If a certain line is in good demand at a fair price, there is more money in moving it quickly for a reasonable profit than in holding it at a figure which the customers will not feel like paying. Slow selling goods of a staple character can stand a higher percentage of profit, and their sale will compensate for the smaller advance over cost made on others. In this way an average rate of profit can be struck, and the result will be more satisfactory than if it had been attempted by fixing a uniform rate on each separate line.

Nevertheless, each line should be made to bear its proper burden of expense. This can be determined by the amount of sales for any previous period and by dividing the different lines into departments. Conditions vary from time to time, and in this case a rule that was formerly correct may not have a proper or profitable application, but by comparing them together and striking an average it will not be difficult to determine the share of expense which each line should bear, and where this has been done the percentage of profit in each case can be easily ascertained.—Hardware Hints.

Messrs. Burns & Oates, Ltd.

Messrs. Burns & Oates have in the press: More Home Truths, by Madame Cecilia, of KING EDWARD VII. IN HIS FIRST SAILOR SUIT.

From 'OUR KING AND QUEEN.'

St. Andrew's Convent, Streatham, author of 'Home Truths for Mary's Children,' to which it forms a sequel. The work is divided into two parts, The Child of Mary's Social Life, and the Child of Mary's Inner Life. Part 1 treats of human respect, trifles, good works, letter-writing, the use of money, swift to hear, little foxes or girls' defects, sowing and reaping, home training, and care of children. Part 2 treats of self-denial, occasions of sin, sunshine and clouds, holiness, purity of intention, fervour, piety, suffering, confidence, final perseverance, death, and heaven. The Mirror of Perfection, by Brother Leo of Assisi, being the Life of St. Francis of Assisi, by his fellow townsman, disciple, friend, secretary, and confessor, who attended him on his deathbed. This intensely interesting document, containing the earliest and most authentic record of the Franciscan Order and its founder, was completed in 1227, about six months after the saint's death. Its recent discovery by M. Paul Sabatier has been followed by translation into English by Constance, Countess De la Warr. Converts in the Reign of Charles I., being a narrative of Sir John and Lady Warner's so much wondered at resolutions to leave the Anglican Church and to enter the Religious Life, by Frances Jackson. This narrative is based on a remarkable book, published in 1690, giving an account of the conversion of a young Englishman and his wife to the Catholic Faith, and their separation by mutual consent to become the one a Jesuit priest, and the other a nun. Incidentally it throws light on the position of the Jesuit Fathers in this country, and on the belief in the doctrine of the Real Presence held by members of the Church of England in those days.

Notices of Books

From Mr. H. R. Allenson.—'A Village Apostle and other Verses,' by J. Temperley Grey. They are very simple, these homely rhymes, and yet they have a charm often wanting in poetry of a far more pretentious character. We suppose it is due to their natural expression. The following extract will best indicate the character of the book and at the same time show what we mean. It is entitled 'Spring.'

'Sing on, O lark! in the heavens blue,
Sing thy song in the glad sunshine,—
There is music in my heart—
An echo of that song of thine.

'Shine on, O happy day of spring!
All nature bursting into bloom;
Within I feel a kindred life,
My soul emerging from the gloom.'

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—'History of the Conquest of Peru,' by William H. Prescott, edited by John Foster Kirk, 2 vols. We are very pleased to welcome this highly acceptable addition to 'Bohn's Standard Library.' Of the interesting character of the book or its great importance as a contribution to history it is scarcely necessary to speak at this date. The present edition has been carefully and appreciatively edited by Mr. John Foster Kirk, who has supplied many enlightening footnotes. The printing, binding, and general 'get-up' of the volumes are after the usual style of the 'Bohn Library,' which is as good as to say they are neatness itself.

From Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd..—'Five Stuart Princesses: Margaret of Scotland, Elizabeth of Bohemia, Mary of Orange, Henrietta of Orleans, Sophia of Hanover,' edited by Robert S. Rait. Four of the five Princesses of the Royal House of Stuart whose biographies form the subject of this volume were, as the author points out, nearly related, and they supply in their connection with European politics almost a continuous history of the foreign policy of this country. The remaining biography—that of Margaret of Scotland—is quite detached from the rest, but her life, though nearly three hundred years separate the birth of Margaret of Scotland and the death of Sophia of Hanover, possesses many points of interest in the relationship of fifteenth-century France and Scotland; 'it is one of those episodes in history which can never fail to appeal to the imagination and to the emotions; and it is a story little known.' So much for the material of Mr. Rait's volume. That he has treated it in an exceedingly able fashion, never losing sight of the actualities of history while thoroughly contributing to the interest and entertainment of his readers, we can warmly bear testimony. A light and graceful style, with a considerable leavening of personal anecdote and a due recognition of the romantic side of his subject, are material factors in this result. Another attractive feature of the volume lies in the numerous portraits, representing, among others, Henrietta of Orleans, Elizabeth of Bohemia, Mary of Orange, the Electress Sophia, the Princess Elizabeth, and Charlotte of Orange. The entire work is to be cordially recommended.

From the De La More Press, 52 High Holborn (New York: M. F. Mansfield & Co.)—'Recollections of a Georgia Loyalist,' by Elizabeth Lichtenstein Johnston, edited by the Rev. Arthur Wentworth Eaton, B.A. These recollections were committed to paper in 1836, the writer being at the time over seventy years of age. That she was a woman of a wonderfully hale constitution is shown by the fact that she was nearly ninety when she died. So much for the clearness of her intellect and the veracity of statements. In regard to the book itself, the story of the migration of the loyalists to Nova Scotia, and the many subsequent changes in their eventful lives, should have interest for English readers. The author, as the reminiscences show, was born and married in Georgia, at the time of the war was obliged to seek refuge in Florida, thence went to Scotland, and at last by a singular fate became, as she remained to her death, a resident of Nova Scotia. The account of her experiences is related in a clear, matter-of-fact style, and not without a certain flavouring of pardonable pride. The book is illustrated with several portraits of the Johnston family, including a rather remarkable one of the authoress.

From Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co..—'Mothers in Council,' edited by Charlotte M. Yonge, Volume XI. The subjects laid under discussion in this volume are of a kind thoroughly calculated to engage the maternal interest. Canon Lyttelton, for instance, writes of 'The Responsibilities of Fathers,' the Rev. R. E. Sanderson discusses the question of 'Marriage with a Deceased Wife's Sister,' and 'Stella' comments with much force on 'The Life and Work of a Clergyman's Wife.' There are also articles by the late Miss Yonge, Lady Isabel Margesson, the Dean of Windsor, Prebendary Ridgeway, Elizabeth Palgrave Barker, and others. In a few well-chosen words Mrs. Sumner expresses the grief of herself and colleagues at the death of Miss Yonge, and this tribute is very appropriately followed by some 'Reminiscences of Otterbourne,' where the deceased authoress was born and passed so many years of her life, by Charlotte Fortescue Yonge.

From Messrs. Greening & Co., Ltd..—'The Cigarette Smoker,' being the Terrible Case of Uther Kennedy, by C. Ranger Gull. This is a particularly grim story of the type in which the author, judging by his previous works, appears to exult. A bright, handsome young fellow named Uther Kennedy renews acquaintance, when in Paris, with a comrade of his earlier years, and is by him inducted into the true mysteries of cigarette smoking. From this he becomes a miserable victim to the habit, and suffers from what may be described as nicotine poisoning. A celebrated medical man, who has devoted his life to the study of mental disease, interests himself in the case, and another member of the profession is engaged as Uther's constant companion. All, however, is to no purpose. Much the same as in the drink mania, the patient is cunning enough to baffle their precautions. The story is clever, but would it not be possible for the author to turn his undoubted talents to a less morbid form of fiction?

From Mr. John Lane.—'Later Poems,' by Alice Meynell. The effect produced by these poems may be fitly compared to the influence of delicious, high souled music. The simile is by no means a new one, but it is not given to inferior mortals to have original conceptions. Though we are not particularly partial to poetry, we have been delighted with Miss Meynell's work. There is a nobility and passion about its contents that irresistibly appeal to the imagination and hold the reader captive. It is impossible in a single extract to convey a full impression of the character of a book, but we venture on the following, entitled 'At Night':

'Home, home from the horizon far and clear,
Hither the soft wings sweep;
Flocks of the memories of the day draw near
The dovecoat doors of sleep.
'O which are they that come through sweetest light
Of all these homing birds?
Which with the straightest and the simplest flight?
Your words to me, your words!'

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—'Songs of Childhood,' by Walter Ramal. We are afraid Mr. Gadgrind, that rigid upholder of the necessity for facts, would have strongly disapproved of this volume. It is replete with the most delicate exhibitions of fancy. Goblins, fairies, ogres, and phantoms of every sort chase each other, so to speak, over its pages, and elfin fancy reigns supreme throughout. Not alone children will be enchanted by the author's sportive imaginings, but elderly people will find themselves following in the eager throng as well. It is, indeed, a charming volume, the like of which, in its thorough conception of its subject, we do not remember to have come across since Robert Louis Stevenson's delightful verses for children, published many years ago. To make an extract from such a volume, as showing its winsome character, is no easy matter, but we venture to give the following:

'In the black furrow of a field
I saw an old witch-hare this night;
And she cocked her lissome ear,
And she eyed the moon so bright,
And she nibbled o' the green;
And I whispered "Whest! witch-hare."
Away, like a ghostie, o'er the field
She fled, and left the moonlight there.'

From Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd..—'The English Catalogue' of

Books for 1901.' This is the sixty-fifth yearly issue of 'The English Catalogue,' which, unlike so many publications that become useless or superfluous as time goes on, continually increases in usefulness; and, owing to the increase in literary activity, has become an indispensable aid to all who have to do with books. Every care is taken in the arrangement and printing of this work to facilitate research. One alphabet serves for titles and authors' names. Where an author's name is given on the title-page of a book, then the author's name in heavy type precedes the title; but the title of the selfsame book, commencing with its first or most important word, is repeated in the alphabet, while the name of the author is added in italics. An Appendix contains the Transactions of Learned Societies and the various Series and Libraries of which so many are issued at the present day. A great boon to those using this catalogue are the useful lists of publishers of the United Kingdom and of the principal publishers in the United States of America. The type, paper, and binding leave nothing to desire.

From Mr. John Murray.—'Greek Coins and their Parent Cities,' by John Ward, F.S.A. Not only numismatists in particular, but all students of Greek life and history, have reason to be deeply grateful to Mr. Ward for this handsome volume. The author has for many years been a diligent and persevering collector of Hellenic coins, and his enthusiasm in the pursuit has led him to visit on more than one occasion the countries concerned in their production. The first half of his book consists of a descriptive catalogue of his collection, illustrated with twenty autotype plates, showing the ancient Greek coins of Magna Græcia (Southern Italy), Sicily, Syrakuse, Makedon, Thessalia, Boeotia, and so forth. This has been compiled by Mr. G. F. Hill, M.A., of the British Museum, who is entitled to every praise for the care and skill he has brought to bear upon his task. The arrangement is that followed at the British Museum and in Dr. Vincent Head's well-known work, 'Historia Numorum.' The same gentleman is also responsible for a number of elaborate Greek and other indices which are likely to be of great use to the specialist in coins. Part II. makes greater concessions to the general reader. While engaged in the preparation of his work, the author was impressed with the fact that no book had previously been written connecting ancient Greek coins with the interesting localities that had produced them, and he determined to carry out this idea. The second half of the volume therefore consists of a series of 'Imaginary Rambles' to the ancient sites and cities of the Hellenic race, commencing with the best known western colonies, and gradually working eastward. To the student of history this portion of Mr. Ward's book will prove exceedingly attractive, while the numismatist on the other hand need have no fear of being neglected, for the Rambler never loses sight of the main object of his work. Many of the illustrations to these 'rambles' are reproduced from sketches or photographs taken by the author when visiting the localities; in other cases they are the result of a diligent collection of the best material. Three useful sketch maps, showing the principal localities in Magna Græcia, Ancient Hellas, Asia Minor and the Islands are included. The book in every way is deserving of cordial recommendation, nor should we omit in our words of praise to mention the excellent production of the volume.

From the Sign of the Unicorn.—'A Little Beast Book,' by Israel. In one way this volume certainly justifies its title. It is undoubtedly very 'little' indeed, and unless the reader be so artistic that he can find pleasure in a certain elegance and novelty of 'get-up'—the book being printed with broad margins, pages that have only two words upon them (in a remote corner), and other pages that can boast of no words at all—we are afraid he is likely to come rather badly off. The author discusses the peculiarities of the cat, the dog, the horse, the 'moke,' the bear, the cow, the pig, the sheep, the crow, the squirrel, and the peacock with an affectation of style that is only very occasionally relieved by glimpses of real humour. This is the way in which she begins her remarks on the sheep: 'The sheep is so woollily null that it creates for itself a personality out of negatives. A single individual sheep, if your brain can compass such a thing, is a perfect type of inanity, while massed in flock they hold a position similar to that of the public.' The greater portion of the book is written in this artificial manner, and we confess for ourselves that we are sufficiently 'woollily null' not to appreciate it.

From Messrs. Anthony Treherne & Co., Ltd..—'Behind the Wainscot,' by Cicely Fulcher. Behind the wainscot lived a mouse—an honest little mouse, who never took anything that did not belong to him. He fell in love with Evelyn, a child of six, because she rescued him from the hands of the cook when he was about to be murdered. So, when Evelyn was ill-treated by the nurse and shut up in a dark room at the top of the house, the mouse was all anxiety and sympathy. But the wicked nurse got found out, and was sent away. Miss Fulcher's children, interesting though they are, do not quite convince us; she has a delicate touch, but she rarely gets beneath the surface.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'Wistons: a Story, in three Parts,' by Miles Amber. If all future issues in 'The First Novel Library' are equal to this, the opening volume of the series, there should be no doubt about its great success. Barring a certain sombreness of subject and a lack of humour—two attributes that seem very markedly to distinguish the fiction of the present day—we have not come across a more promising novel for a very long time. To describe the plot in detail—how George Woolvenhurst, of Wistons, the owner of the Sussex farmstead that had been in the occupation of his ancestors for generations, came to marry a beautiful gipsy, how they had two children, Esther and Rhoda, the incidents of their early years, and so forth—would reveal but little of its charm. The story is obviously the outcome of a poetic temperament, and is conceived in a highly refined spirit. Through the characters it touches on the borderland of the sublime and infinite. The ways of the children, their innocent but oftentimes very practical remarks on the manifestations of the Deity, the efforts of the simple-minded Betty, their nurse—herself a most pathetic figure throughout the book—to combat their cravings for religious information, are well calculated to produce a thoughtful frame of mind. And then these girls, so strangely brought up under the care of a self-indulgent mother and a neglectful father, how sadly they turn out! The one marries an artistic dreamer, who in some respects reminds us of Harold Skimpole, and is equally fascinating, persuasive, volatile, and selfish; and the other has a child without marriage, and is killed by her seducer in a moment of wild jealousy because she refuses, no longer caring for him, and knowing no guide but her own untutored inclinations, to be his wife. Then Esther's husband dies under somewhat touching conditions, and at the end of the story we see Betty (almost the only surviving character) patiently nursing Rhoda's illegitimate child, as she had nursed the mother and her father before that. It is to little Felix, who has been given the name of Woolvenhurst, that Wistons will now descend. The story is one of fine susceptibilities in course of trial, but though gloomy in colouring it is, as we have said, a work of remarkable merit. The reader will probably lay it on one side with eyes misty with tears; but there are numerous readers who like their inner emotions thus worked upon, and in the sense that they make people think such books undoubtedly do good. The pity is that they are never convincing.

NEW EDITIONS.—In their compact, pocket edition of George Meredith's novels, Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co. have issued 'Evan Harrington' and 'Sandra Belloni.' Both are excellently printed in large, clear type on thin paper, and have a strong and suitable red cloth binding. The latest volumes in the pretty and convenient 'Chiswick Shakespeare,' published by Messrs. George Bell & Sons, are the Second and Third Parts of 'King Henry VI.' Mr. Byam Shaw's illustrations seem to exhibit even still greater artistic merit the further the work progresses, and Mr. John Dennis, in his introduction and notes, is always interesting and helpful. Messrs. Methuen & Co., in their 'Little Library,' have issued a capital edition, in two volumes, of Miss Ferrier's 'Marriage,' edited, with a biographical preface, by A. Goodrich-Freer, and critical notices by Walter, Earl of Iddesleigh. A note is prefaced to the present edition pointing out that 'with the partial exception of the Edinburgh Edition of 1881, this is the first reprint taken from the original publication of Miss Ferrier's Novels (1818-31), and not from the editions of 1841-52, upon which the authoress inflicted changes, which, from the literary standpoint, have long been to her admirers an occasion for regret.' Volume I. gives a portrait of Miss Ferrier from a miniature by R. Thorburn, and Volume II. has a frontispiece by Arthur H. Buckland. 'The Poetical Works of Robert Burns,' from the latest volume in the well-known 'New Century Library' of Messrs. Thomas Nelson & Sons. The book presents all the commendable features of production that have served to render the 'Library' so popular with readers, and no lover of the poet desiring to have his works in a neat pocket form could possibly desire a more tasteful, well-printed volume. The Army League, of 8 King Street, Cheapside, have issued a cheap edition, revised throughout, of Mr. George F. Shee's 'Briton's First Duty: the Case for Conscription.' The little book, which is dedicated to 'the Patriots of Great and Greater Britain,' is written with an earnestness and simplicity that very materially aid the author's plea for a conscript home army. Not only has the author gathered together a large number of formidable facts, but he has arranged them in such form that only the most obstinate opponent will refuse to recognise their cogency. The book deserves to be closely studied by all who have the welfare of the Empire at heart.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, VALUER AND ACCOUNTANT

To Publishers, Booksellers, Stationers, Printers, &c.,

34 (late 1a) PATERNOSTER ROW,

is instructed to sell the following Businesses:—

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER, with Jobbing Printing and high-class Stationery Business. Delightful South-Coast town, main street. Rent only £40; very low. Fine double front and superior modern plant, type, and machinery. Old-established and safe. Full investigation courted. £1,200 required, or trade valuation. A very rare and advantageous opportunity.

STATIONERY, BOOKSELLING, &c.—First-class old-established Business in the Isle of Wight. Good premises in best position. Rent £60; long lease. Returns £1,800 a-year. Excellent profits. About £1,200. A fine saleable stock.

PRINTING.—Prosperous South-Coast town. A good little Jobbing Business. Rent only £32 (£10 sub-let). Fine double-fronted shop and seven rooms. Returns £600 a-year, and capable of increase. In present hands 20 years. Retiring. All at £250. Very cheap. Good for a practical printer.

STATIONERY, FANCY, &c.—North London main road. Rent £80. Shop and nine rooms. Long lease. Returns £900 a-year. Excellent profits. Established 1872. £600 for all; a very reasonable price. Good stock and fixtures. Worthy of prompt attention.

STATIONERY, PRINTING, &c.—Fashionable and favourite town in Kent. Old-established safe business, in good position near railway station. Rent £50. Attractive shop and eight rooms. Returns exceed £800 a-year, and capable of extension. Price £375; very moderate. Early sale desired in consequence of ill-health.

PRINTING.—A good well-organised City Business to be taken over in special circumstances, giving the present proprietor important advantages. About £2,000 or less is required for development, and a share in the business is offered. 7½ per cent. guaranteed, with an adequate salary to a suitable man capable of introducing the necessary capital, and undertaking the management of the financial department.

PRINTING, &c.—Central and convenient premises in the City. Rent £50. Net profit quite £300 a-year. Sale necessary on account of ill-health. An adequate plant and stock. About £500 required. A good chance for a practical printer. Early sale desired.

PRINTING, STATIONERY, &c.—North London; good locality. Useful printing plant in good condition. Ground floor office, shop, and two rooms. Rent £26 a-year. Returns have been £20 a-week. Offered very cheaply for £200. No goodwill charged. A rare opportunity.

STATIONERY, NEWS, &c.—Pleasant South London suburb. Post Office. Shop and five rooms. Rent £36. Returns small, but capable of increase. Post Office brings in £60 a-year. A good steady business in central position. Offered very cheaply—all at £200. Early sale desired through ill-health.

STATIONERY, FANCY, &c.—West-End suburb. Fine premises. Double-fronted shop and 11 rooms. Rent £95; let off £30 for one room as office. Returns at high profits, £800 a-year. About £500 required. An excellent opening in flourishing neighbourhood. Should be seen without delay.

STATIONERY, BOOKS, &c.—Main West-End busy thoroughfare. Corner shop and basement. Rent £125 inclusive. Agencies' net profit £65. Business returns £2,000 a-year. Excellent stock. £1,000 required, valuation, or near offer. Proprietor retiring after prosperous career. A well-known pitch.

STATIONERY, FANCY, AND NEWS.—Favourite Essex suburb. Large shop and nine rooms in best position. Rent £65 a-year (worth £120); 18 years' lease to run. Returns exceed £2,500. About £650 required. A rare chance.

REGULATIONS.

1. BOOKS IN PRINT ARE NOT ADVERTISED FOR, but can only appear in the ordinary Column Advertisements and at the usual scale rate. Every care is taken to prevent this rule from being infringed; but we cannot hold ourselves in any way responsible for occasional oversights. Subscribers are requested to make careful inquiry at the Publishers' before sending their lists for these Columns.
2. Only one title will be inserted in each line.
3. Collective advertisements are not admissible, except in the case of very old subjects, where it may naturally be supposed the Advertisers have difficulty in obtaining the titles.
4. All lists should be sent to the Office, addressed to the 'Manager of the Publishers' Circular,' as early in the week as possible, and in no case later than Wednesday morning. Advertisements received too late for one issue (i.e., on Thursday) are not inserted in the next unless express instructions to this effect are given. This is to avoid any misunderstanding arising from charging for extra lines.
5. Every Annual Subscriber has the privilege of a four-line Advertisement free each week in these columns and can have extra lines at 3d. per line prepaid. For Non-Subscribers a uniform rate of 3d. per line prepaid is charged, the name and address being counted as one line.
6. The Proprietors reserve to themselves the right of refusing any Advertisement.

THE LAW RELATING TO FACTORIES AND WORKSHOPS.

By MAY E. ABRAHAM (Mrs. H. J. Tennant), formerly one of Her late Majesty's Superintending Inspectors of Factories, and ARTHUR LLEWELYN DAVIES, of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Fourth Edition, now ready, cloth, 5s.

The passing of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, has made considerable changes necessary in this edition, especially in Part II. The general arrangement of Part I. continues unaltered. That Part now contains a chapter on the effect of the new Act, in which all important changes in the law are indicated. The chapter on Legal Proceedings has been extended to include special reference to Scottish procedure. The changes in the law relating to Docks, &c., and to Bakehouses, and the new provisions which apply to Railways, are dealt with in the chapters on those subjects. A new chapter has been added on Cotton Cloth Factories.

Medical Officers of Health, Sanitary Inspectors, and all those interested in the provisions of the Act to be administered by local authorities, will find a special chapter devoted to their administration. The duties of Certifying Surgeons are also separately considered.

In the notes to Part II. reference is made to all cases relating to the subject of this book which have been decided since the publication of the third edition. A considerable number of recent decisions under the Workmen's Compensation Act, which illustrate the construction and effect of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, have been included. The book contains all Orders of the Secretary of State relating to Factories and Workshops, and a complete list of the Regulations for Dangerous Trades now in force.

The Index has been considerably enlarged.

STATE-AIDED POACHING ON PUBLISHERS' PRESERVES.

At the last meeting of the Council of the Publishers' Association a matter came up which we were requested to bring to the notice of the trade generally, viz. the unauthorised reprinting of copyright matter in publications issued by Colonial Governments.

It appears that for some time past the Education Departments in certain of our colonies have published free educational matter for use in schools. It is questionable whether this State competition with home and colonial educational publishers is wise or fair, and we feel confident that if the matter is properly represented to the heads of the departments concerned they will see that free and fair trade in school books must be better for the schools than any Government monopoly.

As an instance of the kind of thing of which publishers have had to complain we may mention that the Education Department of Victoria, Australia, publishes a very widely circulated monthly called the School Paper. We have before us copies of this periodical from which it is clear that it is intended to take the place of 'School Readers,' each issue being graded for use in different classes, e.g. 'The School Paper for Class I.,' 'The School Paper for Classes V. and VI.,' and so on. In that for Class III. is a poem from one of Messrs. Macmillan's 'Readers,' an extract from Murche's 'Science Readers,' also published by Messrs. Macmillan; an extract from Messrs. Blackie's 'History Readers,' in fact, these disguised primers and readers are largely made up in this way both as regards text and illustrations.

It will be manifest that if the schools of Victoria get these monthly State-supplied 'Readers' they will not require to buy the books from which they are made up—a fact which cannot but be injurious to the interests of authors, editors, publishers and booksellers.

THE ANSWER OF THE DEPARTMENT.

In reply to a request for an explanation as to the appearance of an unauthorised reprint of one of Mr. R. L. Stevenson's poems, the following answer was sent:—

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT,
MELBOURNE, January 14, 1902.

Gentlemen,

With reference to your communication of the 7th November, 1901, asking for an explanation of the circumstance under which a poem by the late R. L. Stevenson was printed in the School Paper issued by this Department, I have the honour to state that the Honorable the Minister of Public Instruction regrets the occurrence, and assures Messrs. Longmans that except through an oversight their rights will not be infringed again.

The Editor has explained that he was quite unaware that anyone would take objection or that injury would be done to anyone's rights by printing in the School Paper one of Stevenson's poems, as they are to be found in many books of selections for children.

'The Land of Story Books' was not reprinted from a publication of Messrs. Longmans, it was in two books recently received, neither of which was published by that firm, and there was no 'By permission' or other acknowledgment connected with it. The only edition of Stevenson's poems he was acquainted with is published by Mr. John Lane, and no firm except that of Messrs. Longmans has written, so far, objecting to an extract from its publications appearing in the little papers we issue.

The Minister would point out that such extracts (which it is the rule to amply acknowledge) introduce to the notice of thousands of teachers and tens of thousands of children books that they would otherwise in many cases never hear of.

I have the honour to be, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,

JAMES BAPPE,
Secretary.

Messrs. Rivington & Son,

1 Fenchurch Buildings,
London, E.C.

It is clear, we think, from this frank letter that the Honorable the Minister of Public Instruction (we regret to see he drops his U) has quite unintentionally taken 'what isn't his'n,' but his plea that his paper is such a 'little one' reminds us of the excuse of the poor girl who had an—accident. The argument that his 'little papers'—which are really monthly School Readers for all the classes in a school—are used by thousands of teachers and tens of thousands of children is likely to open the eyes of other publishers besides Messrs. Longmans to the fact that if they have not yet complained it is high time they did so, otherwise what is to prevent a Minister of Public Instruction administering all his instruction in this way?

WIRE STITCHING.

Some months ago we pointed out that there was quite a fortune awaiting the binder who could invent some better method of binding the monthly illustrated magazines with large circulations than that now in general use. It is impossible to read them comfortably because you cannot open them properly since they are cramped at the waist—like the ladies, who won't admit it. The wire stitches nip the sheets together so tightly that the pages cannot be kept open except by pressure, and then the glazed paper is rounded instead of being flat, giving off reflections from gaslight and daylight which are trying to the eyes. Possibly the difficulty could be got over by a machine which inserted a metal plate in each copy before the stitching was done and afterwards withdrew it: this would give a little slackness in the waist.

THE PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Annual General Meeting will be held at Stationers' Hall, on Thursday, March 20, at 3.30 P.M.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Her Majesty Queen Alexandra has just ordered a set of the Subscription Edition of the 'Story of the Nations' series, which Mr. T. Fisher Unwin is now offering on special terms.

Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. propose to publish a History of England from the Conquest of Britain to the end of the reign of Queen Victoria, in 12 vols. demy 8vo., each containing from 450 to 500 pages. This history is intended to set forth in a readable form the results at present attained by historical research. In its scope the new History will primarily be political, though religious matters must necessarily at certain periods have a prominent place, and important social phenomena of all kinds will be noted, and specially those which have had a bearing on political events. Each of the twelve volumes is to be written by a separate author, but all are to form one book exhibiting unity of design and treatment. In order to secure this unity, Messrs. Longmans have entrusted the editorship of the work to the Rev. William Hunt, of Trinity College, Oxford, and Mr. Reginald L. Poole, Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, and Editor of the English Historical Review. It is hoped that the first volume will be published in January 1905.

Professor Sharman has arranged for the convenience of readers habituated solely to prose fiction a résumé of several of Shakespeare's plays under the title, 'What is Shakespeare?' Comment as well as citation is interspersed with the telling of the story, so that a student unused to the dramatic form may be provided with that exposition of motives to which the novel has accustomed him. For the further convenience of students, examination papers on the plays treated are provided, with searching questions on the substance of each scene. The work is published by the Macmillan Company.

A biography of the late Marquess of Dufferin and Ava is being written by Mr. C. Black, and will be published in the early spring by Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. The work was well advanced before the Marquess's death, and Mr. Black had the advantage of preparing it in personal communication with the late peer, who himself revised portions of the work only a few months ago. The biography will cover the whole period of the life of this great diplomatist, and will be fully illustrated.

One of the features of the March number of the New York Critic is a comprehensive biographical and anecdotal paper on Dr. Henrik Ibsen.

An article of similar importance in the Critic is one devoted to 'The German Reviews' in the current series on 'The Great Reviews of the World.' The text is by Herr Wolf von Schierbrand, who has long been identified with literary and journalistic circles in Berlin, and who sketches with interest and grasp the inception and career of the leading German reviews.

Mrs. Alec Tweedie, whose remarkable book, 'Mexico as I Saw It,' is just being issued in a second edition, will take the chair at the New Vagabonds Dinner on March 20, at the Criterion Restaurant. Lord Stratheona and Mr. Gilbert Parker, M.P., will be the speakers. 'Canadian Literature' is to be the theme.

Miss Frances Kellor, in her work on 'Experimental Sociology,' published by the Macmillan Company, presents a study of delinquents and their treatment, with especial attention to the nature, circumstances, and characteristics of convict women. The book gives a clear account of the methods employed in the scientific investigation of criminality, as well as the difficulties experienced in applying them; and of the methods put into practice, or suggested, for actual reform.

Mr. Max Pemberton's new novel 'I Crown thee King' is about to be published by Messrs. Methuen.

Mr. John Lane sends us a neat little pamphlet entitled 'Mr. Stephen Phillips, the Man and his Work,' from which we learn that 'Mr. Phillips, whose position in the front rank of poet dramatists is undeniable, is the son of the Rev. Stephen Phillips, Canon of Peterborough Cathedral. He was born at Summertown, near Oxford, in 1866, and educated at Stratford-on-Avon Grammar School—where he had every opportunity of imbibing the same atmosphere as the master of the poetic drama—and later at Peterborough Grammar School.' Doubtless Mr. Phillips stands in the front rank of poet dramatists of the present day; but is it not an unkindness to him to compare him even indirectly with Shakespeare?

Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd., have produced a charming thin paper edition of 'The Poems and Songs of Robert Burns,' with a reprint of Carlyle's essay on the poet, and Notes and a Glossary by Robert Ford.

To Messrs. Dent's new Thackeray—an authorised edition, printed in large type—'Henry Esmond' will immediately be added. The novel will be illustrated with nineteen drawings, some in crayon and others in line, by Mr. C. E. Brock, and the portrait of Thackeray by Richard Doyle has been reproduced in photogravure as a frontispiece.

Messrs. Seeley & Co. will publish immediately a new book entitled 'The Naturalist on the Thames,' by Mr. C. J. Cornish, who is intimately acquainted with certain characteristic parts of the river, and who has made careful observations for several years. It contains chapters on 'Bird Migration down the Thames,' 'Some Results of Wild Bird Protection,' 'The Antiquity of River Plants,' 'The Shells of the Thames,' 'Butterfly Sleep,' and many studies of wild life to be found in the waters and on the banks of the river. The volume will be copiously illustrated.

* Is 'shells' a misprint for 'smells'?—Ed.

A meeting of the Society of Public Librarians was held at the Bishopsgate Institute on Wednesday evening, March 5, when Mr. H. J. Hewitt (Chiswick) read a paper on 'The Newsroom.' An interesting and practical discussion followed.

Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co. will continue their new limited library edition of Hazlitt's Collected Works with the third volume containing 'Free Thoughts on Public Affairs' and his 'Political Essays,' which will be ready immediately. Annotation will be furnished by the editors of the edition, Messrs. A. R. Waller and Arnold Glover, and as frontispiece a sketch of Milton's house, No. 19 York Street, Westminster, where Hazlitt resided from 1812 to 1819, will be reproduced in photogravure.

Mr. Joseph Hatton, the author of 'In Male Attire,' 'By Order of the Czar,' and so many other popular novels, will publish shortly a new novel entitled 'A Vision of Beauty,' through Messrs. Hutchinson & Co.

The 27th number of Messrs. Methuen's 'Sixpenny Novelist' is now ready, and contains Mr. W. E. Norris's well-known story 'Giles Ingilby.'

Mr. Baird's 'Life of General Wauchope,' published by Messrs. Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier, has reached a fourth edition, completing an issue of fourteen thousand copies.

'The Second Generation,' by James Webber Linn, now published by the Macmillan Company, is a novel of journalistic life in Chicago. The plot centres round the struggle between the press and a corrupt financier, and throws rather an ugly light on the methods both of journalism and finance in the United States.

The Monthly Review for April will include: 'A System of Education for the Navy,' by Julian Corbett; 'New Light on Napoleon's Invasion Scheme,' by H. W. Wilson; an article on Lord Rosebery and the Liberal Party, entitled 'Cleaning the Slate,' by Robert Dell; 'The French Daily Press,' by Mortimer Owen (the nom de plume of an English press correspondent); 'How to Found a National Theatre,' by T. Sturge Moore; 'On the Giving of Books,' by the authoress of 'Elizabeth and her German Garden.'

'The Keys of the House' is the title of Mr. Algernon Gissing's new novel which Messrs. Methuen are publishing. It is the life story of a secluded imaginative boy, and carries his career up to his marriage.

On Monday next Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge will commence, at their rooms, Wellington Street, a five days' sale of valuable and rare books, MSS., and autographs, many of them of special literary interest. The sale will include selections from the Williamscothe Library, the Earl of Mexborough's, Mr. G. B. Baker Wilbraham's, and other libraries. The gem of the whole is a fine and probably the largest copy existing of W. Caxton's 'The Ryal or Royall Book or Book for a King,' printed at Westminster, circa 1487. This book 'was compyled and made atte requeste of Kyng Phelyp of Fraunce, and translated or reduced out of frensshe into Englysshe by me Wylliam Caxton,' black letter, in Caxton's binding in oaken boards. It was exhibited at the Caxton Exhibition in 1877, and of the other four perfect copies known one was sold at Sotheby's last year for £1,550. There are also two indulgences of Pope Sixtus the Fourth, printed on vellum by Caxton in 1481.

We have received a brochure entitled 'Contributions to the Herpetology of New Granada and Argentina,' with description of new forms, by Edward Cope, being Scientific Bulletin No. 1 of the Philadelphia Museums. It has illustrations of extraordinary frogs and snakes.

Part XI. of the 'Edinburgh Shakespeare,' edited by Mr. W. E. Henley and published by Mr. Grant Richards, will be issued on March 26.

Mr. W. L. Alden's series of papers, 'The Colonel's Cold Truths,' which have been for so long a feature of the contents of To-Day, and which were lately discontinued, are to be resumed at once.

Bookmen.

If any one wants a perfect treasure-house of interesting and beautiful illustrations about one of the most beautiful and interesting places in the world, they should see Mr. Douglas Sladen's 'In Sicily.' Mr. Sladen is an enthusiast in his love of the three-caped island and has the power of communicating his enthusiasm to the reader. Indeed his book will prove a godsend to the shipping and railway companies, for it is certain to direct a stream of travellers to what is, probably, the most perfect existing specimen of what the Greek and Roman world was like.

The March number of the British Workman is mainly noteworthy for Mr. Frank T. Bullen's story of the sea entitled 'The Chums,' but it contains also a good selection of original articles and pictures.

Messrs. Bemrose have in the press, and will issue in a few days, a volume by the Rev. Melville Scott, M.A., entitled 'The Harmony of the Collects, Epistles, and Gospels.' It will show the subject intended by the Church for every Sunday, arranged with notes for teachers and preachers, taken largely from writings of the late Venerable Archdeacon Scott.

'Will o' the Wisp' is the title of a new novel by Mr. John Garrett Leigh which Messrs. Dent are about to publish.

Messrs. James MacLehose & Sons, 60 Vincent Street, Glasgow, send us an illustrated and most attractive catalogue of some manuscripts, rare books, and bindings which they have for sale, including a tall copy of Camillo Agrippa's 'Trattato di Scientia d'Arme' &c., with many illustrations, Rome, 1553—a very fine copy in original vellum binding. The drawings of men fencing are wonderfully good. They have also an original manuscript of Robert Louis Stevenson for sale for £365.

A humorous work, entitled 'The Run of the Season,' which the author, Mr. Finch Mason, has illustrated himself, will be published by Messrs. Treherne & Co. at an early date.

'Parliament: its Romance, its Comedy, its Pathos,' by Michael MacDonagh, author of 'The Book of Parliament,' will be published this month by Messrs. P. S. King & Son, Westminster.

RATTLESNAKE KILLS AN AUTHOR.

In a desperate fight with a gigantic rattlesnake in a curiosity shop in Phoenix, Arizona, on the 11th inst., G. Wharton James, famous as a Western author and scientist, was fatally bitten. Mr. James has written several books on the Grand Cañon of Arizona, and upon basket-making among Indian tribes, in addition to being a valued contributor to museums.

A FAMOUS OLD BOOKSHOP IN WESTMINSTER.

Within a stone's-throw of Buckingham Palace Grounds—in Chapel Street, that is to say—there stands, and has stood for nearly a century, one of the oldest bookshops in London, long known as 'The Grosvenor Library.' It is a house with a history, and one worth recalling.

Long before the days of huge circulating libraries such as are now common, individual booksellers had conceived the notion of loaning out to their more immediate neighbours and others books, in return for a specified annual sum, ranging from two to twenty guineas according to the requirements of the customer.

Chapel Street, Belgravia, which lies in the heart of fashionable London, is not perhaps the most likely spot where you would expect to find business premises. It is one of a series of broad, quiet, and unobtrusive streets connecting what is perhaps the most airy and imposing square in London—Belgrave Square—with its beautiful enclosure of fine forest trees, with that busy thoroughfare which stretches from Hyde Park Corner to Victoria Station, and is bounded all along on the east side by the old garden wall with its chevaux de frise hiding from the eyes of the curious both Buckingham Palace and the beautiful gardens which surround it. It was in the very centre of this street, at No. 35, that one, John Miland, a famous book collector, who died nearly half a century ago, established Miland's Library, which in course of time developed into the well-known Grosvenor Library of to-day. In the house is still preserved a well worn pewter inkstand of ponderous proportions which was used by the founder of the business, and upon the hinged lid of which the initials 'J. M.,' 1790, may still be traced.

In days when people had more leisure, when clubs and newspapers were few, and telegrams and telephones were things undreamt of, 'Miland's' was a place where rank and fashion were wont to assemble, and the bucks and beauties of our grandfather's days met to discuss the events, the gossip, and the scandal of the times. To enumerate them would be tedious, but the names of honoured patrons of a much later period, like the late Duke and Duchess of Teck, frequently accompanied by a little maiden in short frocks, now H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, are recalled as among the many supporters and frequent visitors to the Grosvenor Library.

In due time Miland was gathered to his fathers, but not before he had amassed a very respectable fortune; that, of course, was in days when books were worth selling, and 'discounts for cash' unknown and unheard of. To him succeeded another proprietor, who for more than fifty years more pursued the paths sketched out by his predecessor. More than half a century ago 'Miland's' began to be known as 'The Grosvenor,' and is not to be confounded with a more extensive, yet much younger establishment in the West End.

The premises in Chapel Street contain what is perhaps one of the most curious and interesting collection of books to be found in any circulating library in the Kingdom; for on its many shelves, shelves which occupy every available space from floor to ceiling, may yet be seen first or early editions of many of the most popular writers of fiction, history, and biography, including Fielding, Scott, Barham, Ainsworth, James, Lever, Thackeray, and Dickens, as well as many others whose names and works are household words. Many still bear the old label used by Miland, most of them have been well used, and among hundreds of the old familiar, but now unfashionable, three-volume novels still preserved are many of the best ever penned. The Library, which is supported by some of the oldest families in England, has come into the possession of one whose name is well known in ecclesiastical circles, Mr. G. H. F. Nye, whose 'Popular Story of the Church of England' has already attained a record sale, no less than 500,000 copies being in circulation. Mr. Nye will bring to the Library not only such a ripe experience of books and publishing as will no doubt attract a host of old friends in the neighbourhood, to many of whom he is personally known, but also a fine collection of old and rare works, the property of a well-known collector. Mr. Nye will be remembered by many pupils for courses of lectures at Pepys Hall, and other parts of Westminster, and as Lay Secretary for many years to the Church Defence Society, now merged in the Archbishop's Church Committee. A testimonial was promoted on his behalf, headed by both the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Archbishop of York, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, the Duke of Westminster, the Bishop of London, and many other members of the peerage in the House of Commons. This with a handsomely framed memorial signed by nearly 600 Churchmen, together with a cheque for one thousand guineas, was presented upon his retirement from office. The present proprietor of the Grosvenor Library has entirely modernised the old terms of subscription, and has added to the Library all kinds of new books worth reading, and in other ways brought it into an up-to-date condition suited to the wants of modern requirements.—Westminster News.

WORK OF THE PERMANENT OFFICE OF THE INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF PUBLISHERS.

In view of the almost general renewal of commercial treaties which is taking place at this moment, and of the urgent necessity that the societies of the different countries should act upon the resolution of the Leipzig Congress, the Permanent Office is now endeavouring to bring about concerted action among the various societies in all countries belonging to the Congress with a view to a relief of the existing taxes and duties on books.

Several German associations have already approached the Government of their country in the matter by presenting memorials which were published in the Börsenblatt (No. 302, 1901, and Nos. 4, 6, and 10, 1902). ;

The Permanent Office therefore begs the associations of all the countries to inform it as soon as they can, and if possible by April 1, 1902, of the steps which they have thought fit to take. If, as may be possible, they cannot by then give the result of their endeavours, it will still be useful for the officials to hear what reception they have met with.

A PRINTER BOLD.

Written by Daniel Baker for the First Anniversary of the Franklin Club of Philadelphia, January 7, 1902.

Air: 'A Warrior Bold.'

1. In days of old
When printers bold
Like barons held their sway,
A printer bold,
In search of gold,
Sang merrily this lay:

 'My plant is large and true,
 My type the best that's cast,
 And all my hands so quick and true
 That none with them compare.
 So what care I for prices high?
 I'll work for naught or die;
 So what care I for profit high?
 I'll work for fame or die.'
2. So this brave wight,
With visions bright,
Went gaily to the fray.
He work'd by night,
Till broad daylight,
For things just came his way;
The work all came his way.

 The noisy press-room din
 Was music sweet to him;
 As in his office bare and dim
 He looked for profit there.
 So what cared he for prices high?
 He'd work for naught or die;
 So what cared he for profits high?
 He'd work for naught and die.
3. His price so low
Made profits go,
And credit melt away;
For want of gold
The plant was sold.
While buyers sang this lay,
The buyers sang this lay:

 'His plant so large is worn,
 His type and workmen gone.
 Yet ere he died he feebly cried,
 'I've kept the vow I've sworn.
 So what care I for prices high?
 I've worked for fame and gotten naught,
 I've worked for naught,
 For naught, for naught, I die.'

What the poet sang about 'A Printer Bold' applies with equal force to book publishers. No manufacturer can afford to cut prices and sell books at the bare cost of paper, printing, and binding. The publisher who does business in this way will in time sing the same song as that 'A Printer Bold' sang:

'So what care I for prices high?
I'll work for naught or die;
So what care I for profit high?
I'll work for fame or die.'

His price so low
Made profits go
And credit melt away.
'So what care I for prices high?
I've worked for fame and gotten naught,
I've worked for naught,
For naught, for naught, I die.'

Mr. Baker's poem is a very forcible argument in favour of maintaining prices that will enable manufacturers to make fair profits on the books they publish.

LEATHER FOR BOOKBINDING.

Having perused with much pleasure the report of the committee on this subject, I feel that the moral to be drawn therefrom is still an open one, as it was in 1859, when I read a paper upon the subject of the 'Library: Books and Bindings,' with regard to their preservation and restoration, in our great room at the Adelphi, the discussion on which was adjourned and gave rise to much correspondence.

Things have not greatly changed since that period, for the adage that there is 'nothing like leather' still exists, and for highly ornate bindings, decorated by the use of hot metal tools, no other material is so beautiful, though its endurance can be measured by time.

All leathers seem to be equally good if used in their primitive state and not tampered with by the dyer or by the bookbinder; but then we should lose the glorious hues of the dyes and the beautiful forms of the marbles, and this particularly applies to calf, which is the most used and the most tampered with, though it takes time to develop the cause of this. Calf is often washed with oxalic acid, or polished by hot irons, when shellac varnish might be used; but even then the joints at the back of the books may become brittle, and they alone rely upon the hempen cords on which the book is sewn, and which are drawn into the boards.

With regard to hogshead, that is a material which is to be commended in its undyed state, and though it cannot be worked upon in gold it seems to be less affected by worms, and, if undyed, to continue to be fairly sound at the joints.

This now brings us to the subject of a substitute for leather; and that is not difficult to find in the very great improvement in bookbinders' cloth, much of which has endured since its introduction in 1836, and has outlived the library bindings affected since then. I have now before me a copy of 'Sketches by Box' which is as perfect, as regards durability, as if done yesterday, though the back is faded, the decoration on the sides, marking the transition period, being embossed in imitation of a 'blind' pattern suggested by single-line gouges.

I send you also a specimen of durable binding in buckram, a binding that is devoid of animal or mineral aid, being a vegetable product, save and except the size that may have been used in binding.

As a test of durability the great thing is the hinge, and to test materials stuffs should be subject to a perpetual hinge motion to see which endures the test for the longer period.

Of course, if a high class of decoration with exquisite finish be desired, leather must be used; and if the tooling is to be very fine, then the leather must be as thin as paper, that the heated metal may reveal the sharpest form.

As a destroyer the bookbinder is quite as great a culprit as the carrier, his beautiful tree marbles and inlays being greatly detrimental—indeed, many of the books bound within the last thirty years are only held together by their vegetable sewing and the bands that are 'drawn in' at the hinge.

This brings us to the lasting quality of flax, and the importance of binding in buckram, which is most enduring, samples having been found in the Egyptian tombs, where all leather has perished.

I would note that the samples of hogskin have had imparted to them a morocco grain, and I am told that all leathers suffer soon in warm and hot climates, ants being very destructive to leather and paper, though colocynth or bitter aloes, if used in the paste employed, deters them.

Finally, as to sewing, I say 'ware wire, as damp rusts it. Vellum is an excellent material, and, indeed, books sewn upon vellum bands, with flaxen thread in lieu of sunken saw cuts, have proved most excellent. Nearly every kind of material has been used as a covering for books, including even the peau humaine, which somewhat, in colour, resembles vellum, probably the most durable of all.—JOHN LEIGHTON, F.S.A., in Notes and Queries.

DEATH OF MR. B. F. STEVENS.

We exceedingly regret to announce the death on March 5, at the age of 69, of Mr. B. F. Stevens, the well-known and greatly respected gentleman who has carried on an American library, literary and general agency in Trafalgar Square for so many years. Through this agency many of the literary rarities of the last forty years have found their way into public institutions or private collections on the other side of the Atlantic.

While our readers may possibly best know him from this side of his work, and from the fact that he married Miss Charlotte Whittingham, the book illustrator, and daughter of Charles Whittingham, of the Chiswick Press, of which he himself was for some years a partner, his name will be better known in the future by his researches and publications regarding the early history of the United States, especially of the time of the Revolution. Prominent among these publications was his great series of 'Facsimiles of MSS. relating to America from 1773 to 1783,' in twenty-five foolscap folio volumes, issued in a style which one of the leading American journals at the time said was typical of the resources of a great Government rather than of a private individual. He also found in the Paris Foreign Office the original MS. of 'Christopher Columbus's Own Book of Privileges,' which he published in facsimile in a most sumptuous manner.

Mr. Stevens was one of the best known and one of the most respected American residents in London, having come here in the early sixties, and having filled the office of United States Government Despatch Agent for nearly forty years. He was Chairman of the American Society in London during the first year of its existence, and subsequently until his death its honorary treasurer.

The feelings with which he was held by his fellow members and countrymen were ably expressed in the resolution passed by the General Committee of the Society, which said:—

'We deplore the death of a colleague who, while always loyal to his native land, was a devoted friend to the country in which the greater part of his life was passed, and whose constant care was the promotion of friendship between the people of the two communities. We mourn the absence of a cherished friend, and a companion of scholarly learning, of genuine sympathies, of gentle kindness, and of never-failing helpfulness.'

If any further tribute was necessary, it was found in the large attendance of representative Americans, including Mr. Choate, the Ambassador, and the whole of the staff of the American Embassy, as well as representatives of the British Museum, Public Record Office, and others, at his funeral, which took place at Kensal Green on Monday last.

In 1899 Mr. Stevens took into partnership in his library and literary agency Mr. Henry J. Brown, who has been connected with it for thirty years, and who continues the business under the name of B. F. Stevens & Brown.

THE FIRST PUBLISHER OF 'LES MISÉRABLES.'

In the middle of the last century there were few more familiar names on the covers of French books than that of the Brussels publishing firm, Lacroix, Verboeckhoven & Co. The firm is now almost forgotten, and we thought that M. Albert Lacroix was no longer of this world, until we saw two articles headed: 'Le Roman d'un Roman: "Les Misérables,"' by M. Adolphe Brisson, that appeared in the issues of February 20 and 21 of our contemporary Le Temps, from which we extract some few particulars of the publisher of Victor Hugo's great romance. M. Brisson tells us that Albert Lacroix was, during more than ten years, one of the best known publishers of French books, and was the bookseller, the confidant, and in a measure the disciple of some of the most illustrious writers of the nineteenth century, such as Hugo, Lamartine, Michelet, and George Sand. He also published Zola's earliest novels. He gained millions of francs as a publisher, and then lost them in unfortunate land speculations. Now he occupies a lodging choked with books at the extremity of the Ternes. Books are his sole luxury. He showed his visitor a large box full of documents. 'There,' he said, 'are five hundred unpublished letters of Victor Hugo, which nobody has read, and which I don't wish to give up.' On M. Brisson begging permission to go through them, he rejoined: 'The hour is not yet come. Besides, I must arrange them. Come and ask me another time.' His drawing-room table is covered with manuscripts and maps. He works from early dawn one day until three o'clock the next morning. He is busied in conjunction with Viscount de Caix on an illustrated History of France, in twenty volumes, and also edits a popular scientific encyclopædia. 'It is,' says M. Brisson, 'thanks to the fortunate slender figure with which nature has endowed him that he can fulfil his task. This septuagenarian is as agile and spare as a boy. His hair and beard are white as snow, but behind his glasses shine fiery, shrewd, and ferret eyes. He delights to talk, and tells anecdotes charmingly.' Then he comes to 'Les Misérables.' In 1857 M. Lacroix graduated Doctor of Laws, and obtained the prize for Literature given by the four Belgian universities. Not satisfied with the praise of such distinguished men as Pascal, Duprat, and Edgar Quinet for his essay on Shakespeare and the French Stage, he sent a copy to Victor Hugo. Hugo wrote: 'I shall read your book with pleasure. We have an intellectual religion in common.' Lacroix was resolved to justify Hugo's good opinion. Acting on the advice of Edgar Quinet, he undertook to publish the works of Marnix de Sainte-Aldegonde, and in order to produce it worthily he purchased special printing material, on which he expended his whole fortune, 60,000 francs. But he did not forget Victor Hugo. He heard that Hugo was finishing a book called 'Les Misérables.' M. Lacroix had just taken a partner, M. Verboeckhoven, and he made a vow to himself that the work should be published by the new firm. He wrote to the author declaring himself ready to accept his terms, whatever they might be. The price was 250,000 francs cash for eight years' copyright.

Victor Hugo and his son Charles were in Brussels in August 1861, but the former had quitted the city when Lacroix called to see him at the Hotel de la Poste. Charles Hugo, however, was ready to act as intermediary, and to him his father sent a letter from Guernsey, dated September 5, 1861, stating that the work was unpolitical, and contained no allusion to the Second Empire; that it would fill eight or nine volumes, forming three parts, each having a special title, and which were to appear successively at such dates as should suit the publishers. His revision would be finished in two months. The book might be published in February, and if on February 13 that would be thirty years to a day from the date of publication of 'Notre-Dame de Paris.' The price, 250,000 francs cash for eight years' copyright, with the reservation that no reprint must be made during the last six months. The author also reserved the right of translation. 'If it were wished to buy the right of translation, then the price would be 300,000 francs. I think the produce of the translations everywhere would be considerable. You know that £300 sterling in cash will be paid to me in England for the right of translating the "Légende des Siècles." To the objections of Lacroix's partner that the work was too long and the price too high, Victor Hugo wrote, September 20, that trade facts did not confirm the objection to the length of the story. Few novels were nearly so successful as those three long romances, 'Gil Blas,' 'Don Quixote,' and 'Clarissa Harlowe.' The price quoted by me is about 30,000 francs per volume for a period of eight years. This is very moderate. One single edition of 'Notre-Dame de Paris' (the first illustrated edition published by Renduel in 1836) was leased by me for 60,000 francs. He suggested that Lacroix should visit him at Hauteville House. 'We can do more business in one hour's talk than in twenty letters. He shall see the manuscript. The journey is nothing.' Before leaving on this pilgrimage he so longed to make, Lacroix said to Verboeckhoven: 'I shall not return without having the agreement in my pocket.' 'But we have no money!' 'We shall find it.' 'And suppose we don't find it?' 'We shall never do anything if such trifles deter us.'

When, three days later, at 9 A.M., M. Lacroix was ushered into the great writer's library, he perceived on a shelf his 'Shakespeare et le Théâtre français,' that had earned him a flattering letter in which Hugo hailed him as 'one of the torch-bearers of progress.' He was somewhat grieved to find that a book so highly appreciated was still uncut! The great man had never read it. He could not read everything. The torch-bearer was not offended, and did not owe him a grudge. Indeed, he was too much troubled and excited at the idea of meeting the Master and hearing the sound of his voice. Hugo said he must show the publisher over his island first of all, and after lunch they would talk business. This they did in the 'look out,' a glazed room, which was Hugo's study. The guest, reassured by his host's genial conversation, signed the agreement dictated to him by the poet, but for which, interesting as it undoubtedly is, we have no space. After having signed, Lacroix was seized with misgivings. He had undertaken to pay money without having a sou. 'And then,' he said, 'if MM. Renduel & Gosselin (Victor Hugo's old publishers) insist on their rights, the two first volumes of "Les Misérables" belong to them?' 'Arrange that with them. That is your business.' Then he remembered that he had not looked at the manuscript of the two first volumes, which lay on a corner of the desk. 'May I not look—for a moment—at the manuscript?' Hugo's hand fell on the volumes, and he sharply exclaimed: 'No! It's impossible,' adding irritably: 'Supposing it be only blank paper? I have signed. That's enough.'

Everything turned out satisfactorily. Renduel withdrew his claim to the book. When Hugo sent the last chapter of 'Les Misérables' he wrote: 'If this conclusion does not move the reader I renounce writing for evermore.—V.' 'This "V.,"' said M. Lacroix, means Victory, not Victor.'

RUSKIN—THE NEW COMPLETE EDITION.

We are asked to state that the new complete edition of Mr. Ruskin's works will be published by Mr. George Allen, and will be obtainable in the first instance from him alone. Any circulars which have been or may be issued by booksellers in regard to this edition are and will be without any authority from the publisher, who will, of course, treat with all booksellers, both in London and the country, in regard to copies of the edition on the same terms. A full prospectus of the edition will be shortly issued by Mr. Allen to the trade.

Letters to the Editor

DARWIN'S 'ORIGIN OF SPECIES.'

SIR,—I have just received the following question from a country bookseller:—

'Can you inform me if there is any difference between Messrs. —'s "Origin of Species" and yours, except in the Introduction? Messrs. — say the difference is ONLY in the Introduction.'

As many similar communications have reached us, I would ask you to allow me to say once more, and emphatically, that the statement reported in the concluding sentence of the above quotation is untrue.

In order to set this matter at rest, I will bring forward the evidence of the author himself. Mr. Darwin wrote to his friend, H. Falconer:—

'I suppose you are tired of the "Origin," and will never read it again: otherwise I should like you to have the third edition, and would gladly send it rather than you should look at the first or second edition.'

In other words, the corrections made in the third edition were so important that Mr. Darwin preferred to give away a copy rather than allow a friend to continue to work on its predecessors. Corrections as important were subsequently made in the fifth edition, so that the statement of Messrs. — bears a very sinister meaning when their uncopyrighted editions are compared with the copyright editions authorised by Mr. Darwin's representatives.

I hope you will allow me to give this warning to the trade and to purchasers.

I am, Sir, yours faithfully,
JOHN MURRAY.

THE PROPOSED BOOKSELLERS' BENEVOLENT SCHEME.

SIR,—The pressing necessity of some such scheme as Mr. Brabrook has so opportunely propounded has long been felt, and all honour is due him for giving it expression in the practical way he has done. The thanks of all booksellers' assistants are equally due to you, sir, for your able advocacy of the proposal, and for the right hand of welcome you have so cheerfully given to it.

Not the least of the object lessons to be learnt from Mr. Brabrook's tabulated form is the comparative cost of management of the eight societies he has named. The B.P.I. shows up well for its general economy, but less favourably in the relief given by others in proportion to the funded capital and income.

But, as you pertinently observe in your leader, 'It would be perfectly easy to criticise the details in the prospectus, but the time has not yet come for that.'

Mr. Shaylor, however, devotes his remarks to a criticism on Mr. Brabrook's reference to the want of confidence on the part of assistants to the B. P. I., which is, or was, only too well grounded, and herein he puts his finger on the weakest point in Mr. Brabrook's prospectus—a point the existence of which almost wrecked the infantile life of the B. P. I., which certainly prevented myself, my colleagues, and a great many other 'Row' boys from joining in the early 50's. I am sorry to note that the tenor of Mr. Shaylor's letter only 'damns the new project with faint praise.'

Mr. Rymer, on the other hand, is less a critic and far more practical, and I for one will heartily and readily join him and others in sharing the responsibility for the necessary expense of a preliminary meeting to consider the pros and cons of the scheme.

I will go one more, and though I am a lifelong sufferer from a malversation which has condemned me to work beyond the traditional span of life, I will gladly qualify for an Hon. Life Governor, and be an annual subscriber, if the scheme is fairly floated.

We now await the advent of the man to lead the van. Who will step into the gap?

Yours,

HENRY M. CATER.

ENGLISH HISTORY via AMERICA.

Sir,—I hear that Mrs. Gallup is about to answer her critics of the Times and elsewhere, so that I trust this may be in time to draw her attention to a little bit of her new 'History of England' which appears to require some American explanation.

In Francis Bacon's—or Mrs. Gallup's—'Cypher Story' it is related that Robert Dudley, afterwards Earl of Leicester, contracted a private marriage with Queen Elizabeth when both were confined in the Tower of London by Elizabeth's sister, Queen Mary, in the year 1554. This was, of course, possible but scarcely probable, as the only person who was permitted to visit Dudley was his wife, Amy Robsart, whom he had married in 1550. This Gallupian marriage between Dudley and the Queen was clearly illegal; but, according to Dr. Orville Owen, Mrs. Gallup's coadjutor in the mystery of 'Cypher Stories,' the Queen gave Dudley five days to dispose of his devoted Amy and 'it was done.' This order was given in 1554; but, instead of surviving it only five days, Amy managed to keep alive for other six years till 1560. Then, we are informed in the Gallupian cypher, after Amy's death there was a second marriage between Dudley and the Queen, which would have been legal enough if in those days a sovereign could marry a subject in any but a morganatic manner. In July 1561—a year after Amy's death—Queen Elizabeth told Dudley in the presence chamber she 'would never marry him nor none so mean as he.' (State Papers, Foreign series, July 22, 1561.) This although they had been twice married, according to Mrs. Gallup.

In 1563, the year before Dudley was created Earl of Leicester, his wife, Queen Elizabeth, proposed to Mary Queen of Scots that if she (Mary) would marry the man to whom, according to Mrs. Gallup, she (Elizabeth) had been twice married, she would make him a Duke—an incitement on the Queen's part to the commission of bigamy by Dudley. In 1570, according to authentic history, Leicester strongly supported the proposal that Queen Elizabeth, his wife, should marry the Duke of Anjou—an incitement on Leicester's part to the commission of bigamy by the Queen.

Now, in 1571, what does this doubly-yoked Leicester do? He marries Douglas, the widow of John, second Baron Sheffield! English history recordeth not—American history may—that Leicester invited the Queen, his wife, to this interesting ceremony. A son was born on the following day—Robert, afterwards Earl of Leicester. But this Elizabethan Brigham Young was not yet finished with his married life. While his first wife, Queen Elizabeth, and his second wife, Lady Sheffield, were both alive, he commits trigamy in 1578 by marrying Lettice Knollys, Countess of Essex, the reputed mother of the Earl of Essex, whom Mrs. Gallup claims as the son of Queen Elizabeth and Leicester and as the brother of Francis Bacon. Well, if Leicester was not the father of Essex, he certainly by this marriage became his step-father! This wedding was private; but, according to the cypher, Lettice's father, not liking the look of matters, insisted upon a second and public marriage, which subsequently took place at Wanstead, a demesne presented to Leicester by his obliging first wife, Queen Elizabeth, who visited, we are informed, Leicester and his newly-made Countess (for a second time) shortly after the marriage ceremony, and probably kissed the bride! Leicester tried his best to disown the marriage with Lady Sheffield, but he failed, as Lady Sheffield's son, by order of the court, eventually succeeded Leicester as his legitimate heir and came into the paternal possessions. So here we have Leicester married no less than six times—once to Amy Robsart, twice to Queen Elizabeth, once to Lady Sheffield, and twice to Lady Essex. In the first part of his career he had two wives living at the same time, Amy Robsart and Queen Elizabeth; in the latter part he had three wives living contemporaneously with each other, the Queen, Lady Sheffield, and Lady Essex.

According to modern American history as expounded by Mrs. Gallup, Queen Elizabeth, so far as matrimony was concerned, was a lady of a singularly accommodating and unselfish disposition.

AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS PLEASE COPY.

DEAR SIR,—Why is it that our cousins in the States persistently under-stamp their correspondence to this country? There is a surcharge made on me with every mail. The last mail has just come in, and I have had to pay 5d. for a letter from a Washington publisher and 3d. for one from a bookseller in New York. This is too bad. My postman tells me the two post-offices make a regular fortune annually out of this very bad form of our brethren across the water. Let us hope what is becoming a nuisance will be at once stopped.

P.S.—Enclosed are the two envelopes.

AGGRIEVED.

Edinburgh.

[From long experience we can confirm what our correspondent says. It is a rare thing to get a mail from the States without some letter being surcharged here for insufficient postage. Our plan, when possible, is to debit the amount we have to pay to our correspondent. Perhaps the Publishers Weekly will air this grievance for us.—Ed.]

UNCUT BOOKS.

SIR,—In reply to Messrs. Taylor and Down's letter in your last issue, I beg to enclose you an excerpt from my 'Some Notes on Books and Printing' which may help your correspondents.

Of course this is only my own interpretation of the term, but one I have repeated in other works, and it has never been challenged.—I am, Sir,

Yours obediently,

Chiswick Press.

CHAS. T. JACOBI.

[Here is the extract from his interesting and useful work which Mr. Jacobi kindly sends:

"Uncut" does not necessarily mean that the edges have not been opened with the ordinary hand paper-knife, but simply that the book has not been cut down by machine, a method which sometimes sadly mars the appearance of a book. The expression "unopened" is perhaps better when absolutely untouched.

"Trimmed edges" means that the heads have been left untouched, and the fore-edge and tail merely trimmed sufficiently to make them tidy.

"Cut edges" are those cut perfectly smooth with a machine on three sides, and possibly—even probably—with a total disregard of the margins by the binder, perhaps facilitated by the bad margins of the printer in the first instance.]

INSURANCE AGAINST SMALLPOX.

DEAR SIR,—We have very much pleasure in sending you sample of our latest issue in the shape of a note-book in combination with a smallpox insurance, which at the present time will be of very general interest to the public throughout the country. Its exceptional value will, we think, be obvious, and it is only in anticipation of a very large demand (we have contracted with The General Accident Assurance Corporation, Ltd., for one million copies) that we have seen our way to issue at the popular 1s.

We are, yours faithfully,

CHARLES LETTS & CO.

3 Royal Exchange, E.C.

[The Insurance is for £100 in case of death from smallpox. Those who have not been vaccinated recently ought to be done, or else invest in this small pocket-book and insurance for the benefit of their widows and children.—Ed.]

BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

PATRON—HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

Extracts from the Report of the Board of Directors for the Year 1901.

Your Directors have pleasure in presenting to the members their annual statement of the work of the Institution for 1901, embodying, firstly, an abstract of the receipts and expenditure for the year, and, secondly, for the purpose of comparison, an analysis of the figures for this and the preceding year.

The annual donations of last year were appreciably augmented by amounts received by the owners of certain copyrights which had been infringed and handed over by them to the Institution. This year the sum total of annual donations (including £3. 3s., for an infringement of copyright, kindly sent by Mr. Young J. Pentland) more nearly approaches the average of former years.

Your Directors, as heretofore, pay special attention to the circumstances of each case presented to them, and it will be satisfactory to know that in no case during the past year has assistance been withheld.

THE NEWMAN TRUST.

In September last your Directors were informed of the death of Mrs. Frances Elizabeth Layton—a daughter of the late Mr. James Newman, of High Holborn, one of the earliest members of the Institution—and that by her will dated September 11, 1895, she had bequeathed to the Institution the sum of £1,677 to be held in trust and the income derived therefrom to be applied 'for the whole and sole benefit of unmarried daughters of retail booksellers only from the age of sixty and upwards or an earlier age where necessity requires.' The matter was referred to Mr. Sydney Gedge for his legal opinion, which being favourable, it was resolved that the bequest should be taken over and administered by the Institution on the terms mentioned in the will. The bequest, in accordance with the wishes of the Testatrix, will be known as the 'Newman Trust,' and a scheme dealing with its administration is now under consideration.

The sum of £125 was handed over to the Institution by the Committee of the Booksellers' Provident Retreat. For this and the facilities offered to members for residence during the summer months your Directors return their thanks.

Thanks are due also to Mr. C. J. Longman, Mr. W. E. Green, Messrs. S. Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., Messrs. J. Whitaker & Sons, Ltd., Mr. C. E. Layton, and other friends of the Institution for their kind donations towards the Special Christmas Gifts to the recipients of temporary and permanent relief.

Several members have availed themselves of the kind services of the Honorary Medical Officers, to whom the Directors return their sincere thanks.

Your Directors have to acknowledge their indebtedness to the Honorary Secretary, Sydney Gedge, Esq., for the valuable advice and professional services so freely rendered by him on many recent occasions; also to the Assistant Secretary, whose time and zeal are unstintingly devoted to the interests of the Institution.

SIMPKIN MARSHALL CRICKET CLUB.

The Annual Bohemian Concert of the above club was held on Saturday evening, March 8, at the Falstaff Restaurant, Eastcheap. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. Joseph Shaylor (President of the Club) the chair was taken by Mr. J. T. Watson (Vice-President). There were a large number of members and friends present, who thoroughly enjoyed the excellent programme provided by the musical directors, Messrs. E. T. Mawe and G. H. Rogers. The following artistes contributed to the evening's entertainment: Madame Hettie Whyte (soprano), Miss Nellie Letch (contralto), Messrs. F. W. Turbin and B. C. Tompkins (tenors), Alfred Bentley (baritone), and G. Curtis (bass). The humorous element was very strong, and included such well-known names as Messrs. Gurney Russell, Harry Hall, Charlie Bridge, Bernard Russell, Wilson Martell, Arthur Blount, Bert Graham, Ted Lathorpe, G. H. Rogers, and Ted Honeyman. Mr. Will Cornish gave very fine selections on the silver bells, and Miss Florence Goddard, a violinist of marked talent, performed with great success. Mr. Charles Conyers, a clever ventriloquist, kept the audience in roars of laughter, and Mr. Fred Blake did yeoman service at the piano throughout the evening. With such a host of talent it would be difficult to individualise, but the keen appreciation by which all were so received was sufficient index of their ability. Taken in its entirety, it was the most successful concert held by the club, and reflected great credit on the promoters, especially the musical directors, on whom most of the hard work devolved. Mr. J. T. Watson made an excellent chairman. Quite a noticeable feature was the large number of members of both the wholesale and retail trade present. Messrs. S. E. Dibbs, W. G. Johnson, H. C. Purkiss, H. Wiggins, F. H. Willis, J. W. Tucker, J. Denison, and C. S. Biddick (Hon. Secretary) officiated as stewards.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Barnicott & Pearce, Taunton.

'The Bath and Wells Diocesan Kalendar, 1902.' Edited by the Rev. E. H. Bates, M.A. When we state that no fewer than one hundred and sixty-eight items of information are to be found in the indexed table of contents of this carefully compiled and beautifully printed calendar we hope to be pardoned for not entering into particulars of the multifarious information it contains. The difficulty the editor had in obtaining accurate information—or, in some instances, any at all—may be gathered from his statement in the Preface that 'about ten per cent. of his circulars asking for information met with no response; that from six rural deaneries all came back; from fifteen one, two, or three were missing; while in five the gaps ranged from four to seven.' The Kalendar contains a view of the beautiful cruciform church of St. Mary, Ilminster, together with an excellent map of the diocese and twenty-six sketch maps of rural deaneries, and is produced in a manner worthy of the firm by which it is printed and published.

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—

'Watteau: Master Painter of the Fêtes Galantes,' by Edgumbe Staley, B.A.; 'Holman Hunt,' by George C. Williamson, Litt. D. These further volumes in 'Bell's Miniature Series of Painters' are distinguished by all the good qualities that we took occasion to point out when commenting on previous volumes of the series. Each contains a brief account of the painter's early life, the main incidents in his career, and his chief pictures, of which eight reproductions are given. The material is admirably condensed, and the artistic production of the volumes calls for high praise. Most of the illustrations in the Watteau book are from pictures in the Wallace collection, while the eight paintings chosen to represent Holman Hunt are 'The Light of the World,' 'Valentine rescuing Sylvia,' 'The Hireling,' 'The Scapegoat,' 'The Finding of the Saviour in the Temple,' 'Isabella and the Pot of Basil,' 'The Shadow of Death,' and 'The Triumph of the Innocents.'

From Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd.—

'The Teachings of Dante,' by Charles Allen Dinsmore. Though there is nothing particularly novel in this appreciation of Dante's influence, it yet has individual characteristics that very decidedly raise it above the commonplace. The author shows very convincingly the effects of Dante's early training, the environment of his life, so conducive to the success of his teaching, his chief characteristics, and the place he holds in history. Succeeding portions of the book deal with the message Dante was called upon to deliver to humanity, his conception of sin, and the gradual ascent through the purification of the soul to an acquaintance with the Almighty. We agree with the author that 'Dante is so rich in suggestive symbolism that the temptation is constant to read into his imagery meanings entirely foreign to his thought, and to obscure his most important teachings by mingling them in a mass of instructive but subordinate details,' but we can scarcely acquit him of a considerable tendency this way himself. The book is not so much a new reading of Dante's teaching as an epitome of other writers' views. It is interesting, but hardly convincing.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—'Barry Lyndon,' edited by Walter Jerrold, with illustrations by Charles E. Brock. As Mr. Walter Jerrold truly says, in his appreciative bibliographical note to this latest addition to Messrs. Dent's delightful issue of Thackeray's Prose Works, "'Barry Lyndon" is far from being the best known, but by some critics acclaimed as the finest of Thackeray's works;' and he wonders why the story, which originally appeared in Fraser's Magazine for 1844, was not republished until 1856, and then only as a portion of Vol. 3 of Thackeray's 'Miscellanies.' We suspect that the lack of success on its first appearance was mainly due to the fact of the story dealing so largely with German Court-life intrigues and with the Seven Years' War, about which the general reader sixty years ago knew little and cared less, and, indeed, would have been puzzled to tell whether the Seven or the Thirty Years' War was fought in the 18th century. It may, however, be said of the earlier writings by the author of 'Barry Lyndon'—perhaps because he had so many pseudonyms—that they were not appreciated as they deserved until 'Vanity Fair' took the world by storm. Nevertheless, John Sterling wrote so far back as December 1841 of his 'Great Hoggarty Diamond': 'What is there better in Fielding or Goldsmith? The man is a true genius; and, with quiet and comfort, might produce masterpieces that would last as long as any we have, and delight millions of unborn readers. . . . To which Thomas Carlyle added: 'Thackeray, always a close friend of the Sterling house, will observe that this is dated 1841, not 1851, and have his own reflections on the matter.' Sterling proved a true prophet, as this beautiful edition of the great writer testifies. The admirable designs of Mr. C. E. Brock add a new zest to 'Barry Lyndon.'

From the same.—'The Book of the Prophet Isaiah,' edited by the late Professor A. B. Davidson, D.D., LL.D. 'The Books of Ezra, Nehemiah, and Esther,' edited by J. Wilson Harper, D.D.; and 'The Johannine Books,' edited by the Rev. Canon Benham, D.D. These are further volumes in the attractively produced 'Temple Bible,' to the general features of which we had occasion to speak in terms of high praise when noticing the first volumes of the series. Each contains a scholarly, well-written introduction, embodying the results of the most recent Biblical research, with notes and other information, and each is embellished with a frontispiece reproduction from the work of some distinguished painter. The photogravures in the present volumes are respectively taken from Michael Angelo's fresco of 'Isaiah' in the Sistine Chapel at Rome, Paul Veronese's celebrated painting 'Esther before Ahasuerus,' and Mr. G. F. Watts's picture 'The Rider on the White Horse.' Alike in respect of its reverential treatment, handy size, excellent printing, and dainty binding this edition of the Bible 'in a purely literary form' should meet with cordial appreciation.

From Messrs. R. A. Everett & Co.—'A Bee among Bankers,' by Henry Warren. Mr. Warren, an established authority on banking, deals with two important and interesting subjects in the volume before us, which he has divided into two parts. The first part instructs the reader how to increase his deposit rate and reduce the charges on his current account; the second part describes the position of the Australian, African, and Indian banks in London. In addition to these important matters, which are handled with the ability due to a thorough knowledge of every detail of banking, the author gives caustic and amusing sketches of bank managers and clerks, and of country banking; and tells sad stories of the wretched pay and harsh treatment of clerks by some bank directors. Indeed, the book is as interesting as it is informing; and, being far more brightly written than many a novel of the day, affords a convincing instance of the truth of the familiar saying, 'Truth is stranger than fiction.'

From Mr. William Heinemann.—'The Great God Success,' by John Graham ('The Dollar Library'). The first thing that impresses us in this novel is the exceptional character of the newspaper office in which Howard the hero makes his first bid for success. He is fresh from Yale, and has had no previous journalistic experience—never, in fact, having written a line for type in his life—and yet on the strength of a certain self-assurance he is engaged as a reporter at a salary of twenty dollars a week. His efforts win the approval of the managers, who, without being asked, advance his remuneration to twenty-five dollars a week, and subsequently, when he has only been a few months in the office, place him on 'space,' which means that his salary is more than trebled. Howard next joins the editorial staff of the paper, his abilities being just as generously recognised on this side as they were in the reporting department. And so he gradually rises to be editor-in-chief of the paper, with a princely salary of fifteen thousand dollars a year. Nor does his success stop here. By the death of one of the proprietors he is enabled to take a large financial interest in the paper and becomes its controlling owner. But his success has only been obtained by great sacrifices. It has shattered his early ideals, and been achieved at the loss of much self-respect and domestic happiness. When appointed American Minister to this country, he and his wife happen to find themselves regarding his portrait at the Royal Academy. 'No one recognises them, and some of the bystanders make remarks on the picture. 'There it all is,' says one, summing up the character of the man, 'hypocrisy, vanity, lack of principle, and, plainest of all, weakness.'

It's a common enough type among your successful men. The man himself is the fixed market price for a certain kind of success. But according to the painter, this ambassador of yours seems to know what he has paid; and the knowledge doesn't make him more content with his bargain. He has more brains than vanity; therefore he's an unhappy hypocrite, instead of a happy self-deceiver.' Howard and his wife slip guiltily away. The price paid for success has indeed been a heavy one.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—'The Apostles of the South-East,' by Frank T. Bullen. This is no ordinary book, albeit its author modestly styles it an 'endeavour to present a picture of a phase of London life that is not very widely understood or even realised.' To our mind—and having resided during many years in the East and South-East of London, we may perhaps venture to offer an opinion—this book gives a remarkably accurate picture of the self-denying labours of poor, hard-working Londoners to reclaim and elevate those around them. The scene is Rotherhithe, and most of the characters are not much more cultured or wealthy than Jemmy Maskery, the chimney sweep, of Lupin Street, an industrious man and preacher and practiser of righteousness, but who, being poor, has been driven with his fellow worshippers to hold gospel services in the open air. Their own private worship had been conducted in Jemmy's little front-parlour, wherein the dozen brothers and sisters composing the 'Church' could just manage to squeeze themselves with a great deal of discomfort. When the story opens Jemmy has just heard that part of a building—formerly used as a cowshed, but now disallowed by the County Council as filthy and insanitary—is to let for £15 a year. Jemmy resolves to secure this for the Wren Lane Gospel Mission. In Mr. Bullen's bright and hopeful story is chronicled how the poor chimney sweep set to work to achieve this good but apparently unattainable object by one in his position, how he is backed up by that hearty seafarer, Saul Andrews, a sort of converted Captain Cuttle (although we doubt if Captain Cuttle needed conversion), and other good and true men and women, and how he prospered. There is plenty of incident, both on land and sea, in this tale, whose characters, the author says, are drawn (and very well drawn, too) from life, and which is told with the conviction and sincerity of one who knows and is thoroughly in earnest. From every point of view this is a thoroughly good book.

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—'China and the Powers: a Narrative of the Outbreak of 1900,' by H. C. Thomson. A considerable portion of this interesting volume is devoted to an account of the investment and bombardment of the foreign settlements at Tientsin, and the assault and capture of the Tientsin native city; but the author is a little wrong in supposing these events have not been described before, for in our issue of February 15 we reviewed a work by Midshipman Gipps, of the 'Orlando,' in which he gives a very vivid description of the fighting at Tientsin, taken from his own personal experiences with the British contingent. Mr. Gipps, we notice, is mentioned on page 48 of the present work, where the author refers to the great responsibility thrown during the Chinese war on junior naval officers, and Admiral Seymour's official commendation that he 'was almost continuously in charge of a gun at an outlying and dangerous portion of the defences, and displayed at all times great coolness and ability,' is quoted. Regarding Mr. Thomson's volume, it impresses us principally by reason of its absolute impartiality. Where credit is due to the Foreign Powers the writer unhesitatingly awards it, but he is by no means blind to the claims of the Chinese. The infringement of their civil rights and the scant courtesy paid to their religious beliefs are very justly considered. Religion may be said to be at the foundation of their intense hatred of the 'foreign devils,' and operated largely in producing the recent outbreak. Missionaries are very good people, but they are sometimes wanting in tact. Even the new railways did something towards fomenting Chinese anger, for as they do not bury their dead in cemeteries, but indiscriminately here and there, each family having its own little burial place, it follows as a matter of course that every railway would be certain to come across a large number of graves during its construction, and in this way one of the most cherished of Chinese beliefs—the worship of their ancestors—would be outraged. It was also at one time popularly supposed that in order to make the railway bridges secure it was necessary to bury children under their foundations! The precipitate taking of the Taku forts was, in the opinion of the author, the cause of much of the disturbance that afterwards arose, for it is to be noted that until this event took place none of the Imperial Chinese troops had sided with the Boxers, nor until the surrender of the forts was demanded had the Chinese Government made any hostile movement. Mr. Thomson enters so thoroughly into both sides of the question, treating the events of the outbreak in so judicious a spirit, that his book will not only prove interesting to readers, but will in many respects enlighten them as well. The chapters on 'The Missionary in China' are especially worthy of consideration, and he has much also that is valuable to say on the treatment of the Chinese troops, the value of the Indian army as an Imperial factor, the policy of the Powers in China, and allied subjects. The volume contains thirty illustrations, mostly reproduced from photographs, and two excellent maps.

From Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co. Ltd. (Heidelberg: Julius Groos).—Modern Persian Conversation-Grammar, with Reading Lessons. English-Persian Vocabulary, and Persian Letters, by the Rev. W. St. Clair-Tisdall, M.A., and 'Portuguese Conversation-Grammar,' by G. C. Kordgien and E. Kunow. These are new volumes in the admirable series of educational works designed to carry out what is known as the 'Gaspey-Otto-Sauer' method of instruction. Mr. St. Clair-Tisdall has for many years lived in Persia as a representative of the Church Missionary Society, and is also the author of previous works on Oriental languages. The present manual shows a very practical and scholarly arrangement of his subject, and the treatment is admirably clear and lucid. The Reading Lessons given at the end of the book are taken in part from Sad Hikayat and in part from the Journal of the late Shah's Third Visit to Europe, but the style of the former book being now a little antiquated, and many of the words used in it obsolete, it has been re-written by Mirzā Asadu'llāh. Messrs. Kordgien and Kunow's work is not deserving of less praise. The authors exhibit a thoroughly sound knowledge of the Portuguese language in all its elementary stages, and they have the gift of imparting instruction in simple, easily comprehensible form. Both volumes should meet with great and well merited success.

From Messrs. E. Marlborough & Co.—'Hindustani Self-taught,' by C. A. Thimm. F.R.G.S. Following up their excellent succession of educational manuals in the 'Self-taught' series, Messrs. Marlborough have now issued a work on Hindustani. It supplies rules for correct pronunciation, vocabularies, colloquial phrases and dialogues, travel talk, commercial, military, legal, sporting, and naval terms, money tables, weights and measures, &c. Mr. Thimm has manifestly prepared his work with a very practical knowledge of the requirements of the beginner in Hindustani; and not only should it be useful to the student, but to travellers, officials, soldiers, and traders generally.

From The Modern Language Press.—'The Pictorial French Course,' by D. J. Rees, edited by Paul Barbier, Officier d'Académie Univ. Gall. This is a course of thirty lessons based on pictures, in which each object is given a number, and the description given in French beneath. The course is especially suited for the use of private students, and the number pictures furnish a novel and easy method of acquiring a familiarity with the French language.

From Mr. John Murray.—'Christ our Life: Sermons chiefly preached in Oxford.' By R. C. Moberly, D.D., Regius Professor of Pastoral Theology in the University of Oxford, Canon of Christ Church, Chaplain in Ordinary to the King. The keynote to this volume is struck by the text which the writer of these sermons has placed in the forefront of it: 'When Christ, who is our life, shall be manifested, then shall ye also with Him be manifested in glory.'—Colossians iii. 4. First among these twenty-seven discourses is one of surpassing interest and beauty on Peace preached in Hursley Church on the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the sacred edifice where the saintly author of 'The Christian Year' so long ministered to the spiritual needs of his parishioners, and who was himself an object lesson of the reality of that peace which the world cannot give. The last of these sermons was preached at Cuddesdon on June 4, 1901, on the occasion of the death of the late regretted Bishop of Oxford, Dr. William Stubbs, and the subject, as appropriate as that of the first, is on 'Enthusiasm for Truth.' The sermons are one and all as valuable as might be expected from so able a master in theology as Dr. Moberly. Such a volume should find a place on the shelves of all theological students and divines.

From the same.—'The Trial of Man: an Allegorical Romance.' The writer of this novel—a woman, we imagine—has set herself a difficult task, and if she scarcely accomplishes it to entire satisfaction, oftentimes failing to rise to the sublimity of her theme, and becoming a little laboured and monotonous, great credit is due for the bold attempt she has made. She depicts an imaginative high-souled monk, Brother Martin, 'a man not loved by his fellows in the monastery, who called him a visionary because his thoughts were devoted to less mundane objects than were theirs, and a foolish star-gazer because night by night he betook himself to the roof of the monastery to study the ways of the moon and planets,' who is transported by the Almighty to Heaven, and is there entrusted with a mission to another world, where he is to be the founder of his race. Just as Adam was tempted, so is Brother Martin, though not exactly in the same way. He valiantly resists all the attacks of the evil angels, but falls through self-pride at the moment of victory. He then has to pass a period of expiation, and when dying apparently returns to his previous state of communion with the heavenly hosts. The story is very refined in its conception and displays great wealth of imagination, but the subject would tax the powers of a much more able novelist. The authoress, we notice, in her Preface makes cordial acknowledgment of the assistance Mr. Murray has rendered her during the building of the book. 'His suggestions,' she says, 'have been most valuable, and I have not hesitated to act upon them all, for I recognise (as too few writers, alas, do) the great assistance which a publisher of culture and experience can give.' From a publisher's point of view this acknowledgment is very welcome, for as a rule his part in the production of a book nowadays is entirely ignored by the author.

From the Religious Tract Society.—'The Boy's Own Paper,' and 'The Girl's Own Paper,' are periodicals that, like certain wines, appear to improve with age. They were always good; they are now better. The March numbers of these magazines, which now lie before us, exhibit a suitability and fascination of literary contents, combined with a profusion of illustration, that should render their advent among the juvenile population a matter of joyous anticipation. Every variety of taste seems to be catered for.

From the same.—The Leisure Hour for March contains a capital story by Max Adeler, called 'The Persecution of John P. Tadcaster,' who, having taken up his abode at the quiet little town of Borax in order to study Spanish, and having incautiously rejoined to the question, 'Are you a Doctor?' by inquiring 'What's the matter,' has an accident thrust upon him, and, having successfully treated it, has to undergo strange persecutions from would-be patients and the resident physician. Among the contents of an excellent number are: 'Sir Michael Hicks-Beach,' by James Baker; 'Thomas Faed, R.A.,' by Walter Hodgson; 'Behind the Granite Gateway,' by W. Scott King, an account of Dartmoor Prison; 'Crime amongst Animals,' by Tighe Hopkins; and 'Heroes of Civil Life,' by G. F. Millin.

From Messrs. Sands & Co.—'The National Sporting Club: Past and Present,' edited by A. F. Bettinson and W. Outram Tristram.

'The purpose of this book is to treat of Boxing and Kindred Sports from the standpoint of the National Sporting Club. For it would seem that the great national pastime of Englishmen cannot be more comprehensively viewed than from the vantage ground of an Institution which is at once its asylum and its centre.' These sentences are from the introductory chapter entitled 'Bill of Fare,' and though we cannot find ourselves in agreement with the editors as to Boxing being 'the great national pastime of England,' yet we think that their method of treating their subject is excellent. The first part of the book consists of a short account of the history of the Club House from 1664 to 1856, and the second part lucidly relates the doings of the Club during the last ten years. There are numerous photographs of notabilities in the sporting world.

From MM. Schleicher Frères, Paris.—'Histoire des Bourses du Travail: Origine, Institutions, Avenir. Ouvrage posthume de Fernand Pelloutier. Préface par Georges Sorel. Notice biographique par Victor Dave.' Few men have crowded so much work for others into a lifetime of thirty-three years as did Fernand Pelloutier, who, born at Paris October 1, 1867, died there on March 13, 1901. He was always delicate, and contracted during a three years' stay at the little seminary of Guerande the disease of which he died. He was miserably fed and cared for, the sanitary arrangements were deplorable, and for the most trifling offences the severest punishments were inflicted. He finished his studies at the College of Saint-Nazaire from 1883-86. While still there he collaborated on the 'Démocratie de l'Ouest.' He read much by day and night, not only to gain knowledge, but also to distract his thoughts from that terrible malady, tuberculous lupus of the face, with which he was afflicted. Pelloutier by his indefatigable exertions in the press and on the platform did much to ameliorate the condition of the working classes, although he himself, a scion of an old proscribed Huguenot family, belonged to the bourgeoisie, a class which he himself detested. His greatest work was undoubtedly the founding of the Paris Bourse du Travail, which was speedily followed by the creation of so many others in the provinces. The object of this institution was primarily to find situations for workmen; but, in addition to this, the bourses had libraries, courses of lectures on scientific, technical, and economic subjects, and also lodged travelling workmen, and, in a word, did all that was possible to provide for the needs of workers. This history is full of information about the French working-man, and very much may be learnt from the preface of M. Georges Sorel and M. Victor Dave's pathetically interesting biography of Pelloutier.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—"Prosperous" British India," by William Digby, C.I.E., professes to be a revelation from official records, but we do not think the author justifies his ironical title or proves what he sets out to prove. It is a study of India under British rule, and calls the attention of the reader to the fact that India is subject to a 'rapidly-growing and now alarming impoverishment of both country and people.' The author says that the writing of this book 'has been the hatefulest and most painful duty I have ever performed,' and we can well believe him. It is full of statistics, maps, plans, &c., and the amount of labour and care spent on the volume must have been prodigious.

NEW EDITION.—Messrs. Macmillan & Co. have published 'Esmond' in their new uniform edition of Thackeray's works. The volume is beautifully printed on good paper, and has an exceptionally neat binding. Considering its moderate price, this edition of Thackeray should warmly commend itself to the public.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

. In addition to the names of book sizes, such as cr. 8vo., royal 8vo., &c., the sizes are also given where possible in inches: inch=2½ centimètres.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS

The Scenery of England

AND THE CAUSES TO WHICH IT IS DUE.

By the Right Hon. LORD AVEBURY,
F.R.S., D.C.L., LL.D.

With numerous Illustrations, Diagrams, and Map. 8vo. 15s. net.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—'A narrative far transcending in interest the most ingenious work of fiction. . . . We would willingly, did space permit, follow Lord Avebury's fascinating treatise further. Townsfolk and countryfolk alike will derive a fresh zest for scenery from its perusal. It is admirably and copiously illustrated.'

More Tales of the Birds.

Demy 8vo. 15s. net.

Pilot.—'Once in possession of his formula, he applies it resolutely to old and new. As with some space-penetrating telescope, he sweeps the universe, ranging over histories and institutions until he has revealed the connection between our present-day problems and the past out of which they have arisen—nay, not only, or even chiefly, that, but the bearing on them of future developments, as yet described in their potency, not in definite form. Thus the whole volume exhibits what may be termed a drama of thought.'

TRADE LISTS SENT ON RECEIPT OF TRADE CARD

REGULATIONS.

1. BOOKS IN PRINT ARE NOT ADVERTISED FOR, but can only appear in the ordinary Column Advertisements and at the usual scale rate. Every care is taken to prevent this rule from being infringed; but we cannot hold ourselves in any way responsible for occasional oversights. Subscribers are requested to make careful inquiry at the Publishers' before sending their lists for these Columns.
2. Only one title will be inserted in each line.
3. Collective advertisements are not admissible, except in the case of very old subjects, where it may naturally be supposed the Advertisers have a difficulty in obtaining the titles.
4. All lists should be sent to the Office, addressed to the 'Manager of the Publishers' Circular,' as early in the week as possible, and in no case later than Wednesday morning. Advertisements received too late for one issue (i.e., on Thursday) are not inserted in the next unless express instructions to this effect are given. This is to avoid any misunderstanding arising from charging for extra lines.
5. Every Annual Subscriber has the privilege of a four-line Advertisement free each week in these columns and can have extra lines at 3d. per line prepaid. For Non-Subscribers a uniform rate of 3d. per line prepaid is charged, the name and address being counted as oneline.
6. The Proprietors reserve to themselves the right of refusing any Advertisement.

A New and Valuable Work specially written for the Guidance of Depositors, Merchants, and Business Men generally.

A Bee among the Bankers

OR,

How to Increase your Deposit Rate and Reduce your Bank Charges.

BY

HENRY WARREN,

Author of 'How to Deal with your Banker,' 'Banks and their Customers,' 'Your Banker's Position at a Glance,' &c.

Mining Journal.

'A book on the banks from so well-known an authority as Mr. Warren cannot fail to be both interesting and instructive.'

Aberdeen Free Press.

'The book contains much judicious observation that is worth the attention of the Scottish readers, widely as the Scottish banking practice differs from the English in some important respects.'

Scotsman.

'Should prove profitable reading to persons who have money to invest.'

Lloyds.

'The book is written in a bright and breezy style which makes it eminently readable.'

Bristol Mercury.

'Mr. Warren has some very pointed things to say about bankers in general, and does not hesitate to criticise very severely some of their methods.'

Reynolds Weekly Newspaper.

'The volume is full of practical information by one who knows what he is writing about.'

Northern Whig.

'This bee among the bankers is certainly liberal in the use of his sting. We are naturally not in a position to verify the accuracy of much of Mr. Warren's evidence, dealing as it does with the inner administration of English banking, but it is safe to say that if things are as bad as he declares, the sooner Mr. Morgan comes along with another big trust and buys out the British joint-stock bank monopoly the better it will be for the country.'

Publishers' Circular.

'Indeed, the book is as interesting as it is informing; and, being far more brightly written than many a novel of the day, affords a convincing instance of the truth of the familiar saying, "Truth is stranger than fiction."'

Liverpool Courier.

'Bankers should really combine and see if it is possible by some means to obtain Mr. Warren's goodwill, as otherwise, should people having dealings with banks faithfully follow his advice, they will in course of time be forced to put the shutters up.'

Liverpool Journal of Commerce.

'Mr. Henry Warren has, in his latest work, made clearer than ever to the investor and the bank depositor his position with regard to his banker. As the title indicates, the book is a veritable "Bee among the Bankers," for it enables men to appreciate their rights and secure them in their banking transactions.'

A GUIDE TO THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACTS, 1875 & 1890, AND THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACTS, 1888 & 1891, with the Incorporated Acts relating to Urban and Rural District Councils, together with the Private Street Works Act, 1892. By L. GACHES, L.M.M., B.A., Barrister (Counsel to the Associations of District Councils). 3s. 6d.

'The arrangement of the book is admirably suited for reference, every subject receiving separate treatment.'—DAILY NEWS.

'It forms a handy, useful, and reliable volume.'—LOCAL GOVERNMENT JOURNAL.

THE LAW RELATING TO FACTORIES AND WORKSHOPS.

By MAY E. ABRAHAM (Mrs. H. J. Tennant), formerly one of her late Majesty's Superintending Inspectors of Factories, and ARTHUR LLEWELYN DAVIES, of the Inner Temple Barrister-at-Law. Fourth Edition, now ready, cloth, 5s.

The passing of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, has made considerable changes necessary in this edition, especially in Part II. The general arrangement of Part I. continues unaltered. That Part now contains a chapter on the effect of the new Act, in which all important changes in the law are indicated. The chapter on Legal Proceedings has been extended to include special reference to Scottish procedure. The changes in the law relating to Docks, &c., and to Bakehouses, and the new provisions which apply to Railways, are dealt with in the chapters on those subjects. A new chapter has been added on Cotton Cloth Factories.

Medical Officers of Health, Sanitary Inspectors, and all those interested in the provisions of the Act to be administered by local authorities, will find a special chapter devoted to their administration. The duties of Certifying Surgeons are also separately considered.

In the notes to Part II. reference is made to all cases relating to the subject of this book which have been decided since the publication of the third edition. A considerable number of recent decisions under the Workmen's Compensation Act, which illustrate the construction and effect of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, have been included. The book contains all Orders of the Secretary of State relating to Factories and Workshops, and a complete list of the Regulations for Dangerous Trades now in force.

The Index has been considerably enlarged.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS. With Introduction and Notes by A. F. KIRKPATRICK, D.D., Master of Selwyn College, Cambridge; Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Cambridge. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

The edition of the Psalms prepared by Professor KIRKPATRICK for the Cambridge Bible for Schools having been completed and published in three volumes, the whole work is now also published in a single volume. The page is larger than in the separate volumes, and, a thinner paper being used, it is thought that this edition will be found convenient in size and that many readers will prefer it to the separate volumes.

CAREY

St. James's Gazette.—'Miss Rosa N. Carey's stories have attained a reputation that is at this time beyond criticism . . . she is a skilful story-teller.'

Daily News.—'Miss Carey's fluent pen has not lost its power of writing fresh and wholesome stories.'

Lady's Pictorial.—'Miss Carey's stories are like the good wine that needs no bush. She has a very large public, and it will gladly welcome a cheap edition of her stories.'

The Lady.—'Miss Carey's stories are always welcome; they are out of the common run, immaculately pure, and very high in tone.'

Christian Leader.—'Rosa Nouchette Carey does a good work in so often sending forth these delightful pictures of attractive maidenhood. Her heroines are all taken from the ranks of doers, not dreamers; consequently they are depicted as peacefully and contentedly attaining, by the faithful discharge of the duties which lie nearest to them, a higher ideal than can ever be the lot of those who strive to be clever and do great things, while neglected little duties strew the path through life.'

THREATENED WOOD-PULP FAMINE IN THE UNITED STATES.

'Resolved, That the American Newspaper Publishers' Association ask Congress to abolish the duty on wood-pulp, mechanical ground wood, and lumber used in the manufacture of paper, and that the duty on news print paper be reduced.'

If anything could enhance the importance of such an announcement as this, it would be the fact that, according to the American Nation, this resolution expresses the unanimous wish of the press of the United States. When the American press is unanimous, and when it is so in wishing for the abolition of a Duty, we may be certain the shoe pinches. If there is one thing the average American citizen thinks it is his duty not to do, it is to take off a duty, he hates doing it as it is a confession that he is beaten, that the demand for some necessary product has outrun the supply.

Anyone who has not watched the sunrise on the mountains and volcano-craters of the moon through a good telescope has not seen one of the grandest objects for wonder and speculation within mortal ken—or, at any rate, sight. What strikes an observer who traces the course of the lunar Apennine valleys leading down to the Mare Serenitatis and the Mare Vaporum, are what appear to be the ruins of wood-pulp paper mills. If our supposition is correct, then it is easy to see that if the Americans take that duty off, the earth will before long undergo the change which the moon has experienced.

'The material for the manufacture of wood-pulp (spruce logs) is becoming scarce in the United States. No increase of supply is possible except from foreign countries. Canada and Norway have large forests of the kind of timber suitable for wood-pulp. . . . The movement for free wood material for paper-making will be supported by all the newspapers of America,' so says the Nation.

When the forests of Canada and Scandinavia have been consumed by the paper mills like those of the United States, then the rivers will begin to dry up, clouds will no longer form, and our neighbours on the moon will have no more difficulty in seeing that our paper mills are to let than we have that theirs are. This will mean the extinction of the halfpenny newspaper, if not of the human race.

We asked the representative of a large English paper manufacturer of what material the paper on which the New York Nation is printed was made. He asked for a match, set fire to a piece, watched the effect, and said 'pine pulp,' and assured us that he could not from Norwegian pine make a paper quite so good. We have since tried the fire test, and find that a wood paper gives a strong, shiny, crinkly black ash—if one may so term it; you can lift it up easily without breaking it, and it 'rustles' like a lady's silk-lined silk dress. Then we tried a bit of rag paper, perfectly good and strong and unfaded, although nearly three hundred years old; it gave a dull soft dark-grey ash which crumbled at the least touch. And, come to think of it, it is curious that a piece of black coal should give a white ash, and a piece of white paper a black ash.

What our farmers want is some crop which is very prolific, costs nothing to grow, and will make paper; nettles are very prolific, cost nothing to grow, but will they make paper? We do not know, but it is clearly everybody's duty to suggest something, for, as the Nation says, 'The very scarcity of the material favors a combination of the paper manufacturers. As soon as the latter can control the supply they can advance the price, and may be forced to do so, even against their will.' With which comforting, not to say stinging, remark we leave the matter.

BYSSUS FLAMENTIS FOR PAPER-MAKING.

It surely is an extraordinary coincidence that after writing the last line in our first article this week, almost by accident we took up 'Spence's Anecdotes,' and turning the leaves over backwards came on a letter in the appendix from Sir Alexander Dick to Spence, dated Prestonfield, March 6, 1762, in which he says:

'What do you think I am busied about now? first let me tell you in shortening the way to Durham at least twenty miles, and co-operating with many others, in getting a fine bridge over the Tweed at Coldstream, and in making the ways and paths elegant, peaceable, and pleasant, elegant I say, for you know 'tis part of my scheme for public Roads in countries, that the gentlemen of property should plant at proper places, and at proper distances, noble clumps of trees of all sorts; to dignify the look of the land.'

'In the second place, I have the vanity to rank myself amongst the list of Inventors: for, be it known unto you, and to all men whom it may concern, that my daughter and I have found out, (for we can do nothing without one another), a most surprizing tho' very common plant, which when I sent it in quantities to the paper mill produced 12 quire of this paper which you see here enclosed: the plant is that green sort of filamentous stuff, called by Linnaeus in Latin "Byssus flamentis," which you see on the ponds and lakes, in the heat of summer:—and is in immense quantities in my Loch of Dudingston. It is true; it is of a brown colour in the paper; but as you see likewise in the specimen of the dried fibrous plant, (of which my Daughter made a Hat, before it was sent to the paper mill,) it is much whiter; and we imagine can be bleach'd. Our friend Mr. Hamilton the Bookseller at Edinburgh; is greatly charm'd with this experiment; and has been very useful in making it at his paper mill. It bears writing, and notes of Musick, without blotting in the least, and I am convinc'd, had the ancients known it they would have preferred it to the papyrus of Egypt.—I am just sending, by our new Member for Edinburgh, some sheets of it for Lord Bute, who is very curious in Botany, for which we made him lately an honorary fellow of our College of Physicians here.'

In subsequent letters Sir Alexander refers to getting much whiter paper from his Byssus. It has often occurred to us that some kinds of fresh and salt water weeds which are found in immense profusion might be utilised in paper-making. Perhaps Sir Thomas Wardle, who has made a special study of fresh-water plants, would oblige us with a note on the subject—he is quite as much interested in experiments and improvements as Sir Alexander Dick was.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

A special article on 'Thomas Somerscales,' by A. B. Daryll, with six reproductions of pictures by this artist, will appear in the Magazine of Art for April. This part will also contain 'Our Rising Artists: Eleanor Fortescue-Brickdale,' by Marion Hepworth Dixon; 'Our Graphic Humourists: Robert Seymour,' by George Soames Layard; 'Professor Von Herkomer's Centrepiece' and 'T. Sidney Cooper, R.A.' The frontispiece will consist of a Rembrandt photogravure of Thomas Somerscales's picture, 'Off Valparaiso.'

The forthcoming—April—number of the English Illustrated Magazine is the first of a new volume, the first, in its turn, for which Mr. Fisher Unwin is solely responsible. Mr. George Moore's 'Golden Apples' is illustrated by Mr. Frank Chesworth. Mr. Birrell and Seumas MacManus also contribute, and other attractive features are announced. The series of Artistic Monographs is continued by Mr. Bensusan, who writes pleasantly of Dutch and Flemish Masters in the Museo del Prado. Travel is well represented by Mr. F. J. Pike, and the theme 'Morocco' is more fresh than is often the case in this class of subject. Besides these, 'Ping-Pong' continues its course under direction of the Queen's Hall champion. We also note three new features—the opening chapters of a serial by that master of adventure Mr. Louis Becke, a literary and general causerie by W. Pett Ridge, and, grâce aux dames, a fashions supplement from the qualified pen of Miss Mabel Beardsley, in which the ladies will find four charming drawings of 'nouveau-tés.'

Two new volumes of Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.'s 'Temple Bible' will contain 'Deuteronomy,' edited by the Rev. G. Wilkins, M.A., B.D., Professor of Old Testament Literature, Trinity College, Dublin; and 'Samuel,' edited by James Sime, M.A., F.R.S.E. They will appear immediately.

Literature has become incorporated with the Academy, which is the property of Mr. John Morgan Richards, the father of John Oliver Hobbes. . . The Academy has had a distinct policy under the editorship of Mr. C. Lewis Hind, who possesses the knack of associating himself with clever writers. Its policy is not always one which has commended itself to the expert, but the paper is thoroughly readable. . . The field for scholarly criticism is now monopolised by the Athenæum, which is owned by Sir Charles Dilke, and is being brilliantly edited by Mr. Vernon Rendall, a young Cambridge man. Meanwhile the Times is issuing a literary supplement of the same shape as the one published by its New York namesake.—J. M. Bullock, in Scribner's Book Buyer.

The Athenæum is becoming delightfully human—more human every week. For instance, in a notice of Mr. Quiller-Couch's novel, 'The Westcotes,' last week it says: 'When we settle down to a novel and a pipe we feel that, as the dying American soldier said, "This is not the moment to come asking a man conundrums."' We should like to know what tobacco the Athenæum smokes (possibly 'Varsity Mixture'), and if it prefers a meerschaum, briar, or a long C—h W—n.

Messrs. Humphreys & Co., of Worcester, kindly send us this note:—

The following is taken from a newspaper nearly 160 years old:

'Stratford-upon-Avon, Nov. 23, 1742.—This Day is Published, a Catalogue of the Library of the late William Somerville, Esq., of Edston in the County of Warwick; consisting of many curious and valuable Books in most Branches of Learning: Which will be sold cheap (the lowest Price being put on the first Leaf of each Book) at the Shop of Thomas Pasham, in Stratford-upon-Avon, on Thursday, the 25th Day of November, 1742, and the Sale to continue till all are sold. Catalogues may be had gratis at Thomas Pasham's, Bookseller, at Stratford-upon-Avon, and at his Shops at Evesham and Alcester, every Market-Day; at the George in Shipton; the George in Campden; at the Swan in Henley; and at the Cross-Keys in Warwick. Ready Money for any Library or Parcel of Books.'

This was the library of the poet of 'The Chase.'

'The Consolation of Philosophy,' by Boethius, first translated by King Alfred, and now rendered into modern English by Mr. W. V. Cooper, B.A., of King's College, Cambridge, is the latest addition to Messrs. Dent's 'Temple Classics.'

On April 15 Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack, of Edinburgh and London, will publish Part I. of a new and very fully illustrated serial entitled 'Cricket of To-Day.' Each part is to contain a coloured frontispiece of some famous Flannelled—Cricketer &c., and many other illustrations. We wish the venture every success.

Under the title of Britain at Work, Messrs. Cassell & Company will commence the issue next month of a new publication descriptive of our national industries. The work will be popularly written by writers possessing a special knowledge of the subjects they undertake, and will be profusely illustrated from photographs.

The Easter number of the Art Journal deals with the life and work of Dante G. Rossetti. Miss Helen M. M. Rossetti, a niece of the artist, has undertaken the letterpress. There will be over fifty illustrations, of which three will be plate reproductions of the following subjects: 'Paolo and Francesca,' 'The Beloved,' and 'A Christmas Carol.'

The April number of Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.'s new monthly, The Country, will contain, in addition to the usual expert articles on gardening, sports, and country matters generally, several items of particular literary interest, including a poem by Mr. Eden Phillpotts, an essay by Mr. Charles Marriott, the author of 'The Column,' and an illustrated article on 'Elstow and John Bunyan' by the Rev. A. J. Foster, M.A. There will be some thirty or more illustrations, including a previously unpublished portrait of Sir Edward Grey, who is a distinguished angler as well as politician.

Mr. W. Pett Ridge, author of 'A Son of the State' and 'Mord Em'ly,' has in his new novel 'Lost Property' related the adventures of a foundling baby, who through many troubles finds her way to success and happiness. The scene is laid among some of Mr. Pett Ridge's well-known haunts, and the book is a cheerful one. Messrs. Methuen will issue it almost at once.

To Messrs. Dent's 'Mediæval Town Series' will almost immediately be added a volume on Cairo, written by Professor Stanley Lane-Poole. The work will pleasantly combine the historical with the topographical in the well-known manner that distinguishes this series, and it will be fully illustrated from drawings by Mr. J. A. Symington and from photographs.

An exceptionally fine and apparently almost unique copy of Hogarth's Works came up for sale at Messrs. Hodgson & Co.'s rooms in Chancery Lane last week. This was a copy of Cook's edition published by Stockdale in 1812, with the plates beautifully coloured throughout by hand, all being in a remarkably fresh and bright condition. The volume was entirely uncut and in the original half-binding, with a paper label on the front cover showing that it was originally issued at 100 guineas. It was purchased by Messrs. J. & E. Bumpus for £91.

Young people are to have a special worklet on the Coronation ceremony 'all of their own,' after a perusal of which they will probably know more about the coming great event than their elders. Its title will be 'The Bairn's Coronation Book,' and it will form the third volume of their treasured 'Bairn Books.' Mr. Charles Robinson will provide some dozens of coloured pictures, and the volume will be published by Messrs. Dent.

'A Heart of Flame,' by Mr. C. F. Embree, is a new novel which Messrs. Methuen will publish in a few days. It is a story of Mexico, and turns on the craft and crime of a priest.

Messrs. Harrison & Sons, 59 Pall Mall, S.W., will shortly re-issue Banting's celebrated work under the title of 'The Rational Cure for Corpulency.' The work has been revised and brought up to date with copious notes.

Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co. have in the press a volume entitled 'The Spindle-Side of Scottish Song,' by Jessie Patrick Findlay.

H.M. the King has accepted from Mr. G. H. F. Nye, of the Grosvenor Library, Chapel Street, Belgrave Square, a fine bound copy of the Coronation Service as used at the Coronation of the late Queen Victoria.

The Easter Number (April) of the Pall Mall Magazine is to be the handsomest number that has yet been published of this fine magazine. The front cover is daintily printed in brown and peacock green after a design by Mr. J. Walter West. The feature of the number is a most interesting article on the weaving of the King's mantle of gold, illustrated with some fine drawings by F. C. Dickinson and by photographs. The frontispiece is a new and remarkably good portrait of Lord Salisbury, and there is a very pretty coloured inset by A. Dampier May, 'Sweetest Eyes were Ever Seen.' Mr. I. Zangwill contributes a complete story, which Mr. M. Greiffenhagen illustrates, and an article on the young King of Spain is copiously illustrated.

In Chambers's Journal for April there will appear Robert Burns' narrative of the exploits of King James V. of Scotland, entitled 'The King Explores'; and 'More Recollections of Sir Walter Scott' contains unpublished material descriptive of Sir Walter as he appeared in the Court of Session, illustrated by two heads of Scott sketched by John Sheriff in 1825, selected from a dozen done by this artist, now in the Edinburgh Municipal Museum. An article, 'Rev. John Rutherford, Yarrow,' describes a maternal ancestor of Scott; the other articles include 'London's Great Landlords.'

The Atlantic Monthly for March is unfortunately delayed on account of the sheets being on board the s.s. Etruria.

Here is an interesting item which we do not remember to have noticed before in any bookseller's catalogue—

SHAKESPEARIANA—BOADEN (J.)

An Enquiry into the Authenticity of Various Pictures and Prints which have been offered as Portraits of Shakespeare, with a fine proof mezzotint portrait by CHARLES TURNER, and four engraved portraits of Shakespeare, large paper copy, 4to. calf, rebound, excessively scarce, £4. 10s. 1824

From the Hornby Library.

It is in the No. 124A Catalogue of Mr. Edward Howell, of 83 Church Street, Liverpool, which contains many other items of great interest.

If we are to receive the testimony of the Critic (New York) Mrs. Gallup is not hailed as a prophetess in her own country. In fact, the Baconian champion is made game of in certain profane 'Galluping Verses' in such strain as this:

'Behold,' they exclaim, 'our God Bacon.
Great Heavens! the labors he'd take on:
He spent all his days
Writing other men's plays,
Full Gallup, with never a break on!'

His Grace the Duke of Hamilton is one of the latest purchasers of the Subscription Edition of the 'Story of the Nations,' which Mr. T. Fisher Unwin is now offering at special reduced rates.

Messrs. F. E. Robinson & Co. will publish next week the first volume of their 'Stuart' series, Dr. Bates's 'Elenchus motuum nuperorum in Anglia, 1649,' edited by Mr. Edward Almaek, F.S.A. The text is printed direct from the MS., and gives a graphic story of the king's last years, written by his physician. The handsome binding, chosen by Mr. Cyril Davenport, is an exact reproduction of that of 'Almanacks, 1624,' which was bound in vellum for Charles, Prince of Wales, with his feather badge. The photogravure frontispiece shows Charles shortly before his execution. There will be only 320 copies of this book on sale, and the subscription list for all the volumes of the series is being rapidly filled.

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin publishes this week a new edition of 'Ranch Life and the Hunting Trail,' by the President of the United States. The book, which was first published some thirteen years ago, has passed through several editions. In it Mr. Roosevelt describes from personal experience the life and scenery of the great grazing lands of the West.

Mr. Eneas Mackay, bookseller, Stirling, announces for publication in the autumn 'Eight Centuries of a Scottish School,' a History of the Grammar and High School of Stirling from the Twelfth to the Twentieth Century. The work, written by Mr. A. F. Hutchison, who was for thirty years rector of the school, is the result of long-continued research among the local records, municipal and ecclesiastical, and the examination of many other sources of information, manuscript as well as printed. While it may naturally be expected to have the greatest interest for former pupils of the school, it is likely also to have considerable value as a contribution to the general history of education in Scotland.

The 18th thousand of 'Ping-Pong: the Game and How to Play It,' by Arnold Parker, the winner of the Queen's Hall Championship, will be issued by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin next week. A special value is given to the book by its numerous diagrams.

Messrs. Blackie & Son contemplate a revised and cheaper re-issue of Kerner's 'Natural History of Plants,' a work which in its English form is identified with the name of Professor F. W. Oliver, of University College, London.

Mr. Wellby announces that, owing to Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons' arrangements with regard to the American edition, he is obliged to postpone the publication of Benjamin Swift's new novel, 'Ludus Amoris,' till April 2.

Messrs. Tillotson, of Bolton, have obtained the services of Miss C. O'Connor Eccles for a regular London Letter that will appear in some of the best weekly newspapers.

Dr. R. F. Horton, M.A., has just completed the manuscript of a book to be entitled 'The Dissolution of Dissent,' which will shortly be published as Vol. 2 of Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell's 'Free Church Library.' Dr. Horton's book will be looked forward to with exceptional interest, the principal topics dealt with being 'A National Loss,' 'The Nature of the Loss,' 'The Centre of Contention,' 'Re-union,' and 'The Testimony that may not be Surrendered.'

The New York Nation says that 'since his Chesterfield speech Lord Rosebery has been letting "I dare not" wait upon "I would."'

The death of Sir Richard Temple removes from our midst one of the most interesting personalities of the nineteenth century. Sir Richard served his country well; his good work will live after him as well as a pleasant memory of him by all who knew him.

Would old age pensions be useless? The new edition of Mr. B. S. Rowntree's 'Poverty: a Study of Town Life' which is being published this week by Messrs. Macmillan contains, among other fresh matter, an important chapter on 'The Probable Effect of Old Age Pensions upon Poverty.' By means of statistics drawn from an investigation of the economic conditions of many thousands of families, the author shows that poverty in general would only be relieved in an infinitesimal degree by the granting of universal pensions after, say, 65 years of age; and that it is upon the children, not the old folk, of the working classes that poverty falls most cruelly. This startling conclusion may be challenged, but evidently, if established, it will seriously modify certain lines of social reform agitation.

'The Oven' is the title of a new novel by a new writer, Mr. Guy Thorne, which Messrs. Greening & Co. have accepted for early publication.

Messrs. Griffith, Farran, Browne & Co. send us sixpenny editions of 'The Young Buglers,' by G. A. Henty, and 'The Three Admirals,' by W. H. G. Kingston, in really attractive covers printed in colours.

Laurence Sterne's 'A Sentimental Journey' is the next volume in Messrs. Methuen's 'Little Library.'

BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

The Annual General Meeting was held at the Sunday School Union, 56 Old Bailey, on Thursday, March 13.

Mr. Charles James Longman, the President, was in the chair, and stated in the course of his address that although the report and balance sheet which had just been presented were, in many respects, as satisfactory as those of former years, he would have liked to see a much longer list of new members. He suggested a plan for the consideration of the directors, by which he thought the advantages of membership might be more effectively brought before the notice of the younger members of the trade who had not yet joined than at present. He referred also to the late Mrs. F. E. Layton's bequest to the Institution of £1,677, the income of which is to be used for the purpose of assisting needy daughters of retail booksellers.

Mr. J. Shaylor concurred in the remarks of the chairman, and thought that the report contained many facts which were cause for gratification, and referred to a somewhat pleasing incident which, as it happened recently, was not mentioned in the report. The widow of a member (who himself had been in receipt of assistance for some years before his death) had written to say that her sons were now grown up, and considered themselves in a position to undertake the entire support of their mother, and that, in consequence, she would not now require the assistance which she had received for many years from the Institution. He thought this an example worthy of imitation by those who might be placed in similar circumstances, and that the incident, pleasing and gratifying in itself, reflected great credit on all concerned, including the Institution.

The report and balance sheet were adopted; the usual resolutions appointing the officers and directors of the Institution were passed, and a vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding was carried unanimously.

BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT RETREAT.

The Annual General Meeting was held at the Sunday School Union, 56 Old Bailey, on Thursday, March 13.

Mr. W. Bartram (in the absence of the Treasurer, Mr. W. E. Green, through indisposition) was in the chair.

Reference was made to the satisfactory nature of the report and balance sheet, and the benefits which the Retreat offered to aged members of the Institution or their widows, and to the fact that the houses and grounds were kept in good order.

The balance sheet and auditor's report were received and adopted, and the usual resolutions appointing the officers and committee for the ensuing year were passed.

SALE JOTTINGS.

Messrs. Hodgson & Co. included in their sale last week, in addition to the Hogarth mentioned elsewhere, the following items of interest: 'The Coronation of George IV.,' by Sir G. Naylor, £23 (Sotheran); Fores's 'Coronation Procession of Queen Victoria,' a coloured panorama 60 feet long, £7. 10s. (Maggs); Pyne's 'History of the Royal Residences,' coloured copy, 3 vols., £23. 10s. (Maggs); 'The Houghton Gallery,' 2 vols., J. Boydell, 1788, £18. 5s. (Roche); Nattes's 'Views in Bath,' coloured, £12 (Bain); Malton's 'Picturesque View of Dublin,' £7 (Karslake); Sams's 'Tour through Paris,' £9 (Hill); George Cruikshank's 'Gaieté de Paris,' coloured plates, with Descriptions by W. H. Ireland, oblong, £46 (Denham); Blackmore's 'Lorna Doone,' First Edition, 3 vols., £25. 10s. (Sotheran); Dickens's 'David Copperfield,' presentation copy to the Honourable Mr. and Mrs. Watson, to whom the work was dedicated, £30 (Sabin); Shelley's 'Laon and Cythna,' 1818, £17. 5s. (Dobell); Lamb's 'Elia,' 1823, £18. 5s.; the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine, 1856, in the original numbers with the wrappers, £20 (Maggs); Rossetti's 'Ballads and Sonnets,' large paper, £11. 10s. (Wesley) and 'Collected Works,' 2 vols., large paper, £12. 10s. (Sotheran); Tennyson's 'In Memoriam,' 1850, £5. 2s. 6d. (Denham); Pater's Works, Édition de Luxe, 9 vols., £7. 7s. 6d. (Dobell); Racinet, 'Le Costume Historique,' 8 vols., £8. 10s. (Parsons); Lacroix, 'Les Costumes Historiques de la France,' 10 vols., £8. 10s. (Quaritch); La Fontaine, 'Contes et Nouvelles,' 2 vols., 1762, £21 (Bain); Boccaccio, 'Le Décameron,' 5 vols., 1757, £18 (Sotheran); Dorat, 'Fables Nouvelles,' 2 vols., large paper, £25 (Quaritch); Gerarde's 'Herbal,' 1597, £15; A Thirteenth Century MS. with Illuminations, £64 (Tinkler).

A HISTORY OF PRINTING IN FRANCE.

On the occasion of the Paris Exhibition of 1900 the National Printing Office, desirous of affirming its technical superiority, resolved to produce a history of printing in France in the 15th and 16th centuries. The first two volumes, comprising the History of Printing and Bookselling in Paris in the Fifteenth Century, are just ready, and form a complete history of the printer's art in that period, which has never before been treated in its entirety, especially with regard to illustrations. In this history appear in chronological order and in exact facsimile the rarest books, dispersed in public and private libraries throughout the world, and now for the first time brought together, with reproductions of their most remarkable illustrations and illuminations printed in gold and colours. These illustrations number more than 3,000, and include alphabets of all the types used by the French printers of the 15th century, and thus supply the key to many bibliographical problems hitherto found insolvable. M. A. Claudin, the author, has added to the bibliographical information he has collected notes taken from unpublished documents on the personality of the various printers, on the precise dates of their labours, their marks and devices, the situation of their printing offices, their signboards, &c. The work, when completed, will form about five volumes small folio.

The Publishers' Association.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING.

Mr. Fredk. Macmillan (President) took the chair at the Annual Meeting of the above Association, held at Stationers' Hall on Thursday afternoon. The following members were also present—Mr. George Allen, Mr. Edward Ball (Messrs. George Bell & Sons), Mr. James Blackwood (Messrs. Wm. Blackwood & Sons), Mr. George T. Brown (Messrs. Isbister & Co., Ltd.), Mr. W. W. Callender (Messrs. A. & C. Black), Mr. C. Felix Clay (Cambridge University Press), Mr. F. J. Cross (Messrs. Cassell & Co., Limited), Mr. F. J. H. Darton (Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co.), Mr. Joseph W. Darton (Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co.), Mr. S. B. Walter Gay (Messrs. Gay & Bird), Mr. Henry George (Mr. Young J. Pentland), Mr. F. G. Green (Messrs. Dean & Son), Mr. William Heinemann, Mr. T. Houlston (Messrs. Houlston & Sons), Mr. R. Brimley Johnson, Mr. O. Kyllmann (Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd.), Mr. C. J. Longman (Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.), Mr. F. Macmillan (Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), Mr. R. B. Marston (Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.), Mr. D. S. Meldrum (Messrs. Wm. Blackwood & Sons), Mr. A. E. Miles (Messrs. Simpkin & Co., Ltd.), Mr. F. H. Miles (Messrs. Simpkin & Co., Ltd.), Mr. Arnold L. Mumm (Mr. Edward Arnold), Mr. John Murray, Mr. Ernest Paige (Messrs. Moffatt & Paige, Ltd.), Mr. W. H. Parmenter (Messrs. H. Virtue & Co., Ltd.), Mr. Sydney S. Pawling (Mr. Wm. Heinemann), Mr. F. E. Percival (Messrs. Rivington & Co.), Mr. Grant Richards, Mr. H. Perry Robinson (Messrs. Isbister & Co., Ltd.), Mr. J. Shaylor (Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Limited), Mr. Reginald J. Smith (Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.), Mr. Edward Stanford, Mr. Walter Symons (Messrs. Blackie & Sons, Ltd.), Mr. T. Fisher Unwin, Edward H. Whitaker (Messrs. J. Whitaker & Sons, Ltd.), Mr. G. H. Whitaker (Messrs. J. Whitaker & Sons, Ltd.), Mr. Wm. Poulten, Secretary.

THE ANNUAL REPORT.

The Annual Report was taken and read as follows:—

In presenting the Report of its proceedings during the past twelve months, the Council of the Publishers' Association is glad to be able to refer to the continued success of the Net Book Agreement, the ratification of which in 1899 is the most important piece of work that the Association has accomplished—a work so important that if it stood alone it would have been enough to justify the formation of the Publishers' Association.

The Net Book Agreement has now passed its experimental stage, and may be regarded as an established basis for the conduct of bookselling in the United Kingdom. Sporadic cases of breach of the agreement do occasionally occur, but they are generally unimportant, often due to inadvertence or misconception, and are almost always remedied without difficulty by the action of the Council in concert with the Associations of Wholesale and Retail Booksellers. It is needless to say that the adjustment of these little difficulties involves much correspondence and anxious work on the part of the Council for which there is little to show in a Report.

The Copyright Bill.—The inclusion of a Bill to amend the Law of Copyright among the measures recommended to Parliament by his Majesty the King in his first Speech from the throne at the beginning of last year raised hopes which were unfortunately unfulfilled, and the absence of any reference to this important measure in the Speech of this year caused a corresponding disappointment to those interested in the protection of literary property. Your Council is now in communication with the Copyright Association, the Authors' Society, and other bodies interested in literary property, with the view of urging on the Government the importance of carrying out the pledges as to this matter to which they are committed.

In this connection the Council may observe that they have been in communication with the Secretary of State for India, asking him to put pressure, through the Government of India, on the Native Princes to adopt in their own territories the provisions of the new English Copyright Bill whenever it shall become law, in order that the rights of authors may be as fully protected in the Native States as in British India. The replies that have been received from the India Office on this matter have been most satisfactory.

The Fourth International Congress of Publishers was held in Leipzig in June last, and was attended by several members of this Association, including, as special delegates, the President, Vice-President, and two other members of the Council, Mr. Heinemann and Mr. F. J. Cross.

The most important work of the Congress was the establishment of a Permanent Office with its seat at Berne, consisting of representatives of all the countries participating in the Congress, and having as its Secretary Monsieur Henri Morel. The Office is already engaged in carrying out the resolutions of the Congress, and circulars have been addressed to various Governments with a view to bringing about much needed changes in customs duties, postal regulations, and other imposts on books. Mr. John Murray, President of the Third International Congress, was elected as the representative of Great Britain, and the Council have pledged this Association to provide for the next three years a sum towards the general expenses of the Office equal to that provided by France and Germany respectively.

The Trade Dinner.—A dinner, organised by this Society and the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland, was held at the Hotel Cecil on May 10, with the President in the Chair, and Mr. Keay, Chairman of the Associated Booksellers, in the Vice-Chair. It was attended by a large and representative body of Publishers and Wholesale and Retail Booksellers.

Dates on Title-pages.—It will be remembered that one of the earliest Committees which was appointed by this Council was instructed to deal with this question, and a series of recommendations was sent round to the members of this Association. The Council are glad to note that on the whole those suggestions have been carried out, but occasional instances of carelessness in this direction have been brought to their notice, and they take this opportunity of impressing upon members of this Association the importance, both for their own credit and in the interests of bibliography, of being careful that they issue no book or pamphlet which does not bear on its title-page the date of the year in which it was first offered for sale.

The Colonial Agents continue to do very useful work on behalf of owners of literary property.

Meetings of the Council.—Under the Rules of the Association meetings of the Council must be held quarterly, but in view of the amount of work to be done it has been found necessary to call meetings at least once a month, except during August and September. In addition to this, many questions that require investigation are submitted to specially appointed Committees, which report to the General Council. A Committee to inquire into the question of Copyright in Photographs has lately been appointed, and it is hoped that its deliberations will produce results of much interest to members of the Association.

Increase of Members.—The number of members last year was 68: one withdrawal has taken place and three new firms have joined, so that the present membership is 70.

In accordance with Rule IV., Mr. Macmillan vacates the office of President, and Mr. John Murray that of Vice-President, which they have held for two years.

On behalf of the Council,

FREDERICK MACMILLAN, President.

March 13, 1902.

The President said: Gentlemen, the General Annual Meeting which, in accordance with our rules, we hold to-day, is the fifth that has taken place since the foundation of our Association, and concludes the sixth year of its modest but useful career. It may appear to some of you that the career of the Publishers' Association is an uneventful one, indeed I have heard it whispered that members of our body have from time to time been known to say that they 'get very little for their money,' as the expression goes. If they suppose that the proceedings at a General Meeting are to be taken as a measure of the work of the Association, their attitude is not to be wondered at. I hardly see how it could be otherwise. The hard work of a society of this kind must be done in Committee, and lively and exciting General Meetings are not likely to be held unless things are going wrong and the members are at loggerheads with one another—a state of things which might perhaps provide material for entertaining paragraphs in the public press, but which would not be conducive to the continued usefulness of the Association. As a matter of fact, I believe that the existence of the Publishers' Association has been and is likely to continue to be of immense value to the trade, both directly and indirectly; directly, in the influence that it can exercise on its members and on the persons with whom its members have dealings, and indirectly inasmuch as its existence makes it possible for properly authorised persons or collections of persons to discuss and settle questions of importance with the publishers of Great Britain and Ireland as a body, instead of having to deal with a number of scattered individuals who had enjoyed no opportunity of forming a common opinion, and who were unable to promise common action. Undoubtedly the most important piece of work that has been accomplished during the past six years is the general introduction of the net system. As you are well aware, the Association was slow to act in this matter, and devoted nearly four years to considering how it could best help the retail trade to recover from the unfortunate condition into which it had been brought by years of reckless and disastrous competition. Having decided that the remedy was to be found in the net system, the Association took immediate steps towards its introduction, with the result that it has been for over two years established on a firm and lasting basis, to the satisfaction of the bookbuying public and the immense advantage of the retail trade throughout the kingdom. You have most of you seen, I dare say, some statistics with regard to the publication of net books during 1901 which have been circulated by the Council of the Associated Booksellers. The accuracy of these statistics has been impugned, but, roughly speaking, I do not think they are far wrong, and from them we learn that out of a total of some 7,900 books issued during the year over 2,300 were published at net prices; and, what is more remarkable still, that while the total amount of the selling prices of the books issued during the year was £2,194, the net books alone account for £983, or considerably over two-fifths of the whole sum. You will remember that at our last meeting it was suggested that the net system should be extended to all magazines and books issued in parts, and in accordance with that suggestion your Council went carefully into the question, but reluctantly came to the conclusion that, as many of the firms interested in the magazine trade, both as publishers and as wholesale and retail dealers, were not members either of this or of the Booksellers' Association, and that as some of them were known to be antagonistic, it would not be wise to make any movement in that direction at present. There is another direction, however, in which it seems to me it might be worth while to move, and that is with regard to the supply of books to public libraries. As you are aware, under present arrangements booksellers are precluded from offering any discount whatever off net books supplied to public libraries, but there is no restriction as to the price of subject books, and cases have more than once been brought before the Council in which dealers making tenders for the supply of public libraries have violated the spirit of the agreement while keeping to its letter by offering excessive discounts off subject books—in fact, by deducting from them the discount they are prevented from taking off the net publications. It seems to me, at all events, to be worth considering whether some action might not be taken with regard to that, but I quite see that there are a good many difficulties in the road. It has been the principle of our Association from the very first to have two classes of books—net books and non-net books, and we have not attempted to put any restriction upon the non-net books, and I do not quite see how this particular difficulty can be got over. At the same time I do think it very hard on the honest dealer tending to supply a public library that he should be undersold and should lose his contract owing to another person not being so straightforward, and who uses what cannot but be described as underhand means. I merely throw this out as a suggestion and a thing which will have to be thought about, it is not a question for the Council but for the whole Association, and requires very serious consideration before any action is taken. You will notice that on page 4 of the Report of the Council, which is in your hands, it is stated that a deputation to the Government is contemplated for the purpose of urging on them the importance of pressing forward with the long-promised Bill to amend the Law of Copyright. I am glad to be able to tell you that since the report was in type this deputation has taken place, with very satisfactory results. On Tuesday last Mr. Murray, Mr. Longman, and I presented a petition on behalf of this Association to Mr. Gerald Balfour, President of the Board of Trade, in his room at the House of Commons. At the same time petitions which were almost identical with ours were presented on behalf of the Copyright Association, the Society of Authors, and the Music Publishers' Association. Mr. Balfour received us very cordially, and assured us that if, as was stated to be the case, the difficulties with the Canadian Government, which have so long stood in the way, have been removed, the Government will without any doubt introduce and will pass a Copyright Bill during next session of Parliament. You will observe a statement on page 6 of the Report to the effect that the Council has pledged this Association to subscribe towards the expenses of the Permanent Bureau at Berne. The sum for which we have made ourselves responsible is £100 per annum, that being the sum which had been guaranteed by the trade Associations of France and Germany respectively. It did not seem to your Council that it would be fitting for the guarantee from Great Britain to be less in amount than that from the other great Powers, and the burden of the subscription will not fall entirely on the shoulders of this Society, as the Associations representing the music trade have agreed to be responsible for one-third of the amount. A recommendation as to dates on title-pages appears in the Report, not for the first time. The Council is happy to note that there has been a great improvement in this matter since attention was first called to it. There are, as you know, two kinds of title-pages which we consider objectionable and beneath the dignity of the trade which we represent. First, there are the title-pages which are ante-dated, so that a book which is really published in December 1901 appears to have come out in 1902. This mild attempt to prolong the youth of a book resembles the practice of encouraging two or three straggling hairs to lie over an otherwise bald scalp, and is about as effective. Secondly, there are title-pages with no dates at all. In the case of ordinary books the absence of a date merely renders them bibliographically valueless, and unworthy of the consideration of any right-minded buyer of books. In the case of certain publications, however, which partake of the nature of guide books, the omission of a date often amounts to little less than a fraud. In conclusion, gentlemen, allow me at the end of my second term as President of this Association to thank you heartily for the honour you did me in re-electing me at the end of my first year, and for the indulgence you have shown towards me during the whole of my term of office. To my colleagues on the Council I beg to offer my hearty thanks for the kind assistance I have always received at their hands.

Mr. Houlston seconded the motion, and it was carried unanimously.

PAYMENT OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Longman moved That Rule XIII. of the Association be altered by substituting for the words printed in italics the words "in arrear at the date of the Annual General Meeting."

EXPULSION OF MEMBERS.

XIII.—The Council shall have power to remove from the list of Members the name of any firm, company, or individual who may become bankrupt or in their opinion act in any way that is detrimental to the interests of the Association, or whose subscription shall be more than one year in arrear, provided two-thirds of the Council are present when the vote is taken.

Any firm, company, or individual so removed from the list of members of the Association shall have power to appeal against the decision of the Council at the next General Meeting, provided that notice of intention to appeal be given within three weeks of the decision of the Council being communicated.

He pointed out that the object of the alteration was to get the subscriptions in by the date of the Annual Meeting, which was not clear as the Rule was framed at present. The penalty of non-payment would be that those not having paid up could take no part in the meeting.

Mr. W. Heinemann seconded the motion, which was carried.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The meeting proceeded to the election of President, Vice-President, and Treasurer, and Messrs Shaylor and Bell acted as scrutineers.

Mr. C. J. Longman was elected to the office of President, and, in thanking the members for the honour done him, said he looked forward to a considerable increase in the work, and he only hoped he would be able to acquit himself with the same satisfaction to the Association as had undoubtedly been felt during the successful and prosperous presidency of Mr. Macmillan.

Mr. Macmillan was elected Vice-President, and briefly acknowledged the compliment paid him.

Mr. Murray was elected to succeed Mr. Longman as Treasurer.

In thanking the members for his election, Mr. Murray said he would have liked someone else to take office. Mr. Longman had fully expressed their ideas with regard to the retiring President and the excellent work he had done, and the fact that the Association had worked so smoothly was due in a great measure to Mr. Macmillan; he thought it would meet the wishes of all if he proposed a cordial vote of thanks to the retiring President.

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin in seconding the motion said he sat on the Council with Mr. Macmillan from the foundation of the Association up to a year ago, and so had known him both in council and from outside, and had seen his work. He would assure his fellow-members that Mr. Macmillan had been one of the most valuable workers in carrying out the ideas of the Association, particularly in its early days, when they had to study very seriously the whole question of the net system. No one knew more about it than Mr. Macmillan, who was one of the pioneers of the principle.

Mr. Longman in putting the motion said the last speaker had touched on a point which was really one of the essentials of the success of Mr. Macmillan's presidency, which was his thorough knowledge of the subject. If there was anything Mr. Macmillan did not know about the trade of publishing it was not worth knowing, and that fact, coupled with his unruffled temper, his courtliness, and kindness to everybody, certainly made his presidency most successful.

The motion was carried, and Mr. Macmillan responded, remarking that it was a great pleasure for him to act as President for two years. With regard to what Mr. Longman had said, there was one thing he did not know, which was how to make a speech at the spur of the moment and express what he really felt.

THE COUNCIL.

As the result of the ballot for the Council the following were elected:

Messrs. Smith & Elder...	28	votes.
" Blackwood (W.) & Sons	26	"
" Bell & Sons	25	"
Mr. Wm. Heinemann	25	"
Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co.	24	"
" Cassell & Co.	19	"
" Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co.	18	"
" Chatto & Windus	18	"
Mr. S. Rivington	17	"
Messrs. A. & C. Black	16	"

There will be no change in the Council from last year.

On the motion of Mr. Macmillan, seconded by Mr. G. T. Brown, the auditors, Messrs. M. H. Hodder and H. E. Warne, were re-elected, and this terminated the proceedings.

BETTER PROSPECTS FOR THE NEW COPYRIGHT BILL.

It will be remembered that copyright was one of the matters on which new legislation was promised in His Majesty's first speech to his first parliament. That nothing was done last year and the subject omitted in His Majesty's speech at the opening of the present parliament was due chiefly to what we must characterise as selfish action on the part of certain trade interests in Canada.

If all we hear is correct, a much better and more Imperial feeling on this question now prevails in Canada, and Mr. Gilbert Parker, M.P., the well-known author, who has recently returned from Canada, is sanguine that, as far as Canada is concerned, there are now no great difficulties in the way.

On Tuesday last, at the House of Commons, Mr. Gerald Balfour, President of the Board of Trade, received a deputation of gentlemen interested in the question, and as Mr. Macmillan pointed out in his speech at the Publishers' Association meeting, matters looked more hopeful. Among those forming the deputation were:—

Rt. Hon. W. E. H. Lecky, M.P.
 Gilbert Parker, M.P.
 Mr. F. R. Daldy (Secretary of the Copyright Association).
 Mr. A. Hope Hawkins (Chairman of the Society of Authors).
 Mr. Thring (Secretary of the Society of Authors).
 Mr. Fredk. Macmillan (President of the Publishers' Association).
 Mr. John Murray.
 Mr. C. J. Longman.
 Mr. H. R. Clayton (Novello & Co.)

OBITUARY.

The many friends of Mr. W. J. Penny, for some years town representative of Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co., will read with regret this announcement of his death. Although not yet in his fortieth year, Mr. Penny had suffered much ill-health, but his splendidly buoyant nature always brought him through the most insidious attacks. Last November, however, he was compelled again to rest from business—a rest which only ended by death on Thursday last, the 20th inst. In business he was energetic and

Letters to the Editor

THE PROPOSED BOOKSELLERS' BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.

SIR,—I firmly believe that the time is opportune for establishing a society such as that so ably set forth by Mr. Brabrook, and so warmly supported by Mr. Rymer and Mr. Cater. The falling out of the ranks, either through sickness or death, of a brother worker goes on around us continually, and the names only of one or two who have been fairly well known are brought forward by the call for a 'trade' subscription on behalf of those whose bread-winner has just been struck down; but what of the many who spend their lives behind the counter or in the warehouse, who are unknown, and for whom there is no 'trade' society? These, too, leave behind the widow and orphan, to whom the help from such a society as suggested would be a veritable blessing, and give the mother time to look round when time to think and plan is most needed.

It would be nice to have the offer of a room from some leading member of the trade in London, where those interested might foregather to consider the scheme. Failing this offer, no doubt the Sunday School Union would lend the use of a room for the purpose. The Committee have always shown great courtesy to the members of the trade. Hoping that a real start will very soon be made toward the establishing of such a society, and to which end I shall be most happy to help as far as lies in my power,

I am, dear Sir,

Yours faithfully,

W. J. CAMPBELL.

UNDER-STAMPING OF LETTERS FROM THE UNITED STATES.

DEAR SIR,—With reference to the letter in to-day's issue on the under-stamping of letters from the United States, we can heartily endorse what is stated by 'Aggrieved.' We are constantly referring to the matter in our journals, as you will see from the enclosed cuttings.

Why cannot our American friends put a cross in the right-hand corner when addressing the envelope, as we do in this country? This would at once show that extra postage is required when the stamping is done.

Yours truly,

Notices of Books

From Art and Book Company.—Officium Parvum Beatæ Mariæ Virginis: 'The Hours of Our Lady.' In Latin and English. In a Preface we are told that the Latin text of this attractive edition of the Little Office is that of the Propaganda Press edition, published at Rome in 1898, which differs slightly in places from that of the Roman Breviary; but where this is the case a footnote draws attention to the discrepancy. While the English translation of the Psalms is based upon the Douay Bible, as printed in the Stanbrook edition of the Psalter, the editor has adopted Father McSwiney's version of many Latin phrases from his recently published Commentary on the Psalms. The English translations of the beautiful Latin hymns are the admirable versions by the late Rev. Edward Caswall. A reproduction of the Salutation from Fra Angelico's fresco at St. Mark's, Florence, forms an appropriate frontispiece to this beautifully printed little volume.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—The Plays of Oliver Goldsmith; The Poems of Oliver Goldsmith. It is a great pleasure to renew acquaintance with these works through the medium of Messrs. Dent's well-known 'Temple Classics.' Of the excellent production of these little volumes, alike shown in the texture of the paper, the clearness of type and neatness of binding, we have so frequently written in terms of warm praise that nothing remains to be said. The present issues fully maintain the high standard of the series.

From Messrs. Freemantle & Co.—A History of the House of Douglas from the Earliest Times down to the Legislative Union of England and Scotland, by the Right Hon. Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart., M.P., with an Introduction by W. A. Lindsay, Windsor Herald. Two volumes. In the publication of a series of histories treating of the more notable families that have contributed to the development of Great Britain and Ireland, it is manifest that the House of Douglas will occupy a foremost place. No name is more closely associated with the national history of Scotland, nor has any a greater glamour of warlike prowess. If anything, Sir Herbert Maxwell has suffered from an overabundance of material, for the number of the Douglas race is legion; and we can quite understand that he must have felt some relief when he could shake himself free from the earlier and less known members of the family, whose doings do not admit of anything beyond the baldest narration, and could emerge upon a broader field, occupied by such men as James Douglas, fourth Earl of Morton, whose connection with Scottish history at the time of the ill-fated Queen Mary is fraught with the deepest interest, Archibald Douglas, 6th Earl of Angus, and others. No less than eighty-four descendants of the Douglas family are referred to in these volumes, beginning with William de Douglas, the first of the race, and concluding with James Douglas, 2nd Duke of Queensberry, who lived at the close of the 17th century; and it is a little curious to note that of this numerous progeny no fewer than twenty-five were named William, twenty-one James, and fifteen Archibald. The origin of the Douglas family is a little shrouded in obscurity. William de Douglas, the founder of the race, was probably connected with the early Flemish settlers in Scotland through one Freskin de Moravia, upon whom King David bestowed Duffus and other lands in Moray; and he afterwards took the name of Douglas by virtue of his lands of Douglas in the upper ward of Lanarkshire, in precisely the same way as in course of time Moravia became changed into the surname of Moray or Murray, thus founding another highly historic house. Sir Herbert Maxwell with very great care traces the growth of the Douglas family from the outset, and is unsparing in his attention to detail. The warlike propensities of the early bearers of the name come out very strongly in the chronicle, and add, as we have said, to the fascination of the subject. They seem to have devoted a considerable portion of their time to raiding the neighbouring provinces of Westmoreland and Cumberland, and not unfrequently their love of fighting brought them in contact with another race as courageous and tenacious as themselves, the Percys of England. These, we understand, will form the subject of the next volume in the series. If succeeding issues are as well looked after as the first, there should be no question of its success. Sir Herbert Maxwell has interwoven the history of the Douglas family into one connected story with remarkable success, and in his arrangement of the subject he displays excellent discrimination. The attraction of his work is further increased by about one hundred and fifty illustrations, including several portraits and coloured shields, and by the admirable manner in which the volumes have been produced.

From Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co.—Atonement and the Eucharist, by William Kerr-Smith, M.A. The publication of this volume is founded upon a belief that 'What English Churchmen need is some theological exposition which sets out simply and clearly the philosophical principles on which doctrine and worship are alike based.' This design the author carries out very efficiently, and in the treatment of his subject shows considerable thought and deductive reasoning.

From Messrs. Greening & Co.—Blighted Billets-Doux, compiled by Arthur Eliot. This is one of the many publications called forth by the phenomenal success of An Englishwoman's Love Letters, of which it is a parody. In the case of persons easily amused, it may serve to wile away half an hour in a railway train, or wherever serious reading might prove wearisome.

From Messrs. Heffer & Sons, Cambridge.—Problems and Exercises in English History, Book 9, 1688-1832: a Revision Term Course containing Sixty Typical Questions (30 "Junior" and 30 "Senior") arranged in the form of twelve one-hour test papers, with full answers, hints, and reference, by J. S. Lindsey. Little requires to be added by way of description to the somewhat voluminous title of this work, but, to quote still further, it contains: 'Hints on answering questions in history, notes and queries on teaching history; an introductory sketch, chronological synopsis, and notable topics of the period; and a select list of books useful to the teacher and learner.' The opinion of the author, derived from his experience as an examiner, is that the generally unsatisfactory character of the answers in history papers is due quite as much to lack of method as to want of matter. 'Pupils appear to have been made to remember many facts, but not to think about them or to bring them into reasoned connection with one another; there has been much "getting up" of the text-books, but little "setting down" of the pupil's own notions of what he reads; in a word, there has not been enough practice in written composition.' We wonder how often this necessity of making the pupil think has been enlarged upon, and yet it would seem that in many respects we are as far off a solution of the difficulty as ever. But Mr. Lindsey's work will certainly offer him every opportunity for the exercise.

From Mr. William Heinemann.—The French and English Word Book: a Dictionary, with Indication of Pronunciation, Etymologies, and Dates of Earliest Appearance of French Words in the Language, by H. Edgren, Ph.D., and P. B. Burnet, M.A., with an explanatory Preface by R. J. Lloyd, Litt.D., M.A. There are many distinct advantages in this new French and English Dictionary that merit warm approval. In view of the present tendency to inquire into the history of a language, as apart from its importance as a living instrument of speech, the compilers have included the salient historical facts—i.e. those of date and derivation—belonging to each word. They have also endeavoured to show the pronunciation without having recourse to a method of re-spelling, as is usually done. This is accomplished (a) by indicating what letters are silent, and (b) by attaching some sign to the remaining letters, where necessary, which shall make thoroughly clear their exact value in the given word. Of course there is the difficulty of acquiring an intimate knowledge of the various phonetic signs, but a little steady application will soon overcome this, and to those who are largely guided by eye memory the system will present innumerable advantages. Our only fear is that the book may prove a little unwieldy in size for ordinary use. It consists of no less than 1,250 pages, and is naturally a little heavy to handle. Still, when all is said, it is little, if anything, more bulky than Liddell and Scott's Smaller Greek Lexicon, and if the one passes as convenient we do not see why the size of the other should prove an obstacle. The general merits of Messrs. Edgren and Burnet's Dictionary certainly entitle it to an extended trial.

From the same.—'Clara in Blunderland,' by Catherine Lewis, with forty illustrations by S. R. Though we can scarcely say this little book is quite the equal of its famous model, it approximates so closely to it in the subtle character of its humour as to be thoroughly delightful. The illustrations, too, have quite the trick of Tenniel's work, and are exceedingly amusing in themselves. Lewis Carroll's popular book is here taken as the pattern for a political satire, all the characters being made to represent members of the two great parties in the State. Thus Clara represents Mr. Balfour, the Red Queen Mr. Chamberlain, the Duchess Lord Salisbury, Grumpy-Bumpty Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, the Dodo Sir Vernon Harcourt, and so forth. As an example of how the well-known lines are parodied, we may quote the following:—

"You are old, Father Johnnie," the strategist said,
And it's years since you'd had a tough fight;
Yet you thought you could shoot that wildebeeste on your head—
Do you think after all you were right?"

"In my youth," said John Bull, "I developed my hand Upon Arabs, and Niggers, and such;
And I thought that these Boers were of similar brand;
But I found I was out of it—much."

The book will afford the reader many a hearty laugh.

From Messrs. Hurst & Blackett, Ltd.—'Rosanne,' by Netta Syrett. Miss Syrett is always bright and forceful in her story, compelling attention by an attractive animation of style, but she scarcely seems to have got the true conception of her male characters. The Bohemian set surrounding the dissipated, rapidly deteriorating artist Lavell are apparently depicted not so much from actual knowledge of their attributes as the result of an active imagination with a certain amount of secondhand information, and perhaps some slight personal experience to work upon. It is amid these lax Bohemian influences that Rosanne, Lavell's daughter, is brought up. The child is wondrously pretty, with an originality of temperament that adds greatly to her charm, but unhappily both in appearance and disposition she is the daughter of her mother, a depraved music-hall dancer, whom Lavell had married from a lamentable appreciation of her physical beauty, never recognising the coarse, sensual nature that lay underneath. The story goes to show how heredity will ultimately show itself. Rosanne has her good moments—in that differing from her mother, who had apparently none, but was a pure animal to the backbone; and though she comes perilously near wrecking the domestic happiness of the one good woman of the narrative by enchainning her husband's affections, she yet sufficiently relents to take herself off to San Francisco and efface herself from her present associates. Whether she does this, however, through a return of some good feeling or as the outcome of her erratic, wayward disposition it is not easy to determine. To all the characters in the book the 'Nan' is a mystery, and as such she appears to the reader. The story is very smart and entertaining, but for the thoughtful can scarcely be termed exhilarating. It leaves the mind full of pity for poor Nan, and yet with a hopeless impression that, considering her parentage, nothing could have been done to help her.

From Messrs. Jarrold & Sons.—'Twinkling Stars: being the True Account of a Journey through Starland, with its many Funny Incidents and Happenings,' by Theodosia Abdy. The humour of this book is at times a little weak and artificial in the desire to accommodate itself to the mental capacity of child readers. Babyish talk alone will scarcely constitute an adequate attraction, and we are afraid juveniles nowadays are sufficiently smart to detect that they are being played down to, and will resent the insult to their intelligence. Occasionally, however, the author seems to forget the character of her audience, and becomes something more than merely 'grown up'—quite tender and deeply imaginative. The word 'tender' reminds us that when the party of children under the guidance of Mrs. Edmon-ton, of Sewing and Knitting Bee notoriety, arrive in their balloons at the moon, they are seized by a number of Christmas turkeys, and are placed in coops for fattening purposes. This is only the prelude to even more remarkable adventures, the oddity of which the author has further emphasised by many eccentric illustrations. The volume, in fact, is quite as much of a picture book as a story, and no doubt the young people will be duly astounded by all they see and read about.

From Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd. (Leipzig, B. Tauchnitz).—'Dictionary of the English and French Languages,' by W. James and A. Molé, sixteenth entirely new and modern edition, completely revised and greatly enlarged by Louis Tolhausen and George Payn, assisted by E. Heymann, 8vo. cloth extra. pp. 674. A new impulse must necessarily be given to this already well-known and well-established Dictionary by the fact that this sixteenth edition has been entirely remodelled to meet the requirements of the present day. Many changes in both languages have occurred since the Dictionary was first published. The revisers have taken the greatest care in the selection of new words, and the inclusion of all phrases in common use in both languages is a special feature. Everything is new and fresh, and the type has been well chosen. In both parts the most modern forms of spelling have been adhered to, while obsolescent or little used words are marked with an asterisk. It is altogether a very perfect, helpful, and handy Dictionary, and the names of Messrs. Louis Tolhausen and George Payn as principal editors are a guarantee for the great care and accuracy with which it has been compiled.

From Mr. John Murray.—'Felicia Skene, of Oxford,' a Memoir, by E. C. Richards. We believe there are few readers of anything like delicate susceptibility who will not feel on rising from the perusal of this work that they have been brought into contact for the time being with a refined spiritual individuality, animated by the most unselfish motives that can influence the human mind. Felicia Skene, with all her good qualities, was not a perfect woman—she would scarcely have been so charming had she been—but she possessed that quality of single-heartedness, that steadfast devotion to what she considered right, which must always prove ennobling and fascinating. Her father, James Skene, of Rubislaw, was an intimate friend of Sir Walter Scott, and much of the earlier portion of the volume is devoted to an account of her girlhood, the years she spent in Greece, where her father went from Edinburgh through the influence of a son who had married and settled there, and the associations she formed. Among the acquaintances she made in these early years were Sir Edwin Landseer, Robert Chambers, and William Ayrton; and in the days of her childhood she was a constant associate of the younger Lockhart family, and was on intimate terms with the three little French Princes and Princesses, children of the murdered Duc de Berri, in the Palace of Holyrood. From the first Felicia Skene seems to have conceived a wonderful liking for Oxford, and it was largely owing to her representations that her parents went to live there. This was shortly before the terrible outbreak of cholera in that city, during which she worked among the poor with the utmost devotion. Her subsequent life was largely devoted to rescue work, and by no means the least interesting portion of the volume bears relation to her theories and methods, the nature of her efforts, her prison visiting, the diary she kept during this period, general field of work, and so forth. At the conclusion of the volume are two articles testifying very eloquently to the beauty of her character from Lady Sophia Palmer and Mr. Charles W. Wood. Several portraits and other illustrations are included, and the entire work reveals in no uncertain light the attractions of an exceedingly fine disposition.

From the same.—'Fifty Years at East Brent: the Letters of George Anthony Denison, 1845-1896, Archdeacon of Taunton,' edited by his Niece, Louisa Evelyn Denison. It is scarcely necessary to refer in these columns to the prominent part played by Archdeacon Denison in the development of the High Church party in the Church of England during the latter half of the nineteenth century, or to enlarge on the energy with which he threw himself into a struggle that concerned the most vital interests of the cause he had at heart. The readers who will be chiefly attracted by this volume will probably have an intimate acquaintance with the main incidents of his career, and will chiefly desire a more thorough knowledge of his inner character as displayed through his letters. To those of the same religious convictions as Archdeacon Denison, who can view matters as he did and see the right field of action as clearly and overpoweringly, the book will prove a great treat. These letters seem to reveal, as all correspondence is calculated to do, the real character of the man—not always, it may be, in the most favourable of lights, but always under an aspect that commands our sympathy and respect. Above everything, Archdeacon Denison had the courage of his convictions; he was no man to trim his sails according to the prevailing wind, rather would he tear along under full canvas. There was a considerable admixture of the militant in his disposition, tempered by Christian principles. He was always more or less the soldier advancing in God's army. This is only one view of his character derived from this attractive volume, and for the rest we must refer readers to the book itself. They will find it extremely interesting, and, something more, decidedly impressive, as any information relating to the life of a good man must invariably be. The large number of well-known men with whom Archdeacon Denison during his lifetime was brought in connection increases the value of the volume, which in addition to other illustrations contains three portraits of the Archdeacon. Throughout, the painstaking care and reverence shown by Miss Denison in the fulfilment of her task is very apparent.

From Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd.—'The International Student's Atlas of Modern Geography: a Series of 105 Physical, Political, and Statistical Maps, compiled from British and Foreign Surveys and the latest Results of International Research,' under the direction of J. G. Bartholomew, F.R.S.E., F.R.G.S. The colouring of these maps is a little coarse and aggressive to the eye, but on the other hand it has all the value of complete distinctiveness. There can be no manner of doubt where one territory ends and another begins. The margins are most clearly defined. Another satisfactory feature is the printing of the colonies, towns, rivers, and so forth, which is beautifully clear. There has been no disposition to overdo this information, so that a general blurring of the map is avoided. On the whole we are inclined to think this is one of the most workable atlases for the student's use that we know of, and it should undoubtedly have a large sale.

From Messrs. Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier. 'Newman,' by Alexander Whyte, D.D. Two appreciative lectures and a selection of the choicest passages from the writings of the great Cardinal give a very good idea of the man, the preacher, the philosopher, and the writer. Dr. Whyte does not 'go the whole hog' with his subject, but uses no small amount of insight and discrimination in his critical remarks. There is a facsimile of one of Newman's letters written in 1884, and the Appendix contains five or six additional letters here published for the first time.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—'The Poetical Works of Robert Bridges,' Volume IV. This volume of the uniform edition of Mr. Robert Bridges's poetical works contains two plays. The first of these is that remarkable romantic drama, 'Palicio,' in which the fortunes of the hero and heroine, Palicio and Margaret, rivet the attention of the reader from beginning to end of the play. The other characters are so well conceived, the dialogue is so good, and the staging so deftly managed, that if produced by a competent theatrical troupe this drama ought to be a success. The second piece, 'The Return of Ulysses,' in which some of the chief scenes of the Odyssey are dramatised, seems less suited for the boards, but contains passages of great beauty and lends itself admirably to home reading or recitation. The publishers have produced this edition in a manner worthy of the gifted author.

From Messrs. Swan Sonnenschein & Co., Ltd.—'The Time of Transition; or, the Hope of Humanity,' by Frederick Arthur Hyndman, B.A. Oxon., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. The author was well equipped by study and travel, as well as by his former writings, to deal with the not by any means facile subject he has set himself—the trend of the age in which we live. He considers his subject from the religious, political, social, and domestic standpoints, so as to see how all things are passing through a time of transition. First in importance he puts Religion. 'Who can doubt,' he says, 'but that there is an upheaval in all sections of society with regard to religion?' He thinks the Anglo-Saxon race possesses in the Church of England a custodian of its civil and religious liberty which is indissolubly bound up with the history of the people; which, when almost sound asleep, still preserved the nation from spiritual stagnation; and 'which might evangelise, not only the British Empire, but much of the earth, were all the vitality of her faith to be put forth?' At the same time Mr. Hyndman has kindly appreciative words for other religious societies and agencies, and regards the Salvation Army as one of the most remarkable religious movements of our time. Space fails to touch upon the countless matters of interest, often of vital importance, dealt with in this book, which shows the writer to have a kind heart as well as a clear head.

From Messrs. Anthony Treherne & Co., Ltd.—'The Ranees' Rubies,' by Dr. Helen Bouchier. Dr. Helen Bouchier's Indian tale is not merely a book with an alliterative title and no more story than that of the Needy Knifegrinder. On the contrary, the plot is well constructed and most interesting, and the author shows a thorough knowledge of Indian races, manners, and life, and especially of life in the Zenana. The story opens in the Ranees' yellow room at the Zenana, where the pretty little Ranees herself, attired in her gala clothes, is awaiting the visit of Agnes Maitland, the wife of a medical missionary. The Rajah, who has only just brought home his bride from the Raj where she was born, holds the Rev. John Maitland in much esteem. He had met him at Agva, where Maitland was attached to a medical mission, and it was at the Rajah's special request that the medical missionary accompanied the prince on his return to Lalapoor to doctor his Highness and his subjects; but he has stipulated on being called Padre and not Doctor, and on being allowed to do his best for the souls as well as the bodies of the people. Mrs. Maitland's visit passes off well in spite of her slight knowledge of Hindustani and Zenana life; and the Ranees is delighted to show the Mem Sahib her jewels. Among them are two uncut rubies of extraordinary size of which she is so fond that she often holds them in her hands when asleep. When the interview is over she amuses the Rajah by mimicking the gait and Hindustani of her white visitor, afterwards playing with her attendants until too tired to think of her rubies. Then the Rajah has to go to another far distant city, and, as time hangs on the Ranees' hands, she asks her attendants for the rubies, wishing to have them set as earrings, but they can nowhere be found. Suspicion falls upon the missionary's wife, one of whose attendants leaves her, to replace whom the Ranees lends Agnes her own principal attendant Boojee-Ki-boo, who consults a hideous old sorceress, Habeeba-Bee. The old crone tells her the Mem Sahib has swallowed the rubies, which lie hidden in her throat. How in trying to recover the rubies the attendant well-nigh murders Mrs. Maitland, how that poor lady is abducted, and what else happens to her and other personages of this absorbing narrative must be read in the book itself, which contains some cleverly drawn native characters.

From the Unicorn Press.—'A Short Day's Work: Original Verses, Translations from Heine, and Prose Essays,' by Monica Peveril Turnbull. It is a little difficult to conceive that these poems and essays are actually the work of a young girl, for they display a maturity of thought, of expression, and imagination far beyond her years. Miss Turnbull unfortunately came by her death at a very early age, and the melancholy circumstances surrounding the event serve to impart additional, if mournful, interest to her writings. Some account of her life is given in a short Preface to the volume. Several of the poems were written before the author had attained her thirteenth year, the translations and other verses were the work of a later period. The essays on Shakespearean characters—Hamlet, Macbeth, Iago, the Fool in 'King Lear'—are especially good, and they reveal a strong vein of humour in the writer, which, now she has passed away, possesses a pathetic interest, while 'Some Aspects of Hunting' exhibits more particularly the original aspects of her character. The book is a glowing tribute to the powers of a highly gifted nature.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'Ping-Pong: the Game and How to Play It,' by Arnold Parker. The directions given in this little volume for the adroit use of the racket in this most popular of indoor games have all the merit of clearness and simplicity, aided by numerous illustrative diagrams. They are imparted by one who has gained great distinction at the game, and are the outcome of a valuable practical experience. We can scarcely expect that all readers will learn to play 'Ping-Pong' as well as the author, but at least he is unsparing in his efforts to show them how it may be done.

From Mr. W. Walker.—'A Three Hours' Service for Good Friday.' The service before us is called 'Good Friday: Three Scenes from our Lord's Passion,' translated and edited by the Rev. Charles Hyde Brooke from the French of De la Boissière. It opens with a Prologue, the Meeting of the Extremes, which is followed by three scenes: the Garden of Gethsemane, the City of Jerusalem, and On Mount Calvary. Full instructions are given as to the order of the service and the hymns to be used. If carefully practised beforehand, this service is calculated to be very effective and helpful.

From Mr. Philip Welby.—'God the Beautiful: an Artist's Creed,' by E. P. B. The writer of an introduction to this book states that it is formed of letters addressed to him by a wealthy young Dane of good family whom he had accidentally encountered at an inn where he had stayed at Leith on his return from a tour in Denmark. The Dane was consumptive, and had come in search of a milder climate; but, having burst a bloodvessel during the voyage from Copenhagen, the doctor forbade his being moved. At the suggestion of the landlady, also a Dane, the writer of the introduction visited the invalid, who was an enthusiast in the study of poetry and art. Death had no terrors for him, since he looked upon it not as a finality but only as a transition, determined by God, 'who was to him the God of perfect love and perfect beauty, who loved us in the bud of our existence to make us beautiful in the ultimate development of our life.' The day after this interview the invalid suddenly became worse; but, rallying from this attack, he indited the series of twenty or more letters to his interviewer, who had been obliged to leave Leith. These letters treat of various questions in religion, the arts, and literature, and are evidently the compositions of a devout mind and cultivated intellect. The volume is beautifully printed and tastefully bound.

TRADE LISTS SENT ON RECEIPT OF TRADE CARD

REGULATIONS.

1. BOOKS IN PRINT ARE NOT ADVERTISED FOR, but can only appear in the ordinary Column advertisements and at the usual scale rate. Every care is taken to prevent this rule from being infringed; but we cannot hold ourselves in any way responsible for occasional oversights. Subscribers are requested to make careful inquiry at the Publishers' before sending their lists for these Columns.
2. Only one title will be inserted in each line.
3. Collective advertisements are not admissible, except in the case of very old subjects, where it may naturally be supposed the Advertisers have a difficulty in obtaining the titles.
4. All lists should be sent to the Office, addressed to the 'Manager of the Publishers' Circular,' as early in the week as possible, and in no case later than Wednesday morning. Advertisements received too late for one issue (i.e., on Thursday) are not inserted in the next unless express instructions to this effect are given. This is to avoid any misunderstanding arising from charging for extra lines.
5. Every Annual Subscriber has the privilege of a four-line Advertisement free each week in these columns, and can have extra lines at 3d. per line prepaid. For Non-Subscribers a uniform rate of 3d. per line prepaid is charged, the name and address being counted as one line.
6. The Proprietors reserve to themselves the right of refusing any Advertisement.

THE LAW RELATING TO FACTORIES AND WORKSHOPS.

By MAY E. ABRAHAM (Mrs. H. J. Tennant), formerly one of her late Majesty's Superintending Inspectors of Factories, and ARTHUR LLEWELYN DAVIES, of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Fourth Edition, now ready, cloth, 5s.

The passing of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, has made considerable changes necessary in this edition, especially in Part II. The general arrangement of Part I. continues unaltered. That Part now contains a chapter on the effect of the new Act, in which all important changes in the law are indicated. The chapter on Legal Proceedings has been extended to include special reference to Scottish procedure. The changes in the law relating to Docks, &c., and to Bakehouses, and the new provisions which apply to Railways, are dealt with in the chapters on those subjects. A new chapter has been added on Cotton Cloth Factories.

Medical Officers of Health, Sanitary Inspectors, and all those interested in the provisions of the Act to be administered by local authorities, will find a special chapter devoted to their administration. The duties of Certifying Surgeons are also separately considered.

In the notes to Part II. reference is made to all cases relating to the subject of this book which have been decided since the publication of the third edition. A considerable number of recent decisions under the Workmen's Compensation Act, which illustrate the construction and effect of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, have been included. The book contains all Orders of the Secretary of State relating to Factories and Workshops, and a complete list of the Regulations for Dangerous Trades now in force.

The Index has been considerably enlarged.

To Mr. G. C. Moore Smith, M.A., we owe a most delightful biography of his great uncle, Lieut.-General Sir Harry Smith, the victor of Aliwal—a splendid English soldier and statesman with a career more romantic than can be found even in the pages of fiction.

Thackeray has been unfairly accused of sneering at the British officer and army, but this is what he said of Sir Harry Smith in the 'Book of Snobs':

'Let those civilians who sneer at the acquirements of the army read Sir Harry Smith's account of the Battle of Aliwal. A noble deed was never told in nobler language.'

The Duke of Wellington was not prodigal of praise, and we can imagine the feelings of pride and delight with which Sir Harry Smith and his devoted and delightful wife read what the great warrior said in the House of Lords on April 2, 1846:

'My Lords, I will say this, I have read the account of many a battle, but I never read the account of one in which more ability, energy, and experience have been manifested than in this (Aliwal).'

* London John Murray. 2 vols. maps and illustrations.

In the House of Commons Sir Robert Peel said:

'Of the battle itself I will not speak; the victory was complete, and it has been so admirably described by the illustrious commander that I will not weaken the effect of his narrative. And what, let me ask, have been the services of this gallant officer? These recent events have given new lustre to his glory, but

'He was at the capture of Monte Video, At the attack upon Buenos Ayres; He served during the Peninsular War from

The Battle of Vimiera to that of Corunna.

He was wounded in another action, but he was at

The Battles of Sabugal and Fuentes d'Onor,

At the sieges of Ciudad Rodrigo and Badajoz;

At the Battles of Salamanca, Vittoria, Orthes, the Pyrenees, and Toulouse;

He was at the capture of Washington and at New Orleans;

And finally he was at Waterloo.'

After Waterloo Sir Harry was sent in the service of his country to Scotland, Ireland, Nova Scotia, Jamaica, and then as Deputy Quartermaster-General to the Cape of Good Hope under that fine soldier and statesman Sir Benjamin D'Urban. After the Kaffir war he was appointed Deputy Adjutant-General in India. After the Battles of Gwalior and Maharajpore he was made a K.C.B., and after the Battles of Aliwal and Sobraon he was made a Baronet of the United Kingdom and appointed Governor of the Cape of Good Hope.

We have merely mentioned some of the historical events which Sir Harry so splendidly helped to make as giving the best idea of the extraordinary nature of his career; a more stirring record we have never met with, and it was indeed a fortunate thing that it should have been preserved for publication as it was. 'The Autobiography,' the editor tells us, 'had been carefully preserved by Sir Harry's former aide-de-camp and friend, General Sir E. A. Holdich, K.C.B., but, as it happened, I was not myself aware of its existence until, owing to the fresh interest awakened in Sir Harry Smith and his wife by the siege of Ladysmith early in 1900, I inquired from members of my family what memorials of my great-uncle were preserved. Sir Edward then put this manuscript and a number of letters and documents at my disposal. It appeared to me and to friends whom I consulted that the Autobiography was so full of romantic adventure and at the same time of such solid historical value that it ought no longer to remain unpublished, and Mr. John Murray, to whom I submitted a transcription of it, came at once to the same conclusion.'

Of course Mr. Murray did. He could hardly have read a dozen pages, or even one, without seeing that he had before him a work of most unusual merit and interest. It is impossible to give an idea of the fire and vigour, the splendid sense of duty, the dauntless courage, the noble and tender affection, the burning patriotism which stand out like beacons, lighting up every page of this grand English soldier's simple Autobiography. It is impossible to read it without a thrill of pride in such a countryman as this, and with such tender passion are the scenes of parting from loved ones described that few will read them unmoved. Then there is such a gaiety of spirit pervading all this narrative of deathless events, we are introduced to so many well-known characters, that the scenes and men seem to live again and go through their glorious action as we read.

It is not only the account of a man's heroism; there is nothing in history more romantic than the story of Juana Maria de los Dolores, who as a beautiful girl of fourteen was rescued by him out of the horrors of the sack of Badajoz, married him, and then shared in his glorious career in all parts of the world.

Every officer in the British army should read this book, as well as everyone else who loves to follow the story of a soldier who was in every deed and word and thought without fear and without reproach.

Among the illustrations is one of Sir Harry Smith's birthplace at Whittlesey in Cambridgeshire, and his description of his first parting from his mother to join his regiment is splendidly touching. It was at the moment when Napoleon's great army was assembled at Boulogne, waiting to invade England:

'... She seized me in her arms and wept awfully. Suddenly, with an effort I shall never forget, her tears were dried, she held me at arm's length, and, gazing at me most intently, said:

"I have two favours to ask of you: one is that you never enter a public billiard-room; the next—our country is at war—if ever you meet your enemy, remember you are born a true Englishman."

This little scene enables one to understand more easily the noble character and career of the son of such a mother; and it is appropriate indeed that the heroism of our soldiers at Ladysmith should have been the immediate cause of the publication of this Imperial soldier's splendid record.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The Editor of the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR begs to thank all those subscribers who have so kindly replied to his letter of the 20th of March. He hopes to publish the replies presently.

In view of the new Education Bill just introduced by the Government, the Ven. Archdeacon Fletcher's article in the April number of the Nineteenth Century and After will attract general attention. It is entitled 'The Renewed Struggle for the Schools,' and was written, as Mr. James Knowles points out, before the intentions of the Government were made known. An article by Mr. Wm. Laird Clowes on 'The Condition of the Naval Reserve' is not merely a statement as to its condition, but a very practical suggestion as to its improvement. Mr. W. H. Mallock has an article on 'The Latest Shipwreck of Metaphysics,' which, curiously enough, has nothing to do with bi-literal or other cyphers. The Nineteenth Century and After for April is a most interesting number.

Miss M. F. Johnston has an article on the Shortcomings and Backslidings of the Hospital Nurse in the April Nineteenth Century and After. It will bring the nurses buzzing and protesting round Miss J. or we are greatly mistaken. As far as our experience goes, we have found that Hospital Nurses are second to none in knowledge of and devotion to their duty. One of Miss Johnston's complaints is that nurses who happen to meet on a tram or train 'talk shop.' As if there was the least harm in that. Everybody talks shop under such circumstances, and it only shows their interest in their work.

Mr. J. R. Haworth, who has been a generous contributor in the past, has given a donation of upwards of £160 towards defraying the cost of re-fitting the offices of the Printers' Corporation, Gray's Inn Chambers, High Holborn.

Most printers, authors, booksellers, and publishers, and those persons engaged in getting up books, know some if not all of the volumes prepared by Mr. Charles T. Jacobi, managing partner of the Chiswick Press, on printing and typography generally. C. Whittingham & Co. will publish in April a new and revised edition of his 'Notes on Books and Printing: a Guide for Authors, Publishers, and Others.' There are additions to the type specimens, the literary part has been revised by Mr. F. Howard Collins and others, while Mr. Walter Boutall has enlarged his chapter on the mechanical processes and Mr. C. R. Rivington has revised the chapter on copyright. Mr. Jacobi's books on 'Printing' and the 'Printer's Handbook of Trade Recipes' are both in a second edition, which is a well-deserved compliment to their practical excellence.

Messrs. Isbister & Co., Ltd., beg to announce that they have acquired the rights of publication in England and the British Colonies of Miss Stone's story of her experiences while in the hands of the brigands. The narrative will appear serially in the Sunday Magazine, beginning in the May number. There will probably be five articles. Miss Stone's book, which will of course include much matter in addition to what is contained in the magazine articles, will be published in the early autumn—probably towards the end of September. Both the magazine articles and the book will be illustrated with a number of photographs, some of which are unique.

Messrs. Charles Letts & Co. will shortly issue a new work under the title of 'British Battles.' The work will be completed in thirteen fortnightly shilling parts, each containing four photogravure reproductions representing famous battle scenes from the Battle of Hastings, 1066, to Colenso, 1900, after the original works of Henri Dupray. Part I. will be ready and on sale everywhere on Thursday, April 17.

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales has been pleased to accept a copy of Lady Darnley's book, 'Elma Trevor,' written in collaboration with Mr. R. Ll. Hodgson, who, it may be mentioned, is the first secretary and organiser of the new Suffolk County Cricket Club. Lady Darnley is the wife of the Earl of Darnley, better known to cricketers as the Hon. Ivo Bligh. Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd., are the publishers.

It may be useful to some of our readers to know that Dr. Barman, of Alnwick, is a collector of angling books. We heard this by accident from Messrs. Hardy Brothers, of Alnwick, who have a grand show of fishing rods and tackle at the Royal Aquarium.

'Old Time Literature' is the happy title of the 1807 Catalogue of Messrs. Maggs Bros., of 109 Strand. It includes many interesting and rare works from English and Foreign Presses of the 15th and 16th centuries, black letter books, manuscripts on vellum, &c.

Mr. William Andrews, of the Hull Royal Institution, read a paper entitled 'A Plea for the Modern Novel in Public Libraries' to the members of the Northern Counties Library Association at their meeting in Leeds. Mr. Andrews showed how works of fiction had helped forward reforms, more especially in London and elsewhere, for the benefit of the poor. He carried the meeting with him. The President, Mr. Basil Anderton, B.A., and Councillor Bowling, Chairman of the Leeds Public Libraries, took part in the discussion after the paper, and expressed themselves satisfied as to the pleasure and profit to be obtained from a good novel, and thought Mr. Andrews had made out a good case for the writer of fiction.

The announcement that M. Santos-Dumont is coming to prosecute his aeronautic experiments in the English skies gives a very timely interest to a book which Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co. announce for early publication. This is a popular treatise of the art and practice of ballooning from the earliest times to the present day, and is entitled 'The Conquest of the Air.'

Mr. John Long will shortly publish, under the title of 'In the Shadow of the Purple,' an historical novel by Mr. George Gilbert. The work is described as 'a complete record of the actual sayings and doings, not only of George IV. as Prince, as Regent, and as King, and of his tender and faithful lover, Maria Fitzherbert, but of the leading characters of the whole period. It is believed that, for the first time in literature, George IV. is revealed exactly as he was, and not as slander, malice, and envy have hitherto painted him.' Somebody wrote a book not long ago to prove that Nero was a persecuted saint. Now poor old George the Fourth and Maria are to be whitewashed. Somebody will want to prove next that Thackeray was a villain of the deepest yellow plush pattern.

Mr. Macqueen has in preparation, under the title 'Cagliostro and Company,' a sequel to M. Funk Brentano's book the 'Diamond Necklace,' tracing the further history of the characters in that drama down to the death of Marie Antoinette. It is translated by George Maidment. Mr. Macqueen also announces the fifth edition of 'The House with the Green Shutters,' by Mr. George Douglas.

Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co. have in the press and will shortly publish a 'Life' of Dr. Clifford, the well-known preacher and social philanthropist. It is written by Chas. T. Bateman, who has had access to much first-hand biographical matter concerning the Doctor. His rise from comparatively humble surroundings to his present position, his great work among the young men of London, the charm of his manner and his brilliant personality, give the biographer scope for a Life of exceptional interest. The book will be an addition to the 'New Century Leaders.'

Messrs. Horace Marshall & Son are about to issue a new, enlarged, and cheaper edition of 'Divine Dual Government,' by Mr. William Woods Smyth. This volume contains the substance of the author's lectures on the Bible and Natural Science which have attracted so much attention wherever they have been given, and it includes photo-engravings of the various diagrams used in the lectures.

A new story by Mrs. Wiggin, entitled 'The Diary of a Goose-girl,' will be published by Messrs. Gay & Bird about the middle of April.

Every bookseller who has a customer fond of a splendid story of military life can confidently recommend 'The Autobiography of Lieut.-General Sir Harry Smith,' recently published in two handsome volumes by Mr. John Murray. We have to thank Sir Herbert Maxwell for so strongly recommending it to us that it was impossible not to get a copy.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. send us a most attractively got up list of their spring announcements, with many illustrations.

'With the Wild Geese' is the title of a little volume of poems by the Hon. Emily Lawless, author of 'Hurrish,' 'With Essex in Ireland,' &c., to be issued in a few days' time by Messrs. Isbister & Co., Ltd. 'The Wild Geese' was the name given by the Irish to the exiles who migrated to the Continent after the fruitless struggle for the restoration of James II. to the throne of the United Kingdom.

Messrs. Dawbarn & Ward, Limited, entertained their employees and others connected with the Company to Dinner at the Holborn Restaurant on Saturday, the 22nd inst.

'Cats and all about them' is the title of a little handbook, of which the author is Miss Frances Simpson, and the publishers Messrs. Isbister & Co., Ltd.

THE ORIGIN OF WATER-MARKS ON PAPER.

Water-marks on paper, says the Paper Maker, are now being carefully studied as a means of arriving at the facts in regard to the early manufacture of paper in Europe, and still further as offering a key to the problematic questions of the block books and earliest specimens of printing from wooden and metal types. Water-marks are indentions made on paper, in various shapes, during the process of manufacture, the pulp of the paper being compressed by an engraved device called a dandy. Paper mills worked by water were established in Tuscany about the beginning of the 14th century; but it has not been determined that water-marks were introduced by them. The earliest known water-mark is a globe surmounted by a cross found in an account book at The Hague, bearing the date of 1301. This mark is very similar to the devices used by John of Cologne, Jensen, and Scott, all celebrated typographers of the olden time. Some of the paper used by these printers was made in Venice, so that the fact is regarded by many as proving that Italy was the furthest advanced at that period in the manufacture of paper.

A bull's head, three inches in length, appears in the water-mark of an account dated 1310, which might also be of Italian origin, as a similar design was used as the arms of Pope Calixtus III. in 1445; this mark never being found in the Flemish block books, but appearing in the Mazarin Bible, in Fust and Schoeffer's Bible of 1472, and in the publications of Ulric Zell at Cologne. Many early undated Italian manuscripts contain a cross as water-mark. Antwerp must have been largely engaged in the manufacture at an early date, for records of purchases of paper made in that city are entered at The Hague and Haarlem under the date of 1352, and the water-mark of a tower found in a manuscript at The Hague in 1354 is supposed to be a representation of the tower at Antwerp, used subsequently as an emblem by Gerald Leen in 1470.

The tower also appears frequently in German and Italian manuscripts of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. A hand is also displayed upon Leen's emblem, and, it is thought, may have been the origin of the water-mark of a hand common in the Dutch block books.

The fleur-de-lis, the Peter's cock, and the Paschal lamb are all found in the public account books at The Hague, bearing respectively the dates of 1366, 1380, and 1356, the fleur-de-lis referring probably to Philip of Burgundy, who bore it on his arms, it and the lamb being the insignia of Rouen and also of other bishoprics. Upon a letter dated 1421 is a water-mark resembling the postman's horn of the period, and this mark, afterwards very common, is supposed to have given the name to post paper, just as the fool's cap, with its feather and bells, on Caxton's 'Golden Legion,' gave the name to foolscap paper.

The unicorn, the shield, and also the marks of P and Y, either separately or together, are all presumed to be proofs of Flemish manufacture, the P crowned with a fleur-de-lis having been used by Philip, Duke of Burgundy, and Count of Compiègne, who reigned from 1349 to 1361, and P and Y being afterward adopted by his descendant, Philip, and his wife Ysabel, who were married in 1429, the Y appearing first in an account dated 1431.

The marks of the dolphin and anchor seem to point to some maritime country, both being used by Aldus Manutius at Venice, but they are equally applicable, in this connection, to the chief cities of the Low Countries. The dolphin appears first at Haarlem in a manuscript dated 1418, subsequently at The Hague in 1423, and in a letter to the Bishop of Durham, dated in Melun in 1420. The anchor, afterward in common use, appears first at The Hague in a writing dated 1396. A pot or jug was a favourite early mark, first known with the date of 1352, and giving its name to pott paper.

The account books preserved in the archives of the Netherlands show that the small folio paper employed in them was the same as that used in the block books, and for account books in Italy and Germany about the middle of the fourteenth century, and the same paper is found in the printed works of Fust, Schoeffer, Zell, Veldener, and in the publications of John of Westphalia, at Louvain, although no printed Italian or German books are known to contain it.

Soon after the introduction of printing a larger size of paper of better quality was used, as is seen in the early Bibles, the Catholicon of Balbi, of 1460, and the Pliny of 1469. The difficulty then experienced in obtaining large quantities of paper is shown by the variety of water-marks often included in a single volume of the block books and also of the early printed works, the first Bible printed in Delft, 1477, being remarkable as exhibiting nearly all of the water-marks previously used in the Netherlands.

One of the recent arguments advocating the theory that printing was invented in the City of Haarlem is founded upon proofs deduced from water-marks, but it is contended that the evidence only settles conclusively that paper was used at an early period in the Netherlands, and its use cannot prove the place of the publication of any work. Water-marks began to be used as the private sign of the manufacturer at the close of the fifteenth century, in which significance they are at present employed.

THE DANGER OF WOOD-PULP PAPER.

'Like the leaves of the forest when autumn hath blown,' books within twenty years show discoloured and broken leaves, the beginning of a decay that will make them valueless probably within a generation. The use of wood pulp in paper-making has given the public cheap newspapers and cheap books, which are good things. It has accelerated the rate of decay of whatever is printed on it, which is also, at times, a good thing. At other times it is not, and to guard against the loss that might be caused by the decay of valuable documents the public printer at Washington and the Government Stationery Office at London require that no mechanical or ground wood pulp shall be introduced in making paper supplied to them for book printing, and for written documents paper made from rags only is used. In the case of printing paper the defects are mainly those of recent progress. Matthias Koops, who, in 1801, took out the first patent for making wood paper, produced sheets that recent examination showed to be of good quality and in good preservation. Koops sliced the wood he used, and the fibre was preserved. He used aspen and willow, free from the resin that characterises spruce, and which, if not boiled out, is a weakening element in the sheets of paper produced. Chemical wood paper, made from sliced wood, is free from the most marked of the defects that characterise the ground pulp article; but if it is not carefully made the impurities detract from its durability, and it, too, is liable to turn brown and become brittle. The Prussian Government was the first to notice and provide against the danger of defective material in public documents. It established standards of quality and defined tests to which paper for all official documents was subjected. In recent years the public documents issued by the American and British Governments are not found with discoloured margins, the beginning of the process of deterioration, that is often noticed in those produced after 1880, when wood pulp paper began to be generally used in book printing. In the case of written documents, paper made from rags being used, they are practically permanent, though in their case also the use of chlorine in producing the white shade now called for in the paper has a tendency to weaken its strength. Care in the Stationery Department is necessary for the public protection, even in their case.—The Publishers' Weekly.

'LUCAS MALET' AND HER WORK.

The author of 'The History of Sir Richard Calmady' is known in private life as Mrs. Mary St. Leger Harrison. She is, as is generally known, the younger daughter of the late Charles Kingsley. She was born at Eversley, in Hampshire, in 1852, and was married to the Rev. Mr. Harrison, who was for some time her father's curate, in 1876—the year after Kingsley's death. Her husband died four years ago, and since then Mrs. Harrison has lived mainly in London. Despite her early literary environment, it was not till 1882, when she was living in Warwickshire, that she published her first novel, 'Mrs. Lorimer: a Sketch in Black and White.' 'Lucas Malet' has never been a prolific writer, and her total output, spreading over nearly twenty years, has only consisted of eight books, the best-known of which is 'The Wages of Sin,' which was written in Clovelly and published in 1891. Mrs. Harrison, who is half a Celt by descent, has been largely influenced by Balzac, de Maupassant, Daudet, Tolstoi, and Ibsen, and artistically her work has many points in common with the relentless realism characteristic of modern French fiction.—N. Y. Times Sunday Review.

Letters to the Editor

THE PROPOSED BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT SCHEME.

SIR,—Referring to my letter of August 31 last, re proposed Provident Scheme, I regret to say that I have seen no reason to change the opinions then expressed. There is no enthusiasm among the assistants which can be reckoned upon as a means of setting such a scheme agoing and maintaining it on a sound basis; a number, no doubt, would like that this proposed institution did exist, but they will do a very little towards starting it, while the greater number are simply indifferent. If they meant business there would have been criticisms on Mr. Brabrook's proposals, or suggestions regarding them.

The Secretary of the Edinburgh Assistant Booksellers' Association drew up a series of proposals, and also made inquiries at certain Assurance Companies, which he submitted to our Committee, but, after careful consideration of the matter, we found it was hopeless to expect that we could get sufficient funds and support to warrant us in bringing such a scheme before the notice of the assistants. Turning to Mr. Brabrook's scheme, I beg to state an objection to the principle of the ballot having a place in the allotment of benefit, as it renders the scheme a hybrid of the Benevolent and Provident. Now, to encourage thrift, the provident aspect should be both principal and principle. As assistants are almost certain to require all their savings, either for themselves or their dependents, there is no inducement for a man to pay into such a fund for, say, twenty years or more unless he is sure he will receive benefit for himself or family, if needed.

This causes me to allude to Mr. Campbell's letter in your last issue; he writes about assistants as being unknown to the trade outside of the shop or warehouse in which they are employed, which is quite true, but seems to think that a society, such as the proposed, would greatly benefit such assistants and their families. How would it do that? If a man who is quite unknown dies, who will press the claims of his widow and orphans, and so be able to obtain a sufficiency of votes to entitle them to the benefit of this scheme? Is it not more likely that someone who had come more to the front might easily obtain (though perhaps not so needful) the benefits that were denied to more necessitous cases? In St. John, cap. v., we find a case in point, in the sick man who had lain for thirty-eight years at the Pool of Bethesda hoping some one would help him to the healing of the waters, but as he had no one to do the needful, year after year, others obtained what he had waited for so long.

Again, in the case of the larger towns a man would have more chance of getting votes than in the smaller, and naturally those in London would stand in a better position than assistants in provincial towns.

who could only be expected to have a few votes at the most.

How are assistants to become known to each other outside of their employers' premises? There is only one way so far as I know, and that is to form themselves into Associations, which will meet from time to time in friendly conference to discuss literary and trade matters. It will mean the expenditure of some time and trouble to those who take part in starting and maintaining such societies. I understand that the Edinburgh Assistant Booksellers' Association is the only one in the kingdom, and though it may entail some work on the executive, yet we all consider that we are more than repaid by the friendly intercourse this Association is the means of providing, and the friendships formed among the members, who formerly knew each other only by name at most. Should it be necessary to act on behalf of a member, our Association would naturally move as a body, which surely says something for the advantages of such Associations. Very little can be done by individuals, there must be organisation to be effective for good.

We have already furnished particulars of how our Association (which is in its ninth year) is worked, with a view to the starting of one in London; however, nothing came of it, but any information our members can supply will always be at the service of our confrères anywhere who may think that the time is ripe for such Associations. Why should Mr. Campbell wait for someone to offer a room? Surely rooms for, say, two hours of an evening are available for a very modest sum, and a matter of 25 notices calling a meeting, taken off a cyclostyle and distributed by a collector on his daily round, would set matters afloat.

It is better to start on a small scale, and after you have secured the co-operation of a few willing workers, and gained each other's confidence, you will possess a basis for further operations, rather than trying to overtake the whole trade at once.

Our best thanks are due to you for the amount of space you have devoted to our interests, and also to Mr. Rymer for his kind efforts on our behalf, though I fear he is just a little too sanguine in regard to the assistants going in for a provident scheme of this kind right away. Indeed, very few letters have been printed from assistants with anything more than a vague hope that somebody will get up something of the kind for their benefit, forgetting that the gods help those who help themselves.

I am Sir, yours faithfully,

D. HALDANE.

March 24, 1902.

DEAR SIR,—In respect to the above it seems that we are very much like Mr. Micawber, and it is about time that some of us took off our coats and began to turn something up, then possibly we shall obtain some outside assistance.

Will one of our worthy representatives (say Mr. Cater) approach two well-known members of the trade, and induce them to be

Secretary and Treasurer, to solicit and receive contributions for the initial expense of a preliminary meeting?

Although a Cockney by birth, I am not sure London is the best place to hold the first meeting; but I feel confident we should make more headway assisted by our level-headed Scottish friends, and enlivened by the wit of our Irish brethren, and it would be only courtesy to meet them halfway, so I would suggest Liverpool.

While waiting for the seven years' qualifying period, I would suggest forming an Emergency Fund, by an annual subscription of 2s. 6d., that we might be able to deal with an urgent case, should one arise, at our first annual meeting, supposing we are fortunate enough to hold one. At the end of the qualifying period the balance of this fund could be passed to the General Fund.

During Easter week a conference is being held at Bristol, and by studying our daily paper we shall see what can be done by banding ourselves together and doing spade work.

Thanking you for inserting this letter,

I remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. W. FURMAGE.

THE ASSOCIATED BOOKSELLERS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

SIR,—The Annual Meeting of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland will be held, by kind permission of the Master and Wardens of the Stationers' Company, at Stationers' Hall, on Friday April 11, at 4.30 P.M.

Owing to the Coronation festivities, it has not been possible to arrange for a trade dinner of the Publishers and Booksellers this year, but it is hoped that arrangements may be made for an informal dinner after the annual meeting, and those who wish to attend should give early intimation.

Yours faithfully,

EDWIN PEARCE,

WHEN WAS BOOKBINDERS' CLOTH FIRST USED?

DEAR SIR,—In the interesting article reprinted from Notes and Queries, and headed 'Leather for Bookbinders,' in your issue of the 15th inst. reference is made to bookbinders' cloth as having been first introduced in the year 1836.

May I venture to point out, however, that it was introduced much earlier? In 1822 Mr. Archibald Leighton, grandfather of the present member of the firm of Leighton, Son & Hodge, invented the material. A copy of 'Bibliotheca Heraldica,' in its original cloth binding, and bearing the date of 1822 on the title-page, forms part of that firm's exhibit at the International Press and Printing Exhibition, now being held at the Crystal Palace. This, however, was not the first book so bound.

It is rather strange that Notes and Queries should have fallen into this mistake.

Yours faithfully,

CLAUDE EDENBOROUGH.

[We have before us a copy of 'A Collection of Antique Vases, &c.' by Henry Moses, published by Henry G. Bohn in 1814—a very good specimen of cloth binding and of binding generally, for there are 170 plates on good paper and yet the book opens well and not a plate is loose.—ED.]

A PLEASANT NOTE FROM INDIA.

DEAR SIR,—We should be glad if you will include the following books in the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR. In future we will send regularly any information of new publications we can, as it will help to make the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR more valuable.

Thanking you in anticipation,

We are, dear Sir,

THE NET SYSTEM FOR TECHNICAL PUBLICATIONS.

(COPY OF A CIRCULAR RECENTLY SENT OUT BY THE FIRMS SIGNING IT.)

DEAR SIR,—The discount question is frequently cropping up, to the annoyance of both the public and the trade. We, the undersigned, publishers of photographic, technical, and other books, believe the time has arrived when a stop should be put to the allowance to the public of any discount off technical publications.

We are, therefore, making all our books with the price NET, and supplying them on the distinct understanding that no discount is allowed.

We are not increasing our trade charges, believing that the margin of profit is not more than is necessary where any risk is taken by stocking such books.

We shall be glad to hear that you will support us in this course, and neither list nor sell any net books below published price.

Terms will be sent on receipt of request with trade card.

COPYRIGHT IN CANADA.

DEAR SIR,—In your issue of February 8 last there appears a letter from Mr. F. R. Daldy, correcting what he regards as an erroneous statement made in the report of the Booksellers and Stationers' Section of the Toronto Board of Trade, to the effect that he consented to the Bill drafted in Toronto for submission to the Canadian Government in 1895.

As chairman of the Wholesale Booksellers and Stationers' Section, permit me to say that the statement to which Mr. Daldy takes exception is based on a stenographic report which appeared in the Toronto Globe of November 26, 1895, of a conference on the question of Copyright between the members of the Canadian Cabinet, Mr. Hall Caine, Mr. Daldy, the Canadian Copyright Association, and others, in which Mr. Daldy is reported as follows:

'Mr. Daldy, on behalf of the Copyright owners in England, said that he had great pleasure in consenting generally to this draft Bill. He said "generally," because it was a draft on a complicated subject which required further consideration in detail.... He suggested a committee representing the Government, the Canadian publishers, and the British Copyright owners to consider the draft Bill in detail.'

Later on in the conference Sir Hibbert Tupper is reported as follows: 'He gathered from Mr. Hall Caine's speech that this draft Bill was generally acceptable.'

Mr. Daldy, in reply, is reported as saying: 'It is only with reference to small questions of drafting that I spoke when I suggested a committee. We have agreed practically to all the rest.'

Faithfully yours,

W. J. GAGE.

A FATAL NEWSPAPER POLICY.

DEAR SIR,—The paragraph in your issue of February 15, entitled 'A Fatal Newspaper Policy,' suggests that I should point out that you have not yet, apparently, discovered and acknowledged the blunder in your leading article of Jan. 31, 1902 (issue dated Feb. 1, 1902), entitled 'A Magazine of Cleverness.'

The article describes 'the January number,' and tells us what we may find on 'the first page' and elsewhere, and concludes by saying that this 'is the only number we have seen'; and yet the January number as received in India does not contain a single one of the extracts which you so amusingly set forth.

Comparatively few copies have reached India of the Smart Set magazine, but they have been received as a welcome relief from the pictured absurdities in which London magazine literature now wallows. Imagine a sane person being expected to take an interest in a series of photographs showing the effect of dropping a boulder into a bucket, or photographs of a bicycle built of ironmonger's sundries, and 'The Jubilee Stamp Snake.'

While on the subject of 'awful blunders,' I have a bone to pick with Mr. S. R. Crockett. In his charming book 'Cinderella' we read on page 199 'Call her "Vic." It sounds too much like "Sixty Years of Glorious Reign" when you call her "Victoria,"' and on page 262 we read of the presence of a Burmese Embassy in London, and elsewhere in the book, of the King of Burma imprisoning and torturing people for robbing his ruby mines, temp. A.D. 1897 or later.

[It shows how difficult it is to please everybody. Now, we should have thought photographs showing the effect of dropping boulders into a bucket would have pleased most people as a relief from p—g—p—g. Yes, it was the Feb. 7 No. not the Jan. 7 No. of the Smart Set to which we referred. It was an oversight on our part.—ED.]

BEGGING FOR BAZAARS.

DEAR SIR,—I was very much amused by your leader a few weeks since relating to the obtaining of free notices of forthcoming books.

It made me think of the numerous applications for assistance to bazaar committees, &c., which I get. One of these incidents will bear repetition, as it was the coolest of any in my experience. A young lady called to ask if I would give a prize for a Ping-Pong tournament. I at once gave her a half-crown set of the game, and in a few days she called to say that Mr. So and So had given a more expensive article for one of the prizes, and would I mind giving a better set of Ping-Pong to make the prizes of more equal value? I felt slightly annoyed at such a request, and respectfully declined to accede thereto, as I had already sent a good parcel of fancy goods for one stall and subscribed to the refreshment department.

Yours truly,

Halifax.

H. GREENWOOD.

[Yes, the bazaar beggars are a terror—especially when they come in the shape of a charming young lady. But some of the parsons are as bad. One, a perfect stranger in some country village, wrote to us regularly to say that, noticing Heaven had blessed us with another son or daughter (as the case may be), would we subscribe towards the expense of a stained glass window in his church?—ED.]

A PRIMITIVE NEWSPAPER.

A correspondent of the Daily Express points out that in the 'Acta Diurna Urbis' the Romans of 2,000 years back possessed a veritable daily journal. He observes:

'The "Acta" was a Court journal as well as a general newspaper. It printed the laws of the Emperor, enactments by the Senate, the names of the incoming magistrates, a list of politicians who had an audience with the Emperor or an invitation to his banquets, the sacrifices to the gods, the games at the circus, births, marriages, divorces, and deaths of notable people, and the general gossip of the day.'

INTIMATION TO THE TRADE.

Messrs. John Menzies & Co., of Edinburgh and Glasgow, have now opened show rooms for school books, where are shown the books of all the leading Scottish and English publishers. They will be glad if their trade customers will favour them with visits prior to the school-book season.

ANNUAL DINNER OF THE EDINBURGH ASSISTANT BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Annual Dinner of the Edinburgh Assistant Booksellers' Association was held in the Imperial Hotel on Friday evening, the 21st inst. The chairman was Sir John M. Clark, Bart. (Messrs. T. & T. Clark), and Messrs. J. Macniven (Messrs. Macniven & Wallace) and Hew Morrison (Edinburgh Public Library) were the croupiers. These gatherings are remarkable as a means of expressing the kindly feeling which exists between the booksellers of Edinburgh and their assistants. Among the guests present were Dr. E. J. Parrott (Messrs. T. Nelson & Sons), Rev. L. MacLean Watt, Alloa; Mr. T. N. Hepburn (Gabriel Setoun), Mr. Andrew Elliot, Mr. Jas. H. Thin, Mr. William Brown, Mr. George Blackwood, Mr. O. Schulze, and other members of the trade. Sir John Clark proved an excellent chairman, and in the course of a racy maiden speech recounted his experience in being shown over the large Public Library in Chicago. On entering the Bibliographical Department he was accosted by a handsome young lady assistant, who offered him a nice armchair, asked his name, and disappeared. In a short time the assistant returned with an armful of books on the surname of Clark. He expressed the opinion that authors and publishers were much indebted to the intelligent assistants for their valuable services in introducing their books to the public. Dr. Parrott, in proposing 'The Book Trade,' took note of this, and recounted how much it charmed him to see his first book displayed in the window of an English bookseller. It was a gratification which he had not outlived. Mr. Brown, in replying, spoke of the aroma of the old books being productive of longevity, and said that many of the Edinburgh booksellers—notably Mr. Mackintosh, Mr. Braidwood, Mr. Stillie, Mr. Stevenson, Dr. Laing, Mr. Murray, and others whom he could recall—died in a ripe old age. The tone of these gatherings speaks well for the Edinburgh assistants as well as their employers, and we wish their Association every success.

EXPERIENCES OF A BOOKSELLER'S ASSISTANT.

'A. C. M.' sends us this amusing note:—'Page boy from the neighbouring club, "Please I want some 'Broken Buns.'" On inquiry at the Club I find it is Hawley Smart's "Broken Bonds."

'Simple domestic comes for "All of a Twist." On being asked for further details, said she thought it was about "Chickens." Then the puzzled assistant guessed she meant Dickens's "Oliver Twist."

SPRING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. J. W. Arrowsmith.—'The Westcotes,' by A. T. Quiller-Couch. This is the rather pathetic story of an old maid of thirty-seven who was foolish enough to fall in love with a handsome French boy, one of a numerous body of prisoners placed in charge of her brother, Endymion Westcote, a Justice of the Peace for Somerset and Major of its Yeomanry, during the momentous events of 1810. Poor Dorothea has a painful awakening from her dream. She discovers that the object of her infatuation, whom she has thought to be so noble and devoted, has actually been intriguing with her maid, a pert country lass possessed of a bold beauty that has inflamed the passions of more than the volatile Raoul. The story is a little unsubstantial in structure, but fully makes up for this in the deftness of its character study. Both Dorothea and her faithless lover are well depicted, and an excellent description is given of the kind-hearted but somewhat coarse-fibred county magnate, Endymion Westcote, as contrasted with the courtly bearing of the older French officers.

From Messrs. J. Baker & Son, Clifton.—'Mirth and Music,' by F. B. Doveton. The majority of the poems in this volume are reprints from well-known periodicals, so that they come to us with a certain hall-mark of merit. There are some ninety pieces in all, of which those devoted to mirth constitute about a fourth part; and of these we like best the following, entitled 'Under the Limes':—

'Under the limes in sweet July
With upturned face I stand,
Listening to a lullaby
From some far fairy land;
Is it the surf of summer seas
Breaking on some fair shore?
Do the wind's fingers sweep the trees
Playing old ditties o'er?
'Fain would I pierce the leafy screen,
Seeking a streak of blue;
My eyes are meshed in a maze of green
And I bid heaven adieu.
But the delicate tender gloom
Is full of that dreamy sound—
Music's wedded to each pale bloom
Where the bees their heaven have found.'

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—'The Cathedral Church of Chichester: a Short History and Description of its Fabric, with an Account of the Diocese and See,' by Herbert C. Cortelle, A.R.I.B.A. ('Bell's Cathedral Series.') The author of this volume explores very thoroughly the history of this cathedral since the building first began to take actual shape under Ralph about the year 1088, and he also shows in a highly interesting manner the part that it has played in ecclesiastical affairs. The book is divided into four chapters, respectively treating of the history of the cathedral, the exterior, the interior, and the various church dignitaries at one time or other connected with the diocese and see. The illustrations form a marked attraction of the work, and give additional interest to the text. Of these there are upwards of forty, representing, among other portions of the sacred edifice, the Wall-arcade in the West Porch, the Choir and Central Tower from the south-east, the detached Bell-Tower, the modern Altar and Reredos, the Triforium in the Choir, the Lady Chapel, the tomb assigned to Bishop Richard of Wych, and the pictures at the back of the same by Lambert Bernardi. The majority of these reproductions from photographs are very beautifully executed, and the entire volume may be pronounced a great success.

From Messrs. Adam & Charles Black.—'Men of Renown: King Alfred to Lord Roberts (a Concentric Historical Reader),' by John Finnemore. This, we think, will be found a useful book in schools as an aid to the biographical method of teaching history. The author displays great judgment in the treatment of his subject, and the numerous illustrations should have the effect of still further increasing the interest of the pupil in the lives and historical surroundings of these notable characters.

From the same.—'Waverley' ('Sir Walter Scott Continuous Readers'), edited by E. E. Smith. Of all Scott's novels 'Waverley' would at first sight appear least adapted for school purposes, but Miss Smith has performed her task of condensation with such skill that all the heroic features of the plot remain, while the duller, descriptive passages sink into insignificance. The illustrations are mostly taken from the Dryburgh edition of Scott's novels published by Messrs. Black, but considering the reputation of the artists—Messrs. Charles Green and Gordon Browne—they are not particularly striking, though quite good enough for school purposes. Both introduction and notes display a very commendable simplicity and directness.

From Messrs. Cassell & Co., Limited.—'Kate Bonnet: the Romance of a Pirate's Daughter,' by Frank R. Stockton. Mr. Stockton commences this story so soberly and sedately that we hardly recognise his hand. But anon the old absurdities show themselves. All the trouble arises from the insane desire of a hitherto civil-spoken, peaceable sugar planter of Bridgetown, in the island of Barbadoes, at the beginning of the eighteenth century, to figure as a pirate. So he engages a ship with a bloodthirsty crew, and, leaving his wife and daughter, proceeds to cruise about among the neighbouring islands, spreading terror wherever he appears. The humour of the situation is increased by the fact that this bold buccaneer is no seaman himself, and has to engage a man to navigate his vessel, and that he is accompanied by a faithful Scotchman, who proves a sad thorn in his side by utterly refusing to believe in his master's wickedness. Gladly would Stede Bonnet shake this tiresome adherent off, but he refuses to go. Another amusing circumstance, leading to many comical situations, is that Kate Bonnet sets off in pursuit of her father, and she, on her part, is accompanied by a lowly but devoted admirer, who is prepared to do all manner of heroic actions on her behalf. At length the hare-brained upholder of the skull and cross-bones comes across a real pirate, one Blackbeard, who promptly shows what he thinks of his rival by taking him and his ship prisoner. Stede Bonnet is then consigned to a dry goods store at Belsize owned by the terrible Blackbeard, where he gets the credit of being a converted man engaged in mercantile pursuits. But the old mania is strong within him, and he eventually breaks out again and returns to his old lawless life under the Jolly Roger, ultimately being caught by the authorities and executed. The story is very interesting, though not perhaps equal to some of the author's earlier efforts. It is supplied with some very effective illustrations by A. J. Keller and H. S. Potter.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—'Stories of the Tuscan Artists,' by Albinia Wherry. The object of this beautiful volume is 'to awaken interest in those who do not know the originals' (here reproduced in photogravure and half-tones) 'of these carefully chosen examples, not only in the pictures themselves, but in the story of the artists who painted them.' Fra Angelico, Benozzo Gozzoli, Donatello, Fra Filippo Lippi, and Sandro Botticelli are a few of the artists of whom the author treats in simple, direct language. Young people of fifteen or sixteen upwards will find it an entrancing volume, which should do a great deal towards arousing their interest in the history of the revival of Art in Italy in the Middle Ages.

From Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co.—'Tecumseh, a Drama, and Canadian Poems,' by C. Mair. This is the second edition of a work published some years ago, and this fact alone is a proof that the work possesses no ordinary merit. Mr. Mair has long been recognised in his own country as the Canadian poet. The volume is prettily got up, and should find acceptance in this country.

From Messrs. Methuen & Co.—'The Vision of Dante Alighieri,' translated by Henry Francis Cary, M.A. Part III. 'Paradise.' Revised, with an Introduction by Paget Toynbee, M.A., D.Litt. It was a happy idea of Messrs. Methuen to include in their pretty 'Little Library' a reprint of Cary's 'Dante,' pronounced by that thoroughly competent Dante critic, Ugo Foscolo, so long resident in England, to be the most successful of all the English translations of the 'Divina Commedia' and a great acquisition to the English reader. Mr. Toynbee has prefixed to the volume before us an excellent Introduction on the earlier English translators of this masterpiece of Italian literature, and, as in the case of the 'Hell' and 'Purgatory,' has revised the notes, corrected some errors, added occasional notes where needed, and recast the Index. A portrait of Dante, reproduced from a photograph of the bronze bust of the poet in the Museo Nazionale at Naples, embellishes the volume as a frontispiece.

From Mr. John Murray.—'The Works of Lord Byron,' a new, revised, and enlarged edition, with illustrations. Poetry. Vol. V. Edited by Ernest Hartley Coleridge, M.A. As progress is made with the publication of this new edition of Byron's works, the excellent promise held out by the earlier volumes is seen to be thoroughly justified. A more efficient edition, both in its editorship and general production, it would be difficult to imagine. The present volume contains the plays and poems written during the last two years of Byron's career as a poet, with the exception of Cantos VI.-XV. of 'Don Juan,' 'The Vision of Judgment,' 'The Irish Avatar,' and other minor poems. It may be said to present the neglected portion of Byron's writings, for, as Mr. Coleridge only too truly remarks, the impression exists, though it is impossible of proof, that the greater part of this volume has been passed and left unread by at least two generations of readers. 'Old play-goers recall Macready as "Werner," and many persons have read "Cain"; but, apart from students of literature, readers of "Sardanapalus" and of "The Two Foscari" are rare; of "The Age of Bronze" and "The Island" rarer still.' And yet these dramas are full of great beauty—beauty that excited the admiration of Goethe and Lamartine and Sir Walter Scott. But poetry—more especially of the dramatic or narrative form—that has once fallen out of favour with the reading public is very difficult to revive. It is consigned to some pigeon-hole of obscurity, only to be unearthed by the student, and there it may remain. This is particularly true at the present day, when readers are little disposed to bestow the time and attention that is necessary to the just appreciation of a metrical play or narrative poem, but desire something of much lighter texture, whose good qualities they can recognise without intellectual effort. The reader, however, who will take the trouble to study Byron's plays will be lavishly rewarded by the treasures of thought and conception he will find, though we are quite aware in saying this that we are at variance with many critics of the modern school, who have pronounced them as a whole to be dull and uninspiring. It is certain, at least, that Byron put some of his best energy into these works, for at the time he was quite enamoured of the drama. The illustrations of the volume include portraits of the author, Goethe, Georgiana Duchess of Devonshire, and Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley.

From Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd.—'Oddland,' and other Fairy Tales, by Harry A. James. A delightful volume containing twenty amusing stories, full of charming pictures. 'Oddland' is a very original conception indeed, and the other stories are in no respect inferior to it in interest. As for the illustrations, they are admirable, and we hope to see more of K. M. Skeaping's clever designs in other books for children or those of a larger growth. This beautifully produced volume will be hailed with delight by the inmates of many a nursery.

the numerous American books that now find their way across the Atlantic. It is neither deeply interesting nor utterly commonplace—one of the medium variety, in short. The principal male character is a Boston lawyer named Vander Weyde Craighead. Somehow this patronymic suggests the bold wicked villain of Adelphi melodrama, but Craighead is nothing of a villain—at least in that sense. He goes south to Carolina on a matter of business, the said business being to acquaint a young girl, Truth Dexter, with the fact that a large fortune has been left her by an uncle who fought during the great war between North and South on the Federal side, and thus earned the displeasure of his relations in the South. She proudly refuses to take the money, considering the source from which it comes, and as about this time she and her grandmamma are left in very straitened circumstances through the death of her grandfather, the lawyer, as the only way out of the difficulty, marries her, and so, as her legal representative, takes possession of the estate until she comes of age. The story then goes on to recount the experiences of their married life. Truth is by no means wanting in personal attractions, but she is shy and countrified, and little adapted to take the position in Boston Society that is hers by right. However, time and tutelage at the hands of an experienced chaperon work wonders, and in the end she becomes quite the woman of fashion. What is more, she thoroughly wins her husband's love, which at one time showed signs of going to a beautiful enchantress named Orchid Wiley, with whom Craighead had had some love passages before marriage. The character of Truth Dexter has many charming attributes, and these should be sufficiently strong to hold the reader's attention to the last page.

From Messrs. B. F. Stevens & Brown (San Francisco: A. M. Robertson).—'Turquoise and Iron,' by Lionel Josaphare. The author of this volume of poems has evidently a very florid imagination, combined with some skill of poetic expression, but he may be recommended to exercise greater self-restraint. Such lines as the following, taken from a piece entitled 'The Splendid Earth,' though possibly covering a wealth of meaning, will, we are sure, be quite unintelligible to the majority of readers:

'Insipidly with rancid lips he browsed
The sweets of evening air. From bed unclean
Him, some belated sunbeam had aroused,
To curse the wanton beauty of the scene.'

The mental impression produced by this curious arrangement of words is distinctly unpleasant. For our own part, we have never met a man with 'rancid lips' given to 'browsing' on evening air, and fervently hope that we never may.

NEW EDITIONS.—Messrs. Macmillan & Co. have added Egerton Castle's clever story 'Young April' to their three-and-sixpenny Library of Works by Popular Authors. It is exceptionally well illustrated.—The new edition of 'Ben-Hur,' by Lew Wallace, published in Messrs. Methuen's 'Sixpenny Library,' should meet with great success, for the production of the play at Drury Lane is bound to draw renewed attention to the work.

—Volume V. in the new, well printed, and neatly bound 'Windsor' edition of Harrison Ainsworth's novels, sent out by Messrs. Gibbings & Co., consists of 'St. James's, or the Court of Queen Anne.' It is not, perhaps, the happiest of the author's efforts, and yet in many respects it displays some of his most characteristic touches. The title-page of the volume is cleverly designed by Frank Brangwyn, and there are four photogravures from the etchings by George Cruikshank.—Mr. Grant Richards has published 'The Pilgrim's Progress' in 'The World's Classics' series, and the production may be commended generally for its handy size, clear printing, and neat binding. It is a very acceptable addition to a very useful little library of standard works.—We have received from Mr. Joseph Banister, of 42 Gray's Inn Road, a copy of the second edition of his book on 'England under the Jews,' which is remarkable for some very outspoken criticism, not altogether in the best of taste.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

REGULATIONS.

1. BOOKS IN PRINT ARE NOT ADVERTISED FOR, but can only appear in the ordinary Column advertisements and at the usual scale rate. Every care is taken to prevent this rule from being infringed; but we cannot hold ourselves in any way responsible for occasional oversights. Subscribers are requested to make careful inquiry at the Publishers' before sending their lists for these Columns.
2. Only one title will be inserted in each line.
3. Collective advertisements are not admissible, except in the case of very old subjects, where it may naturally be supposed the Advertisers have a difficulty in obtaining the titles.
4. All lists should be sent to the Office, addressed to the 'Manager of the Publishers' Circular,' as early in the week as possible, and in no case later than Wednesday morning. Advertisements received too late for one issue (i.e., on Thursday) are not inserted in the next unless express instructions to this effect are given. This is to avoid any misunderstanding arising from charging for extra lines.
5. Every Annual Subscriber has the privilege of a four-line Advertisement free each week in these columns, and can have extra lines at 3d. per line prepaid. For Non-Subscribers a uniform rate of 3d. per line prepaid is charged, the name and address being counted as one line.
6. The Proprietors reserve to themselves the right of refusing any Advertisement.

JACKSON'S NEW SERIES OF DRAWING COPY BOOKS

LANDSCAPE, FREEHAND, ORNAMENT, ANIMALS, BIRDS, FLOWERS, FRUIT, HUMAN FIGURE.

Each Book is complete in itself with three pages (13 in. by 9 in.) of models and three sheets of specially made cartridge paper for drawing on by the pupil. The designs and copies are from Original Drawings by some of the most distinguished Artists, and it may safely be said that the entire course forms the best and cheapest set of Drawing Copy Books hitherto offered to the profession.

PRICE 6d. EACH BOOK.

NUMBERS AND CONTENTS.

SECTION I. LANDSCAPE: Book A, Elementary; Book B, Intermediate; Book C, Figure and Advanced.
 " III. ORNAMENT: Book A, Intermediate; Book B, Advanced.
 " IV. ANIMALS: Book A, Advanced.

SECTION V. BIRDS: Book A, Advanced.
 " VIII. HUMAN FIGURE: Book A, Elementary; Book B, Intermediate; Book C, Advanced; Book D, Draped Advanced.
 SECTIONS II. (FREEHAND), VI. (FLOWERS), and VII. (FRUIT), in preparation.

IMPERIAL COMPETITION IN JACKSON'S DRAWING COPY BOOKS

This Competition is open to all pupils in public and private schools throughout the British Empire. There are eighteen superior prizes for both Junior and Senior pupils, and, in addition to nearly one hundred other prizes, Certificates of Merit will be awarded to those whose work deserves such recognition. Now that Drawing is a compulsory subject, the opportunity is afforded to pupils in Elementary Schools of winning valuable premiums with a minimum of labour, as there are only three pages of models to each book in the Series.

For Conditions and all Particulars of above Competition, apply to the Publishers.

PRESS OPINIONS.

'They cover a wide range—in marked contrast to the tame and ordinary drawing book. . . . Draughtsmen will welcome these bright and attractive copies.'—JOURNAL OF EDUCATION.

Debrett's Dictionary of The Coronation . . .

OWING to the exceptional length of the last reign, many of the ceremonies, customs, and events connected with the Coronation are entirely novel and outside the knowledge of the present generation, while particulars regarding them are not easily accessible except by the expenditure of much time and trouble, and the purchase of many costly books. An explanatory volume, therefore, dealing with these matters cannot fail to be of interest and use at the present time.

In Debrett's Dictionary of the Coronation visitors to London, strangers in this country, public officials, as well as all private individuals will find just what they want to know about this event and kindred matters, with explanations of the various forms and ceremonies, such as the Coronation itself, the Court of Claims, Regalia, Procession, Precedence, Styles, and Titles, Household Appointments, Officers of State and other officials (with biographies), Orders of Knighthood, State Departments, &c., as well as an Appendix of information useful to those staying in London for a short period. The explanations are given in the form of short articles, and are arranged in the most convenient way for ready reference—namely, all alphabetical in one alphabet, with many cross references, in addition to which there is a copious Index.

Bound up as a frontispiece to Debrett's Dictionary of the Coronation (8s. 6d. net) will be found a most interesting and unique Genealogical Chart of the Kings and Queens of England, with many most interesting notes by Blue mantle Pursuivant of Arms, and showing at a glance the succession to the British Crown. The book is also procurable without the Chart at 2s. 6d. net.

Early applications should be made to

DEAN & SON, Limited, 160^a FLEET STREET, E.C.

(Publishers of 'Debrett's Peerage,' 'Debrett's Coming Events,' &c., &c.)

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.—Copy with Order should reach the Manager as early in the week as possible. If received later than Wednesday morning it is impossible to guarantee proofs.

THE GHOST OF THE ENGLISHWOMAN

By JOHN HOUDART DE LISLE

(An attractive crown 8vo. 386 pages, 5s. net)

Published by JOHN FLETCHER, 6 Pennsylvania Park, Exeter.

FROM ALL BOOKSELLERS, AT THE STORES, AND ON ALL BOOKSTALLS.

Mr. W. T. STEAD writes:—

'... Decidedly clever ...'

The 'Old Bookseller,' in TO-DAY, says:—

'Beginning, middle, and ending, "The Ghost of an Englishwoman," by JOHN HOUDART DE LISLE, is a curious book. The author has worked up a telling plot.'

The Writer of 'An Englishwoman's Love Letters' writes to JOHN HOUDART DE LISLE:—

'Excellent. ... A trespass so politely done has to be forgiven. ... You provide me with a way out of my coffin which I had not thought of. I am infinitely obliged to you.'

The DUNDEE ADVERTISER:—

'... JOHN HOUDART DE LISLE'S novel is calculated to make the reading world as happy as the "Englishwoman" made it miserable. This is what everyone who sorrowed over her desired might happen. ... After leaving her to die in loneliness and despair, it is supreme satisfaction to—' [Gently, Mr. Reviewer, we must leave something for the reader to find out.]

The LEICESTER POST gifted Reviewer says:—

'A really cleverly-written story. ... Plot original, and worked out with conspicuous skill and tact. The hero and heroine at once arouse the interest of the reader, and this is never allowed to flag until the end is reached. The other characters are deftly drawn and contrasted, and all combine to make up a work of fiction admirably adapted to become deservedly popular. ... Few will lay down the book without hoping for some future novel of the same striking type from this accomplished hand.'

The IRISH TIMES qualifies the book as 'interesting and ingenious.' From its exhaustive and highly eulogistic article we cull the following:—

'... In fact, Mr. John Houdart De Lisle sets himself to narrate the history of the wooing of the Englishwoman, to describe the hero and the villains of the piece in detail, to fill up the blanks and round off the story. The whole thing is exceedingly skilful, humorously conceived, and carried out with the utmost success. The style lends additional charm; there are frequent neat touches of real wit, and characters are depicted with fine force and unerring truth. The book might stand by itself; taken into connection with its predecessor, and as a genial and kindly satire upon it, it is a pronounced success. ... We liked the "GHOST" immensely.'

The GLASGOW HERALD:—

'... Mr. De Lisle is evidently fond of French models. ... But he is also a clever writer with a happy vein of characterisation.'

THE GHOST OF THE ENGLISHWOMAN, BY JOHN HOUDART DE LISLE,

A COPY OF HOLINSHED'S 'CHRONICLES' AS USED BY SHAKESPEARE.

We noticed the following interesting item in the Catalogue of Mr. A. Fehrenbach, of 56 Division Street, Sheffield:

Holinshed (Raphael) Chronicles of England, Scotland, & Ireland; THE GENUINE FIRST (or 'SHAKESPEARE') EDITION, profusely illustrated with remarkable woodcuts, printed throughout in Black Letter, 2 vols. tk. folio, half calf neat, SLIGHTLY IMPERFECT, therefore offered at the LOW PRICE of £9. 9s. 1577

The above has been made up by a former possessor out of two copies, and the 'Description of Ireland' is cut close. No perfect copy has occurred for sale for many years. The above has the genuine title to vol. 2, mounted, and substituted title to vol. 1; and, though it has some leaves missing, is in remarkable good CLEAN SOUND STATE. This is the edition believed to have been used by SHAKESPEARE. In the later issue the language was much altered and the woodcuts omitted.

Harrison's DESCRIPTION OF BRITAIN ('Shakespeare's England') prefixed to vol. 1, is QUITE PERFECT in this copy.

Mr. Sidney Lee informs us that it was probably a later edition which was used by Shakespeare.*

In Drake's 'Shakespeare and his Times' the work is thus referred to: 'The Chronicle of Holinshed merits a high title. It is more full and complete than any of its predecessors, and less loaded with trifling matter. The description of England by the Rev. W. Harrison,

* See his account of the little we know about Holinshed in the 'Dictionary of National Biography'; also Stone's 'Shakespeare's Holinshed.'

prefixed to the first volume, is the most interesting and valuable document, as a picture of the country, and of the costume, and mode of living of its inhabitants, which the sixteenth century has produced.'

Undoubtedly Raphael Holinshed's 'Chronicles' is one of the most interesting works in the English language. In the first place it is a wonderful piece of printing, the pages, size nearly 11 x 8, are printed in black letter, and at a rough estimate we should say there are considerably over two million words, set in double columns, with admirably arranged marginal notes and dates, and very full index. In the space between the columns every tenth line is marked by a number, and the index refers you not only to the page but to the line—an arrangement not often met with in any modern index.

The edition of 1577 contains a large number of woodcuts, chiefly portraits, or supposed portraits, of kings, princes, bishops, &c., and battle scenes, very quaint and interesting. One curious thing in connection with these illustrations is that the same wood block is made to do duty scores of times; for instance, in a battle between the Romans and the Britons we are shown Roman soldiers in the act of firing their guns at the naked Britons armed with the spear and bow; a few pages on and both Romans and Britons use cannon, and the Roman and British fleets of three-deckers vomit flame and shot in a style which must have delighted Julius Cæsar if he saw it. Then a thousand years later the same cuts do duty in the wars between England and France. On page 15 of the Historie of England there is an illustration of Corineus having a 'wrestell' with a giant 'of surpassing strengthe and great estimation named Gogmagog.' The scene of this wrestling match was on the cliffs at Dover, from which Corineus cast the giant down headlong, in the year 1116 B.C., soon after the taking of Troy. More than 2000 years afterwards the same woodcut does duty as illustrating this little story:

'The same time there was a Norman in King Edwardes Court of such passing strength of bodye, that he overthrewe all men with whome he wrestled, tyll at length one Ferquhard a Scottish man borne, of the country of Rosse, descended of noble parentage, vanquished him to his great prayse and advancement in honor, for King Alexander of Scotland in guerdon of so worthie a deed there done in the presence of so honourable an assemble, gave unto him the Earldome of Rosse forevermore.'

Holinshed's first edition of his great work, published in 1577, gave offence to Queen Elizabeth by reason of its too outspoken account of some of the characters and events described, and in the later issue it was altered in places and the woodcuts omitted, and, truth to tell, some of them had already shown signs of the many 'battels,' sieges, and other encounters in which they so nobly did their part. But they lend undying interest to this first edition, since we know they must have been reflected in the eyes of Shakespeare, of the maiden Queen herself, and all her glorious Court; it is this which gives these old black letter histories a fascination which is wanting in our modern compilations.

Since writing these notes we have received a copy of Mr. Henry Frowde's attractive little publication called the Periodical, which consists chiefly of extracts from and notes about the publications of that invaluable national institution, the Oxford Press—a fount whence the learning of Oxford is disseminated all over the world.

ORIGIN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE.

In the Periodical we find this note about the origin of the rival University of Cambridge:

'The University of Cambridge originated through a migration from Oxford. In 1209 an Oxford townswoman was killed by a clerk; whether accidentally or not, we do not know. King John, who was under sentence of excommunication, and so had no desire to protect the clergy, allowed the people of Oxford to have their revenge by putting two or three scholars to death. Their fellow students became alarmed, and began to migrate, some to Paris, some to Reading, and some to Cambridge. There is no evidence that Cambridge had acquired any special pre-eminence as an educational centre before the beginning of the thirteenth century. No doubt it possessed one of the grammar schools which, by this time, were to be found in most English towns. The rise of Cambridge received a check from a return of scholars to Oxford in 1214, on John's reconciliation with the Church, but it had, some fifteen years later, an accession of strength from the dispersion of the scholars of Paris. The distinguishing mark of the English Universities today is the collegiate system. Yet, Paris, not Oxford, was the original home of the college as an academic institution.'

The date 1209 enabled us in a minute or two to find Holinshed's account of this migration from Oxford. He says:

'About the same time also, it chanced that a priest slue a woman at Oxforde, and when the Kings officers could not finde him that had committed the murther, they apprehended three other Priestes not guiltie to the fact, and streight way hanged them up without judgement. With which crueltie, others of the Universitie being put in feare, departed thence in great numbers, and came not thither again for a long time after, some of them repaying to Cambridge, and some to Reading to apply their studies in those places, leaving Oxford voyde.'

The account Holinshed gives of the origin of the University of Cambridge is slightly different from that of Mr. Henry Frowde, and more in accordance with Cambridge feeling and tradition. He says:

'But the foundation of the Universitie of Oxford passed all the residue of his [i.e. King Alfred's] byldings which he began by the good exhortation and advise of Neotus an Abbotte in those days highly esteemed for his vertue and lerning with Alvred.

'This woorke he tooke in hande aboute the 23, yeare of his reigne, whiche was in the yeare of our Lorde 895.

'So that the Universitie of Cambridge was founded before thys other at Oxforde about 265 yeares as Polydore gathereth. For Sigebert King of the East Angles began to erecte that Universitie at Cambridge, about the yeare of our Lorde 630.'

P.S.—Just as the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR is going to press we have received from Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge a catalogue of 2,347 items from the library of the late Henry White, Esq., J.P., to be sold in eleven lots, from April 21 to May 2. In addition to many rare books, illuminated manuscripts, &c., we notice two copies of Holinshed's 'Chronicles,' one of the 1577 edition, called in the catalogue 'The First or Shakespeare Edition,' and one of the 1587 edition.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Messrs. Longmans have nearly ready for publication 'The Mystery of William Shakespeare: a Summary of Evidence,' by his Honour Judge Thomas E. Webb.

It is refreshing to find our American cousins crowing over having successfully copied the English featherweight papers.

The American Stationer says: 'The March number of the North American Review is a triumph of magazine manufacture. It is the first periodical ever printed on the new American featherweight paper, and is not only a pleasure to the eye by reason of its clean, clear appearance, but a relief to the weary hand of the magazine reader. The new review, although it contains the same number of pages as usual, weighs but little more than half as much as the review issued in February. For a long time American paper manufacturers have been experimenting in the production of a native article which would equal the imported English paper, and yield, as the English paper does, the greatest bulk with the least possible weight. This has finally been accomplished, and the March number of the North American Review has the honour to introduce the welcome innovation.'

'The American News Company is making a special push on the veranda chairs shown in the accompanying illustration. These chairs are well and strongly made, can be manipulated very easily, and are provided with an awning, so the question of shade is solved everywhere. Nothing more comfortable has ever been devised. Full information will be sent upon application to the company.'

If the gentleman in the chair had been reading a book or even a newspaper we could have more readily understood how it is the American News Company comes to sell chairs. The affair itself looks as if it would sell even in this benighted country.

It will be remembered that a few weeks ago Messrs. Methuen published at 1s. 6d. a facsimile of a little nursery book by Charles Lamb, entitled 'The King and Queen of Hearts.' The authorship of this trifle was discovered by Mr. E. V. Lucas in the course of his researches for his edition of Charles Lamb about to be published by Messrs. Methuen, and the only copy known was found in the possession of a lady who had given a few shillings for it. Such interest was created by the issue of the facsimile that the little original was sold on March 19 for the extraordinary sum of £225.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton will publish immediately an important work by the Rev. John Oman, entitled 'The Church and its Purpose; or, the Throne of St. Peter'—a story of the nature and object of the Church's authority.

The King and Queen have jointly accepted the dedication of the Collection of Hymns for the Coronation, just published by Messrs. Skeffington, of Piccadilly.

Messrs. Sotheby & Co. will sell on Tuesday next, the 8th inst., among other books, a rare collection of Sheridans. They include first editions of 'Pizarro,' 1799; 'The Duenna,' 1794; 'The Critic,' 1781; also the first London edition of 'The School for Scandal,' 1797; a Dublin edition of the same play dated 1786; the rare first Dublin edition of 'The Duenna,' 1786; and London editions of 'The Rivals,' 'The Critic,' and 'The Duenna,' all bearing the early date of 1797.

Doubtless many readers of these lines have customers who are fond of shooting, fishing, and yachting. If they want a first-rate American weekly sportsman's journal they should get Forest and Stream, published in New York.

'Love Grown Cold,' a new novel by Annie Swan, will be published by Messrs. Methuen next week. It is a story of Scottish life and character, and deals with the fortunes of a young journalist and of his adventures as a war correspondent. This is the first story which the authoress has written or published for two years.

A new serial story will commence in the Queen newspaper next week, entitled 'Love and the Soul Hunters,' by John Oliver Hobbes.

'Rolf Boldrewood'—or Mr. T. A. Browne, as he is in real life, and who has just resigned the presidency of the Australian Literature Society—is in his seventy-sixth year. He is a Wessex man by birth, but as a boy of four he accompanied his father to Australia. When he first saw Melbourne it was only a hamlet of a hundred houses. It is now a splendid city of half a million inhabitants, and Mr. Browne lives in its most fashionable suburb. In early life he was a squatter, worth a quarter of a million; then came a succession of disastrous droughts that ruined him. He entered the Government service as a stipendiary magistrate and goldfields warden, and devoted his leisure hours to literature. Several of his realistic stories of Australian life and character had been published in the Melbourne and Sydney weeklies before he became known to English readers.—Slate.

208 Shakspeare's Plays and Poems, carefully revised from the best authorities, with a memoir and an essay on his genius by Barry Cornwall, illustrated by 35 full page etchings on steel and a very extensive series of wood engravings, from designs by Kenny Meadows, SPECIAL COPY, EXTRA ILLUSTRATED BY A SPLENDID SERIES OF 45 LARGE STEEL PORTRAITS of Shakspeare's Heroines, 2 large and sumptuous volumes, ELABORATELY BOUND IN FULL MOROCCO SUPER EXTRA, gilt backs, handsome gold tooling on sides and borders of gold inside covers, gilt leaves, IN CHOICE STATE, £3 10s. (Cost the late owner £8 8s.) Orr, N.D.

This item is in the catalogue of Messrs. Lowe Brothers, 45 Newhall Street, Birmingham.

The next volume in Messrs. Methuen's 'Little Biographies' is 'The Life of Sir Walter Raleigh,' by Miss I. A. Taylor. This book, which is uniform with Dr. Paget Toynbee's 'Life of Dante' and Mr. Horsburgh's 'Life of Savonarola,' is founded on a careful study of the chief authorities, and is well illustrated.

The new volume of Mr. Grant Richards's 'How To' series is 'How to Succeed as a Journalist,' by John Pendleton.

'I should like,' said the man, 'to get a position as proof-reader.'

'Sorry,' said the publisher, 'but we've laid off all our proof-readers; don't need 'em.'

'You don't?'

'No. We're publishing nothing but dialect stories now.'—Philadelphia Press.

Mr. Alfred C. Harmsworth is the editor of the new volume of the Badminton Library, 'Motors and Motor-Driving,' which Messrs. Longmans will publish on April 16. Mr. Harmsworth was one of the first to take the motor seriously in this country; he is an expert driver, and has secured contributions from other experts, so that his volume is certain to be thoroughly well done in every way.

Mr. Grant Richards will shortly publish a volume entitled 'The Primrose and Darwinism,' by 'A. Field Naturalist.' The author claims to refute Darwin's theories of the fertilisation and cross-fertilisation of wild flowers. He is of opinion that the method of investigation employed by Darwin—namely, artificial experiment—is misleading in the case of the extremely sensitive reproductive organisations in question, and that the true method is to collect circumstantial evidence by direct observation in the field. On such evidence the argument of the book is based. A number of illustrative diagrams are provided.

The Temple Magazine for April contains the beginning of a new serial story entitled 'The White Lady of the Zenana.' The story is of an English lady who married a Hindu law student in England, and who went out to India with him, and was incarcerated in a Mahomedan Zenana, and entirely shut out from the world, and relates her desperate attempts at escape.

Messrs. P. S. King & Son, of Orchard House, Westminster, will shortly publish a book entitled 'The South African War and the "Bear" Operator: a Financial Revolution,' by Charles W. Smith, the well-known author of 'Commercial Gambling' and other works in connection with international, financial, and commercial gambling on the bourses of the world.

'El Ombu' is the title of the second volume of Messrs. Duckworth & Co.'s 'Greenback Library.'

Many people who have to write much with a lead pencil complain of discomfort if not actual pain from holding a hard substance between the thumb and fingers. A very simple cure for this, which we have found effective, is to twist an elastic band on the pencil just where it is held; it makes a soft, springy pad, which takes the pressure off the nerves and bones.

All interested in Sunday Schools should see the article 'Efficiency of Sunday Schools' in the April number of that excellent little monthly the Church Sunday School Magazine, now in its 38th volume.

The next number of Messrs. Methuen's Sixpenny Library, which will be published at the beginning of April, is Mrs. Oliphant's long story 'Sir Robert's Fortune.'

THE STATIONERS' COMPANY.

Mr. Joseph Shaylor and Mr. Walter Fairfoot Webster have been elected the Renter Wardens of the Stationers' Company for the ensuing year.

Letters to the Editor

COPYRIGHT IN CANADA.

DEAR SIR,—In reply to Mr. Gage's letter, will you allow me to say that the report of my first observations seems fairly correct, but at this distance of time—seven years—I am obliged to speak from a treacherous memory, as I have not a copy of it? You will notice it is a summary of what passed, not the ipsissima verba.

Mr. Gage should, I think, have stated in his letter that the whole object of the meeting was to make a representation on the subject for the consideration of the Canadian Government; that for that purpose I consented 'generally' to this draft being used, but suggested that a committee representing all interests be appointed to consider it in detail. As the whole subject is dependent on its detail, this was vitally important.

I have no recollection whatever of the final paragraph, and cannot believe that it is correct; nor can I be responsible for it, as it contradicts the previous statements and is not in harmony with my reply to the printers and publishers in Toronto two or three days afterwards.

I only saw the draft Bill about two hours before the meeting. When I was able to look into it afterwards I found it impracticable and ultra vires, and from that time the treatment of the subject on such lines has been tacitly dropped.

I am, dear Sir,

Yours truly,

Belvedere:

PROPOSED BOOKSELLERS' BENEVOLENT SCHEME.

SIR,—I am very pleased to find that Mr. D. Haldane has joined this discussion and contributed an opinion that is worth having. This opinion is the more valuable because I know that if a society were to be established to-morrow Mr. Haldane would be one of the first to join.

I do not for one moment dispute Mr. Haldane's dictum that 'there is no enthusiasm among the assistants.' There is none, but it can be made—created, if you will. At the same time, I do not agree that a lack of 'criticism of Mr. Brabrook's proposals' is evidence of their indifference. Assistants, in my opinion, are afraid to have their names or opinions in print for one of two reasons—that of fear of offending their employers, or the dread of personal remarks from their friends, insinuating self-interest, pride, &c. I know scores of capable assistants who are in favour of Mr. Brabrook's scheme and yet for one of the two reasons given refrain from making their influence felt through the medium of the press.

Mr. Haldane describes this scheme as 'a hybrid of the Benevolent and Provident,' a capital phrase but somewhat short of the mark, for I take it that Mr. Brabrook's suggestion is Benevolent pure and simple, for you could by no stretch of imagination call a man 'provident' who did no more to provide against a rainy day than pay 10s. 6d. per annum into a benevolent society. 'Many can help one, but one cannot help many,' is the principle that Mr. Brabrook has in view, so that the term 'hybrid' cannot possibly apply.

Mr. Haldane is of opinion that there would be 'no inducement for a man to pay 10s. 6d. per annum for twenty years unless he is sure he will receive benefit for himself and family, if needed.' Now, I ask, what possible benefit, needed or otherwise, could a man get for £10 10s., the payment of which is spread over twenty years? Personally, I cannot conceive of a better investment for a poor man with a wife and family than 10s. 6d. per annum in the proposed or similar society.

As to the ballot system—ours is a limited trade, and votes would be cumulative. The votes polled by an unsuccessful candidate would stand to his or her credit for the next election; besides, provision would be made in the organisation of the society for assisting the utterly friendless candidates, as is done in every other society of this kind.

Mr. Haldane's illustration drawn from the New Testament is very good, but he misses the real point. Our Saviour taught us by the help which He rendered to the helpless bed-ridden man that we are to ignore the doctrine that the 'weakest must go to the wall,' and fight the economic conditions under which we live that render life hard to those least fitted to bear its hardships.

Mr. Haldane's best and most telling point is his reply to Mr. Campbell, 'Heaven alone helps those who help themselves,' as the boy said when he got hold of the jam pot; and I trust Mr. Campbell will take the hint, and call a little meeting of assistants; both Mr. Cater and I will help with the expense, and if the date could be fixed at a time when Mr. Brabrook was making one of his rare visits to the Metropolis, to give us all an opportunity of meeting him, I feel sure something definite would be the outcome, even if only in a humble way.

Thanking you in anticipation,

Faithfully yours,

Ilford:

FRED. J. RYMER.

THE POPE FUND.

DEAR SIR,—Enclosed I send the final list of subscriptions to this Fund, and shall feel obliged if you can kindly find space for it in your next issue. The Committee who have had this matter in hand desire to convey their warmest thanks to all those members of the trade who have so generously and promptly responded to their appeal, as well as to those who have assisted them in their efforts; more especially do they desire to express their hearty appreciation of your kindness in giving the Fund that publicity which it would have been impossible for them to secure in any other way.

Yours faithfully,

YOUNG J. PENTLAND.

THE LETTERING OF THIN BOOKS, MAGAZINES, &c.

SIR,—May I congratulate Messrs. Low through your columns upon the lettering of the back of 'The English Catalogue of Books, 1901,' from top to bottom?

I trust that this example will be widely followed, and that we shall soon see all thin books issued with their backs lettered from top to bottom.

As a journalist and book-lover I cannot understand any of the objections urged against this course. If I lay a book on the table, I naturally lay it down as I should read it, with its foot towards me. How then can I wish its back-title to run, if not downwards?

Your obedient servant,

HERBERT H. STURMER.

[We notice most American magazines are lettered to read from the top of the back down, and not from the bottom upwards. All the same, we know many of our readers are still not convinced. But our chief object was to get these thin books &c. lettered along the back in some way, and not left quite blank, as is still so often the case.—Ed.]

POSTAGE ON AMERICAN LETTERS.

DEAR SIR,—When 'Aggrieved' finds out why it is that we understamp our correspondence to England (in reality, probably because, being accustomed to one-ounce rates for domestic letters, we forget that foreign letters go at half-ounce rates), he will turn his attention to insufficient prepayment on receipted bills sent to this country. Our postal regulations charge full letter rates on receipts, even in unsealed envelopes. Apparently such receipts go for less in England, since I often have to pay over-charges on receipted bills from booksellers in England, said receipted bills being in unsealed envelopes and bearing a halfpenny stamp.

MR. CHOATE.

Mr. Choate, the American Ambassador, who so genially presided at the recent annual dinner of the Fly-Fishers' Club, asserted that he was not even an expert amateur fisherman. He speedily, however, evidenced his skill at angling, for he adroitly fished out of present-day politics popular phrases pertaining to 'tabernacles' and 'open doors,' and spliced them with expert diplomatic ingenuity into a line of up-to-date eloquence which landed his audience admirably. He netted shoals of applause and much good will. His recommendation that the fly-fishers of the two continents should get their rods and lines intertwined and joined across the Atlantic into a bond of peace and concord was applauded to the echo.—Court Journal, March 22, 1902.

THE PUBLISHERS' EXHIBITION AT BRISTOL.

This exhibition was held during this week at the University College in connection with the Annual Conference of the National Union of Teachers. A very fine collection of educational, prize, and other books, school stationery, and apparatus was on view, to which all the leading firms contributed. Numbers of teachers took advantage of the efforts to place before them the latest and best that educational experts have produced. Between sixty and seventy houses were represented by their travellers or themselves personally. In the majority of instances, producer and consumer met for the first time, and no effort was spared to display to advantage the various goods of interest to the teaching profession. Messrs. Blackie & Son had a capital display, and their representatives, captained by Mr. Chas. Castell, were kept busy by a constant stream of visitors. Messrs. Macmillan & Co. interested a number of lady teachers in their new book 'Physical Training for Girls.'

Messrs. G. W. Bacon & Co. had as usual a very fine display of maps, and their present to the delegates of an excellent plan of Bristol was much appreciated. Jackson's vertical writing copy-books were shown by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., together with specimens of the handwriting of the children, marking the marvellous progress to be made in writing with either right or left hand by adopting the Jacksonian System. The Standard Books for Boys by Kingston, Henty, Verne &c. were much admired. Messrs. George Gill & Son had as usual a businesslike exhibit. Messrs. Longmans & Co. had all their new school books on show, most of which have been previously noticed by us. The Religious Tract Society's stall was gay with the bright coloured cloth books for prizes and rewards, and the various School Furnishing and Supply Companies were to the front with books, stationery, and apparatus, especially the Scholastic Trading Company, Limited, of Bristol and Cardiff, who had quite a small army of assistants under the direction of Mr. Cottle, who, by the way, is the inventor of a clever little desk rack to support a small blackboard in teaching ambidexterity and brush work.

To give the names of all the firms exhibiting would take up too much of our space, a full list of which will doubtless appear in the educational papers. Next year's Conference is to be held at Buxton, when it is hoped that even greater success will attend the efforts of the 'trade' to reach the teachers and others interested in education.

MET HIS MATCH.

Presiding Justice Van Brunt of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court is a man of rare good humour, and yet withal a judge who can call an offending lawyer to account in a manner that he is not likely to forget. The Presiding Justice met his match, however, in a young lawyer who appeared before his august bench last week.

It was a simple cause that the young lawyer pleaded, but his heart was in it and he believed that he was entitled to a reversal of the verdict that had been rendered against him. He was armed with all the authorities, and he quoted from them copiously. The honorable Justice yawned as he presented his case in this elemental fashion.

'Pardon me,' interrupted Justice Van Brunt after a time, 'but I would suggest that you get down to the merits of your case.'

'Presently, your Honour, presently,' responded the young lawyer, with forensic eloquence, yet he continued with renewed earnestness to expound the law as he saw it.

'Let me suggest to you,' said Justice Van Brunt, interrupting again, 'that you get down to the merits of your case and take it for granted that the court is familiar with the elementary principles of law.'

'No, your Honour, no,' declared the young lawyer, with absolute sincerity. 'That was the mistake that I made when I argued this case in the lower court.'—New York Times.

WHO SUCCEEDS?

The young man who is making his way through the world, depending upon his energy, industry, and intelligence to lift him higher, must not neglect to cultivate the study of mankind. No matter how efficient he may be in other qualities, if he is not a judge of men he is doomed to failure.

A man must possess the faculty of winning the confidence of other men and of making them his friends if he would be successful in any way. This faculty, or gift, is born with some. They touch a sympathetic chord in every one they meet, are given a hearing when more worthy men are turned away, and succeed along their chosen lines when men of immensely greater ability plod along at the foot.

If we say they possess tact, we only half express it. Tact is saying and doing the right thing at the right time to the right person. Tact prevents blunders that would make enemies, but does not necessarily make friends. Tact is the form, but the feeling lies deeper down. To make friends, tact must be present, but the heart only can tie the knot of friendship.

The strength of youth is its unlimited hopefulness. Success is just around the corner; in a few years, at most, she will be overtaken; then come ease and luxury! The great majority of those in the race never catch a glimpse of her robes, and the ones who lag farthest in the rear are those whose manners were so unsympathetic or forbidding that the men who could and would have helped them refrained, perhaps at the critical moment, from saying the word or doing the thing that would have advanced them.

I am at this moment interested in a man who is out of work and who is struggling bravely to find a position. When he is not near me I study how I can help him, and canvass friends who may need a man and who would give my recommendation some weight. But when he comes to see me he has not talked five minutes before I begin to think that I wouldn't want him near me all the time; and feeling so, I wonder if it is right that I should commend him to others. He has not tact. He does not permit me to get half way through a sentence before he interrupts me to agree with me, while he proceeds to finish my sentence in an entirely different way from what I had intended. I conclude that it is not worth while to go back and finish in the way I started out to do, so let it go as he left it, but I do not volunteer any further remarks. When he goes away I still wish he will find a place without my having to make a special recommendation.

Every young man, with the competition of life around him, should probe deep down into his own soul and learn for himself just what is the measure of his capacity to win the good will of other men. He should be absolutely honest with himself, listening to no flattering tale, but facing the truth fearlessly.

I recall another young man who was visiting in a city for a few days and was taken by his host to call upon the head of a wholesale house that he might see how business was done in that busy place. The young man and the merchant talked together for an hour, and the latter drew from the youth the story of his life thus far and his aspirations for the future. That evening the merchant called upon the host, and as he took his leave particularly requested the young man to call upon him in the morning. He then said:—

'Some remarks you made yesterday kept repeating themselves to me after you went away. I think you are possessed of the spirit that succeeds. I want a man in my office; if you wish to take hold you may.'

The offer was promptly accepted, and neither man ever had cause to regret it.

As any man studies his relations with other men, and analyses the position in which he holds those whom he meets in either a social or business way, he must confess that he divides these into two classes: those who attract and those who repel him. There is a small percentage to whom he is indifferent, but the great majority are in the two classes I have named.

A man who intends to succeed must have friends. These are not to be bought or borrowed ready made: they must be evolved out of the men and women whom he meets, both in social life and in business. How shall he do this? I know of no better rule than that given in Proverbs: 'A man that hath friends must show himself friendly.' If this was given as the rule by which a man shall keep his friends, much more is it the law to be adopted by which one shall create friends for himself.

There is a class of people who make friends easily, but who do not hold them. If they are travelling salesmen their first trip is usually a good one, but each succeeding trip grows poorer until they are dropped. It does not seem to be because they are insincere, but because they do not wear well. All that there is in them is on the surface.

There are others who are much too friendly in appearance upon short acquaintance. They ask about trade with such gravity of tone as if they had come these hundreds of miles to get the answer to that one question. You feel that they are acting a part, and you are not complimented that they should think that you are deceived by it.—Saturday Evening Post.

TRADE CHANGE.

Mr. S. Meech, late of Messrs. G. W. Bacon & Co., Strand, has been appointed London manager for Messrs. W. & A. K. Johnston, Limited.

INDIANA MEN TO ESTABLISH A PAPER MILL IN LONDON.

According to W. J. Alford, Indiana capital is to invade England on a large scale and build the first coated paper mill in London. Among the men interested are M. R. Williams, formerly of Anderson, Ind.; Crawford Fairbanks, of Terre Haute, Ind.; W. J. Alford, of Anderson, Ind.; Governor W. T. Durbin, and one or two men in Lima, O., and New York.

The directors of the company had a meeting in New York last Saturday, attended by Mr. Alford and others, and it was decided to build the next plant of the company in London. Mr. Williams, who superintended the building of the plant at Chicago and also at Piermont, N.Y., is to go to London early in the Spring and proceed to establish a plant equal in size to any in the United States.

Before he leaves for London Mr. Williams will have mapped out the plans for another mill, to be located at Boston. Indiana capital now practically controls the coated paper business.—Geyer's Stationer, March 13.

Notices of Books

From Mr. George Allen.—'The Literary Year-Book and Bookman's Directory, 1902,' edited by Herbert Morrah. The sixth issue of this undoubtedly useful annual shows a distinct improvement on its predecessors, more especially in the Directory of Authors, which is mainly compiled from their own returns, and contains many foreign names. Among the other contents we may mention an obituary, in which, however, we note the creator of 'Jack Harkaway,' who retained his youth and popularity from 1867, when Mr. B. Hemyng created him, until last year; and a list of the present occupants of thirty-nine of the forty fauteuils of the Académie Française. A note tells the reader that the list is given not only for reference, but also as a reminder that 'all attempts to establish an institution of like authority in this country have entirely failed.' The date of the foundation is given as 1630, whereas the excellent 'Almanach Hachette' says that 'la plus célèbre des cinq académies de l'Institut de France fut fondée en 1635.' But while we may be disposed to envy France her Academy, we cannot forget that the authority of that institution was sometimes abused. There has even been talk of a forty-first armchair which ought to have been occupied from time to time by at least twenty celebrities, who are conspicuous by their absence from the Immortals. One of the sections of the Editor's interesting prefatory article called 'The Year's Work, 1901,' is devoted to the Royal Society of Literature, founded in the reign of George IV., which, having never flourished, is now in a moribund condition. Its existence had long been doubted by some persons, until its claims were put forward in connection with the meeting of the International Society of Academies in Paris last year. Even such a learned authority as Professor Skeat said he had never heard of it. We thought it had found immortality in the late Lord Macaulay's slashing essay on the 'Royal Society of Literature' contributed to Knight's Quarterly Magazine, June 1823. He calls it 'the most absurd institution in this age of societies. . . . At the first establishment of that ridiculous academy, every sensible man predicted that, in spite of regal patronage and episcopal management, it would do nothing or do harm. And it will scarcely be denied that those expectations have hitherto been fulfilled.' And he gives his reasons for this adverse conclusion. He disclaims attacking founders or motives; but asserts that such a society can only be innocent while powerless. Should it obtain power to encourage merit, it will also have power to repress it. 'Which power will be more frequently exercised let everyone who has studied literary history, and let everyone who has studied human nature, declare.' And he goes on to instance that very Académie Française which some English writers hold up for our admiration. Would our literary men like to beg for votes with the chance of having the door of the Academy slammed in their faces?

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—'Hans Holbein,' by Arthur B. Chamberlain; 'Sir Joshua Reynolds, P.R.A.,' by Rowley Cleeve; 'Frederic, Lord Leighton,' by George C. Williamson, Litt.D. Further progress in the 'Miniature Series of Painters' in no way lessens our admiration for the excellent manner in which these little volumes are produced. Each writer has evidently striven to give as accurate an impression of his subject as is possible within such limited space, and in the matter of illustrations—eight being included in each volume—he has been well aided by the publishers. Probably it would be difficult to pick out three more attractive personalities, so far as the series has at present gone, than those treated of in the present volumes. The method followed in each book has practically been the same—to supply in the first place some brief accounts of the painter's life, then to speak of his art, and finally to describe some of his more important works. The result in every instance is highly satisfactory.

From Messrs. William Blackwood & Sons.—'Milton: Samson Agonistes,' edited by E. H. Blakeney, M.A. ('Blackwood's English Classics'). An excellent edition of Milton's drama, upon which the editor has manifestly bestowed much time and painstaking labour. The text is substantially Masson's, collated with Mr. Beeching's recent 'Oxford' Milton,

Mr. Blakeney being alone responsible for the punctuation. The volume consists of a brief Introduction, describing the leading events in Milton's life and the character of his works, the text of the tragedy, and some seventy pages of notes, in which every doubtful or obscure passage is explained and other information afforded. The volume is also remarkable for its capital printing, and as an edition of the poem for educational purposes could scarcely be improved upon.

From the Robert Clarke Company, Cincinnati, U.S.A.—'Ye Gods and Little Fishes, a Travesty on the Argonautic Expedition in Quest of the Golden Fleece,' by James A. Henshall, M.D. It is possible that classical scholars at the outset may be a little inclined to resent this free and easy treatment of a revered theme, but they are likely to be won over to pure laughter before they have progressed far in the book. The author has a very happy gift of composing mock-heroic rhyme, and his almost sacrilegious burlesque of the subject compels amusement. The character of his work, with its sprightly measure and jaunty irresponsibility, may be shown from the following quotation:

'Now Jason, flushed with wine and flattery, too,
Was eager for the quest. Right well he knew
The object of the story was to pull O'er his own eyes, forsooth, this golden wool;
In hopes that going for wool he'd come home shorn
He knew to be the wish, of Pelias, born.'

Jason's subsequent experiences, more especially in the field of sport, are made the subject of much telling satire, and viewed in the light of modern experience, they appear ridiculous enough. Throughout the book Dr. Henshall has been ably aided in his fanciful conception by the illustrations of Mr. J. L. Ludlow, who has supplied many charming initial letters and other designs.

From Mr. W. B. Clive (University Tutorial Press, Limited).—'Plato: Euthyphro and Menexenus,' edited by T. R. Mills, M.A. These dialogues are not, perhaps, among the best known of Plato's works, but in brilliancy of execution the first-named at least will rival any of his writings. The 'Menexenus' rests on a much lower plane; indeed many authorities have been disposed to question its genuineness and to regard it as the work of an imitator. Internal evidence, however, is in favour of an opposite opinion, many of the passages being unmistakably Platonic. The present edition of the dialogues has been very carefully edited, and is amply equipped with notes and other helpful information. An interesting Introduction affords some information touching Plato's life, the nature of his writings, the early philosophers and the sophists, the teaching of Socrates, the argument of the dialogues, and so forth. As in all the publications of the University Tutorial Press, strict regard is shown for brevity and conciseness, and the mind of the pupil is not overburdened with unnecessary detail.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—'The Passing of the Scyld,' by E. E. Kellett. 'The Passing of the Scyld' is the first of fourteen lyrics comprised in this attractive volume, the author of which has sought to image in English verse the heroic deeds and sublime thoughts of the Vikings as chronicled in the Icelandic Sagas. He has conspicuously succeeded in this endeavour, the results of which merit unqualified praise. We would gladly give some specimen of his work; but the peculiar character of these poems precludes detached extracts, and our limited space forbids us from quoting the whole of any one of them.

From Messrs. Greening & Co., Ltd.—'Pipes and Tobacco,' by J. W. Cundall. In this handy and informing volume the author has brought together a store of interesting matter relative to tobacco, its culture, uses, and social influences. He is not simply an enthusiast in the praise of tobacco, which, he tells us, 'is the enemy of malice, the friend of virtue, and a direct cause for content'; but he is thoroughly well grounded in his subject, and we soon perceive that his range of reading embraces a very wide circle of authors of all ages and nations. Mr. Cundall makes out a good case for tobacco-smoking, and brings forward the evidence in its favour of eminent men widely differing in talents and position. From the perusal of this book—and it amply repays perusal—the smoker will find that, even if he errs in smoking, it is in such good company as that of Dickens, Thackeray, Tennyson, Thomas Carlyle, Milton, the first Lord Lytton, Izaak Walton, Charles Lamb, O. H. Spurgeon, Justice Haliburton (Sam Slick), and Mr. Joseph Chamberlain.

From the same.—'Fatalism, True and False,' by W. Henry-Miller. This book is preceded by a Preface, in which the writer states that it does not claim to be exhaustive of the subject, and by a Note wherein we are told that this introductory essay to the study of fatalism is an abstract from notes collected during some years by the author, who hopes in a future work to enforce the argument by a long catalogue of facts to explain points at which he has only hinted to answer objections. It is manifestly impossible in a brief notice to discuss a subject of such magnitude as that dealt with in this volume.

From 'Home Words' Publishing Office.—'The Queen's Resolve, and her "Doubly Royal" Reign. With England's Welcome to Our King,' by Charles Bullock, B.D. With portraits and illustrations. 280th thousand. We are glad to see that this book has achieved so great and well-merited a success, because it testifies to the loyalty of the purchasers as well as to the good feeling and good taste of the author. The writer of it has lived long enough to 'remember' (as he tells us in his Preface) 'the boundless enthusiasm which welcomed to the nation's heart "our Bonnie Young Queen," and in this handsome and beautifully illustrated volume he chronicles in simple and sympathetic language all that is most interesting in the domestic life of our late good and great Queen. He does not forget to tell us much about their Majesties King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, as well as the Prince and Princess of Wales and their royal children. Such a book as this new issue of 'The Queen's Resolve' is most admirably suited for a gift on the occasion of the King's coronation; and we see that the Mayor of Windsor recently presented one thousand copies to the schools of the royal borough. The author, the Rev. Charles

Bullock, is preparing a similar volume on the forthcoming coronation of King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, to be entitled 'Crowned to Serve.'

From the Ideal Publishing Union, Ltd.—'Esther Alington; or, A New Investment,' by Rose Harrison. In her Preface the author states that the design of this story is 'to bring out the ignorance of God-fearing, benevolent people in regard to the evils resulting from the liquor traffic, and to point out how a large amount of capital can be invested harmlessly and with no material loss.' With this meritorious object in view Miss Harrison has written an interesting story. Esther Alington is the younger daughter of Mr. Alington, a wealthy brewer, of Oakley Hall, near Brewster, in Leamshire. Her brother Victor is an undergraduate at Oxford, who has been led to think seriously of the temperance question by an address delivered at Oxford by the Archbishop of Canterbury. Returning home for the vacation, instead of finding his father's groom, Tim Smart, with the dogcart waiting for him at the station, he discovers the dogcart outside the ancient hostelry, Tumble Down Dick's, and the groom lying dead drunk beside it. Mr. Alington dismisses Tim next day, in spite of his son Victor's pleadings for another chance. Then other cases of delinquency of a worse character are chronicled. There are perhaps too many of them. We are not prepared to deny that many worse cases than are chronicled in this story have resulted from drink. Drunkenness is a fearful curse. We therefore wish all success to this interesting story. May it have the result aimed at by its author.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—'The Century Bible: Hebrews,' edited by A. S. Peake, M.A.; 'Corinthians,' edited by J. Massie, M.A. These further volumes in the series so ably superintended by Prof. W. F. Adeney are distinguished by the many attractive features noticeable in previous issues of the 'Century Bible.' Each contains a clear scholarly Introduction embodying the results of the latest Biblical research, the Authorised Version, Revised Version, with notes, index, and map. Of the printing of these volumes it is impossible to speak too highly, and their all-round production calls for the warmest praise.

From Kunstverlag B. Koci, Prag.—'Reflexionen aus dem Katechismus. Fünfzig Blatt Federzeichnungen,' by Von Emil Holarek. Volksausgabe. There is no question of dogmatic teaching, or of improving on the plain rules of life taught by our Lord, in this book of reflections on the Catechism, with its fifty admirable designs by Emil Holarek, than which nothing more striking has appeared since the publication of Holbein's Dance of Death. Holarek occupies a prominent place among modern Bohemian artists, and has signalised himself by his serious views of life, and by the irony with which he contrasts Christianity as taught by Christ with its practice by professing Christians. To this earnest enthusiastic artist present-day Christianity appears as an empty bottle which only bears the label of what it once contained. This conception of a masked heathenism Holarek depicts on the illustrated wrapper by the drawing of a hard-hearted man who is taking off a mask representing the face and features of the Man of Sorrows. The illustrations are divided into five different classes: the cardinal sins, the cardinal virtues, the works of corporal and spiritual mercy, strange sins, and sins against the Holy Ghost. From an artistic point of view these drawings are as admirable as the variety of scenes depicted is remarkable. The edition before us is a popular one, but an édition de luxe with heliogravure reproductions of the artist's drawings is also published.

From Mr. John Lane.—'The Book of the Apple,' by H. H. Thomas. The need of such a book as this is self-evident when we know that the climate of Great Britain is exceptionally well suited to the culture of the apple; that there are few places in Britain where the apple will not thrive satisfactorily; and that, nevertheless, good quality British apples are not conspicuous on the market, partly, it is feared, for lack of knowledge and method. The writer, who is the son of Mr. Owen Thomas, late head gardener of the Royal Gardens at Windsor, is exceptionally well qualified for the task he has so successfully accomplished; for he has worked with Messrs. Veitch, of Chelsea, for Baron Alphonse de Rothschild in his hardy fruit garden at Ferrières-en-Brie, has spent two years at Kew Gardens, and five in the Royal Gardens, Windsor. The subjects treated are: Forms of trees, planting, pruning, situation, soil, summer treatment, gathering and storing fruit, root pruning, insect pests, dessert varieties, cooking varieties, selections of dessert and kitchen apples, some recent valuable apples, propagation, cooking of apples, cider-making. The last two chapters are written by Mr. Harry Roberts, the editor of the series 'Handbooks of Practical Gardening,' of which this forms the sixth volume. The beautiful photographs illustrating the book were taken in the garden and orchard of Mr. John Vivian, of Meadowside, Hayle, Cornwall. This work must prove of great value to cultivators of the apple, which Mr. Thomas styles 'the fruit of Great Britain par excellence.'

From Mr. John Long.—'As Cæsar's Wife,' by Mrs. Aylmer Gowing. Men of an honest and unconceited nature are often very blind to the feelings entertained for them by members of the opposite sex, but surely so obtuse a person as Frank Ormerod, the rising young barrister of Mrs. Gowing's novel, never existed outside the pages of fiction. While enjoying a ramble through the Bavarian Tyrol he makes the acquaintance of a beautiful widow, the Baroness von Löwenthal. It is easy from the first to see that the Baroness is much taken with him, and this, on further acquaintance, deepens into a warmer feeling. Frank on his part, however, is totally unconscious of the sentiments he is inspiring; indeed, all his thoughts are directed in an opposite direction—to Thora Adeane, the daughter of an English baronet. Even when he is engaged to this lady he takes the Baroness about to theatres, dinners, &c., in London, excusing himself on the ground that he is much indebted for the services she has rendered him as a witness in an important divorce case. But of his engagement he never says a word. He even takes the unfortunate Baroness to look at the house he has taken in the Knightsbridge Road (which she thinks is for herself), and asks her to help him in the selection of furniture. Then the blow falls, and for the time being the Baroness becomes an infuriated woman, and shows signs of imparting welcome excitement to the narrative. But she subsides again, and on the strong appeal of the young husband actually goes to nurse his wife during her illness. It is quite towards the end of the book that she concocts a plot for separating the husband and wife. What comes of it we shall not discount the reader's interest by revealing. The story is pleasantly and agreeably told, but is terribly overweighted with talk.

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—'The Old Royal Palace of Whitehall,' by Edgar Sheppard, D.D. It seems strange, considering the important historical associations attaching to the building, its great antiquity, and the many notable events of which it was the scene, that no previous complete history has been written of the old Palace of Whitehall, but such apparently is the fact. All the more should we be grateful to Mr. Sheppard for remedying the deficiency. That the work has been written from a thorough appreciation of the subject is manifest on almost every page. Commencing with a brief allusion to the origin of the name Whitehall, the author next directs attention to the old Palace of Whitehall, the Banqueting House, the Chapel Royal, the Cock Pit, the Tilt Yard, the Gateways of Whitehall Palace, the Privy and Spring Gardens, the Horse Guards, the Treasury, The Royal United Service Institute, and Scotland Yard. Two of the most interesting chapters in the volume are devoted to an account of the celebrated houses within the precincts of the Palace. Included among these are Richmond House, Montagu House, Portland House, Holderness House, Fife House, Dover House, Stanhope House, Rochester House, and Wallingford House, each being associated, it is hardly necessary to say, with many distinguished personages. Succeeding chapters deal with Cardinal Wolsey, the execution of Charles I. and the site on which the execution took place, Oliver Cromwell's connection with Whitehall, the Royal Residents in the Palace, the Marriages that have taken place there, Deaths, Ceremonies, and Creations; the Royal Maundy, Pictures and Art treasures, the Royal Libraries, &c. The volume is plentifully supplied with illustrations, including photogravure portraits of Charles I., Cardinal Wolsey, Oliver Cromwell, Charles II., and Princess Elizabeth, daughter of Charles I. It is a record of great interest, and both in the matter of its compilation and the way in which it has been produced calls for warm praise. We should not omit to mention that there is a plan of Whitehall in 1680, and that a full index is appended to the volume.

From Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Company, Ltd.—'Sketches of Some Booksellers of the Time of Doctor Samuel Johnson,' by E. Marston. Not alone members of the trade, but all lovers of books will derive genuine pleasure from this little volume. The author possesses the happy gift of being able to serve up old material in a fashion that is both novel and interesting. Much, no doubt, proceeds from a certain tenderness of handling; a true sympathy with his subjects the result of so many years devoted to the business of book production. Throughout these sketches there is woven the attractive personality of the redoubtable Dr. Johnson. Michael Johnson, the first of the booksellers treated of, was the great lexicographer's father. Andrew Millar, the next, was largely concerned in combination with Mr. Robert Dodsley, Mr. Charles Hitch, the two Messrs. Longmans, and the two Messrs. Knapp in the publication of the celebrated Dictionary; Thomas Davies—the 'gentleman,' as he may be termed, of the bookselling world of that day—was the intimate friend of the Doctor, and had been the means of introducing the trembling Boswell to his notice; while Thomas Osborne is principally known to posterity as the 'son of dullness, ignorance, and obscurity' whom the great man knocked down with a weighty folio and practically stamped upon. All the other booksellers mentioned in this volume were more or less connected with the being whom Carlyle styled 'the greatest soul in England of his time.' Mr. Marston recalls many little anecdotes concerning Dr. Johnson—mostly from Boswell's life—that in the present connection acquire fresh interest. There was much delay in the preparation of the Dictionary, and when the messenger carried the last sheet to Millar, Johnson not unnaturally inquired on his return, 'Well, what did he say?' 'Sir,' returned the messenger, 'he said "Thank God I have done with him."' 'I'm glad,' replied Johnson, 'that he thanks God for anything.' Afterwards he said (referring to Millar) that 'a bookseller who got a large fortune by trade was so habitually and equably drunk that his more intimate friends never perceived that he was more sober at one time than another.' We wonder whether at this time he was thinking of Millar's previous remark. Mr. Marston devotes one of his concluding chapters to John Nichols, the printer and antiquarian, and included in his volume are seven portraits, together with a picture of the house in which Dr. Johnson was born, and a facsimile of the original receipt for compiling the 'Annual Register' for 1768.

From Messrs. Marshall Brothers.—'Me First,' by Florence A. Markham. A brightly written story of self-denial in the cause of Missions on the part of certain young people of both sexes. Their characters are skilfully portrayed, and their conduct will be duly appreciated by many readers; while others, who are lovers of the so-called lower animals, may regret that Lucy should have been called upon to sacrifice the poor little fox-terrier puppy to the needs of the 'do-without box.' Such a sacrifice savours rather of Mrs. Jellyby and the Brotherhood of Humanity. The angel did not turn his back upon Tobias because that young man's dog went with him on his journey into Media; for he knew that all created beings had the same Maker, Who 'made and loveth all.'

From Mr. John Murray.—'The Constitution of the Commonwealth of Australia,' By W. Harrison Moore, of King's College, Cambridge, and of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, Dean of the Faculty in the University of Melbourne. The federation of Australia is a measure so recently consummated, and one fraught with such vast and important consequences, both immediate and prospective, that the work before us, to which Dean Moore has devoted much conscientious labour with such excellent results, should have a remarkable success. It is impossible here even to enumerate the contents of this volume, wherein will be found clearly yet concisely dealt with everything relating to the Federal Commonwealth, and which merits attentive perusal. It has always seemed to us that one very real danger to the British Empire in the past lay in the lack of interest resulting from want of knowledge shown by so many Englishmen in the welfare of our colonial possessions. Such ignorance and apathy in the case of the average man may perhaps be forgiven when one is told of the astounding blunders that have at times been made by officials with regard to some of our colonies. But in these days of keen competition between States as well as individuals it is high time to awake out of our sleep of ignorance and apathy, and to strive to learn all we can about that Greater Britain whose resources are so great and whose people so loyal, as the strenuous support rendered to the mother country by colonial troops in our South African troubles has so convincingly demonstrated. Although dealing mainly with questions of constitutional government, much information respecting our colonial brethren, their dangers and difficulties, may be gained from this book, and especially from its second chapter, in which will be found matter to make us think that other peoples are more fully aware of the value of colonies than many inhabitants of the British Isles.

From the same.—'In Tuscany: Tuscan Towns, Tuscan Types, and the Tuscan Tongue,' by Montgomery-Carmichael. Mr. Montgomery-Carmichael has made excellent use of a long and evidently pleasant sojourn in Tuscany by making himself thoroughly acquainted with the Tuscans, their tongue, temperament, and manners, and by visiting some of the less frequented and little known but fascinating spots in that delightful province of Italy. In the beautifully illustrated volume before us we have the accumulated results of the author's experience told in the most frank and engaging manner. The volume begins with a very ingenious examination of the Tuscan temperament, which well deserved such an appreciative study. This is followed by eight types of Tuscan character, which bear comparison with some passages in 'Washington Irving's Sketch Book,' also published by the house of Murray some seventy-five years ago. All are good and contain humorous passages, but three are touchingly pathetic. These are Fra Pacifico, the Franciscan lay brother, who dies before the author returns his visit; My Unpaid Factotum, 'Ciali' White, the passionate admirer of everything British, who sacrifices his own life to rescue two of Great Britain's offscourings from the consequences of their misdeeds; and the Very Reverend Canon Domenico Pucci, D.D., a story of rare charity and self-denial. An interesting article on the Tuscan Tongue and on the diversity of Italian dialects follows. The remaining contents comprise accounts of Leghorn, including notes on Shelley and Smollett; Lucca and the Lucchesi; Pisa and the Knights of St. Stephen; Volterra, its antiquity and the alabaster industry; Portoferraio and Elba, with interesting particulars of Napoleon I. and III.; Mount la Verna and St. Francis; Camaldoli and its monastery; Montecatini, the Tuscan Tunbridge Wells, and its cure; The Spanish Præsidia, St. Paul of the Cross, his love for England and foundation of the Passionist Order.

From M. Schleicher Freres, Paris.—'L'Evolution de la Vie,' par le Dr. Laloy, Sous-Bibliothécaire de la Faculté de Médecine de Bordeaux, avec 30 figures dans le texte. In his Preface our author states that, while undeniable progress has been made during the last century in the knowledge of nature, of the universe, and of its inhabitants, and on man's place and the part he has to play in the world, this knowledge has, after all, made very little impression on the general public. He considers education is still far too scholastic and literary, and that literature and art preoccupy the attention of most cultivated persons who devote their talents to history and criticism instead of studying the problems which Nature displays before us at every step. For these they testify the most perfect indifference. Even most men of science take up some special subject of study, and, shutting themselves up in their speciality, close their eyes to all else. The object of this book, on the contrary, is to co-ordinate innumerable observations of particular subjects, and to draw from them general laws which alone are interesting. Persons having only a general knowledge may by this book become acquainted with the latest progress in biological science, and obtain a theory of life and its evolution as expressed in the state of knowledge at the end of the nineteenth century. This book also shows that the doctrine of evolution does not conduct to materialism, but to the conclusion of a great first cause. It is lucidly written, is full of intense interest, and the illustrations are excellent. 'A student of French might by reading this book increase his knowledge of nature as well as of the French language.'

From Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell.—'Christless Christendom,' by Ernest J. Goodman. This tenth volume of the 'Popular Stories' series tells how Cardinal Moreau, who is much given to soliloquising in the wood belonging to St. Joseph's Monastery, where he stays as the guest of Hulso, the Superior, has his soliloquy and his life cut short because of his liberal views in Church matters by the hand of an assassin, seemingly instigated by Hulso. In the author's words, 'A dagger with a dastardly heart and hand did the devil's work.' We are also told that Mr. Hollins, a Glasgow merchant, who conducts his business on Christian principles, wishes his daughter, Constance, to marry Arthur Mills (the priggish 26-year-old son of Sir John and Lady Mills, who calls his parents Pa and Ma), and is so incensed with his clerk, Henry Villiers, for becoming a Salvation Army captain and aspiring to the hand of Constance (who rejects Arthur), that he attempts to poison 'Captain' Villiers. Afterwards, when Arthur is dead, Mr. Hollins begs pardon of Constance and Henry for the attempted crime and sanctions their union. His other daughter, Grace, has fallen in love with a Mr. Macdonald, who had been particular in his attentions when the Hollinses were staying at Naples. One day, after their return home, Mr. Macdonald pays them an unexpected visit; but, on Cardinal Moreau's name being mentioned, falls down in a fit. Being questioned as to the Cardinal's death, he admits that he is Hulso and had sanctioned the assassination: but, after being converted by Moreau from Ultramontanism to Protestantism, had, when too late, tried to prevent the Cardinal's death. He asks pardon for his crime and 'for giving them all such a shock'; and he, too, is forgiven, marries Grace, and becomes a lecturer in defence of Protestant principles. What good purpose this tale is likely to serve we are at a loss to conjecture. It is poorly told, and the plot is only paralleled by Mr. Wagg's funny interpolated passage in 'Desperation, or the Fugitive Duchess'—as recorded in 'Pendennis'—where the Cardinal in disguise, after being converted by the Bishop of London, proposes marriage to the Duchess's daughter.'

From Messrs. Treherne & Co., Limited.—'A Muddled Oaf,' by Frank Rutter and Ladbroke Black. A rough, vigorous story, likely to be popular with those who like their fiction strongly coloured. The scene is first laid in Cambridge and particularly concerns Rugby football, but is subsequently changed to South Africa. Love, villainy, war, and sport are so dexterously intermingled as to thoroughly hold the interest of the reader, who will be heartily pleased at the conclusion to find that virtue is triumphant and vice ignominiously defeated. Each chapter is headed with a quotation from one of Rudyard Kipling's works.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co.—'The Curse of the Snake,' by Guy Boothby. If one may judge from Mr. Boothby's novel, the familiar society of a snake is of all things the least desirable. Moments of madness ensue, and the eyes acquire a cold, diabolical look. This, we suppose, only happens to the man who carries his friend about with him in a leather trunk. Such a man was Richard Jefferies, who looked in unexpectedly on his old school chum, George Wellmore, at his plantation in Queensland, and proceeded to take up his abode with him. Richard had always been a bad boy, both at school and college, and association with his friend the snake had not improved his morals. If he had only kept the lid of that trunk closed and not allowed the loathsome reptile to execute stately dances in the privacy of his bedroom, it would have been much better. Wellmore was engaged to a very beautiful girl in the neighbourhood, and very soon Richard, with his designing, artful, snake-like ways, began to make mischief. In this he was aided by a young woman who had been enamoured of Wellmore and was, naturally, not very well pleased to see him carried off by a rival. Then, one day, the poor hero became a victim to snake mania himself. But how this came about is too long a story to tell. Sensation-lovers may be assured that Mr. Boothby will show them very practically what snake attraction is, for if they once start reading his book they will be powerless to leave off until he releases them.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, VALUER AND ACCOUNTANT

To Publishers, Booksellers, Stationers, Printers, &c.,

34 (late 1a) PATERNOSTER ROW,

is instructed to sell the following Businesses:—

PRINTING.—Old-established first-class City business. Fine commodious premises, comprising three floors and basement. Rent £150. Long lease. Returns average about £5,000 a-year, and are capable of increase. All at £2,000, or valuation of plant, stock, and fixtures. Proprietor retiring. A safe business.

PRINTING, STATIONERY, &c.—Leading town West of England. Central premises. Rent only £60. A good old-established business; proprietor retiring. The turnover exceeds £2,000 a-year, chiefly jobbing printing at excellent profits. All at a trade valuation, about £1,000. Very good.

PRINTING, STATIONERY, &c.—Flourishing market town in Gloucestershire. High-class business. Established 1852. Fine premises; double-fronted shop and nine rooms. Rent only £45. Offered at a valuation of stock and fixtures. About £400. Illness cause of sale. Worthy of prompt attention.

FINE ART AND PRINTSELLING.—Prosperous county town West of England. Excellent premises. Rent £65. A very superior gallery. Present returns about £2,500. More could be done. About £1,500 required. An arrangement could be made for a partnership. Very profitable connection.

STATIONERY, &c. (wholesale).—A desirable London business. Excellent premises. Rent £55. Long lease. Returns exceed £4,000 a year. A partnership could be arranged with the present proprietor, as capital is required to develop the large capabilities of the business. A fine chance for a gentleman having about £2,000.

PRINTING.—Large and important City business. Grand premises. Rent £240. Returns £10,000 to £12,000 a year. Net profit quite £1,000 a year. Fine modern plant, would value about £5,000. A specially good opening. Highly recommended.

STATIONERY, FANCY GOODS, &c.—South London main thoroughfare. Corner shop. Six rooms and side entrance. Rent £50. Returns last year, £1,050. Good profits. Established forty years. About £500 required for all. A very safe ready-money business. An early sale desired.

FINE ART AND PICTURE FRAMING.—West End main road. Well-known business. Shop, six rooms, and garden. Rent £70. Takings to £800 a year, and are made at very respectable profits. £375 for everything. Very cheap.

STATIONERY, FANCY, &c. (No News).—Fashionable South London locality. Shop and seven rooms. Rent £75. Good repair. Returns £10 a-week. The whole offered very cheaply for £220. Would suit a lady. A rare opening.

STATIONERY, TOYS, AND FANCY GOODS.—Salubrious West-End Suburb. Double-fronted shop, nine rooms and offices. Rent £80 a-year; long lease (£20 sub-let for two rooms). Returns £800; Registry Office £60 net. Electric lighted; handsome fixtures and large saleable stock. £700 required. Highly recommended.

STATIONERY, PRINTING, &c.—Sussex Coast Town. Old-established high-class business of a very profitable character. Rent only £60. 21 years' lease. Returns nearly £2,000 a-year. Excellent plant and stock. About £1,600 required. A most favourable opening. Proprietor retiring on competency made in the business.

FANCY BAZAAR, &c.—Important Commercial Town. Best position. Fine attractive premises. Rent £110. Part sub-let for £78. Takings quite £1,000 a year. More could be done by attention. A large miscellaneous stock. Cash trade. Offered cheaply at £500. A great bargain.

INDIA AND IMPERIAL FEDERATION

By DAVID McLAREN MORRISON.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Sewed, pp. 218, price One Shilling.

'Interesting as giving expression to the loyal feeling and the devotion to the principle of Imperial Federation which animate both Indians and Anglo-Indians anxious as to the future of the East.'—SCOTSMAN.

'That India must of necessity be of foremost consideration when the question of Imperial Federation is brought within the sphere of practical politics is apparent, and herein lies the justification for this little collection of views on the subject.'—DUNDEE ADVERTISER.

'To those who wish to mature their ideas we can cordially recommend a perusal of this little book, which has been written in the fulness both of knowledge and of the imperial spirit.'—PERTSHIRE CONSTITUTIONAL AND JOURNAL.

'Will interest all those who believe in the unity of the British Empire.'—REGIMENT.

MISCELLANIES

By AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, K.C., Honorary Fellow of Trinity Hall, Cambridge.

'Mr. Birrell is an original writer. It is his peculiar gift to say in a brilliant way what the literary common sense approves on reflection.'—WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.

'Mr. Birrell is the soundest possible guide in the art of reading. He is no less delightful as a pure critic.'—SPEAKER.

'Mr. Birrell's charm lies in his splendid sanity, his geniality, his sense of humour, his love of common humanity, his fine scorn of cant, his genuine delight in good books, and his knack of polishing off literary essays which combine daintiness of style with virility of mind.'—LITERARY WORLD.

'Eminently agreeable and readable.'—GLOBE.

'Each paper is the expression of a thoughtful, cheerful, humorous, and stimulating mind.'—SCOTSMAN.

LIBRARY EDITION OF AUGUSTINE BIRRELL'S WORKS.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY. In 2 Vols. crown 8vo. tastefully printed and bound in cloth, 12s.

VOLUME II. contains—MEN, WOMEN, AND BOOKS. RES JUDICATÆ.

The two volumes are tastefully printed in large type to supply the need of a Library Edition.

'Mr. Augustine Birrell is always good company. Unlike some living writers who might be named, he is always himself, and the self is so sane, so shrewd, so vivacious, that this fidelity to it suffices to make his books delightful.'—DAILY CHRONICLE.

'Mr. Birrell's light and easy style well befits his generally kind judgments.'—TIMES.

London: ELLIOT STOCK, 62 Paternoster Row, E.C.

'In the present "Sketches," which Mr. Edward Marston has recently reprinted from the Publishers' Circular, many of the ancient stories are revived by a writer who, as the doyen of the London publishers, has certainly a claim to be heard.'

'A highly attractive little volume for lovers of literature. . . . Mr. Marston's book, which has a capital and uncommon portrait of Dr. Johnson, is not only pleasant to read now, but will be good to keep and useful for reference on many future occasions.'

'Readers who have made the acquaintance of Mr. Marston's "Sketches of Booksellers of Other Days" will have a kindly feeling towards this little volume, which treats in the same discursive and agreeable way of the Booksellers of the Johnsonian era. . . . Those who desire further acquaintance with this worthy (Robert Dodsley) will find it well worth their while to turn to Mr. Marston's delightful little book.'

'Mr. Marston tells the life-stories of all in very simple and pleasing fashion, and to bookmen his little volume will be unfailingly attractive.'

'So long as the writer has dressed up his stories or biography brightly and tastefully, he can always rely upon an indulgent reception, and those of our readers who perused Mr. Marston's "Sketches of Booksellers of Other Days" will not need to be told that Mr. Marston has quite fulfilled these requirements in the present volume. . . . Mr. Marston hopes that he "has not wholly failed in presenting these sketches in a readable form." For ourselves we do not think that Mr. Marston could possibly have found a more readable form of presenting them.'

'Twelve pleasant little papers.'

'This is a most readable volume.'

'Sometimes a second volume, or a sequel, seems to increase the value of its leader. This is the case with the little book with which Mr. Marston has followed his "Sketches of Booksellers of Other Days." . . . Together the two volumes are a fairly copious answer to Mr. Austin Dobson's question, "Where are the bookshops of old time?" They are nowhere more pleasantly recoverable than in Mr. Marston's pages.'

'We congratulate Mr. Marston upon this happy result of his renewed labours. . . and we recommend his neatly-contrived, well-illustrated, pleasant little volume.'

'The geniality which marks the pretty dedication written on his seventy-eighth birthday, to his "dear granddaughter," runs through the book and makes it pleasant reading.'

'Not alone members of the trade, but all lovers of books will derive genuine pleasure from this little volume.'

'Should be read with interest by all classes of bookish readers.'

'In this delightful little volume, the veteran bookseller . . . continues the series of biographical sketches given to the public last year with the title "Sketches of Booksellers of Other Days."'

'There is a pleasant touch of sentiment in all Mr. Edward Marston's work. He belongs to that past day when a publisher took the deepest personal interest in his authors.'

'In thus selecting names famous in the bookselling world the author of these interesting sketches was well advised. . . . The work throughout will prove of much interest to students of the Johnsonian era.'

'To all lovers of Dr. Johnson the book will come as a welcome guest. For them it will possess an irresistible charm, and it should not lack for readers amongst all who have a regard for "the good old days" and "the gentlemen who dealt in books" in the time of Dr. Johnson. . . . Mr. Marston has placed all admirers of Dr. Johnson and all lovers of books under the deepest obligation to him for this dainty little volume.'

The Publishers' Circular

THE DATING OF BOOK TITLE-PAGES.

This is a question of great importance, and it is one on which publishers and authors are by no means of one mind. An outsider may think there can be no difficulty about such a simple matter, but there is a great deal more in it than appears on the surface, or we may be quite sure many publishers would not still tenaciously stick to the old 'custom of the trade,' and this in spite of the fact that the council of the Publishers' Association have more than once made a strong recommendation to the members on the point.

It is manifestly against the interests of the author as well as the publisher of a book if it becomes in any degree old or out of date before its time, and it is to avoid this that from the earliest times of book-publishing it has been customary to post-date the title-page of a work published during the last month or so of the year. A book published last December, and bearing the date 1901, already looks a year old in January 1902, as of course it might have been published in January 1901.

Now a bookseller does not want last year's stock on his shelves, because he cannot sell it so well as if it is of the current year, and as long as this unquestionable drawback to the strict dating exists the difficulty will be avoided by post-dating.

Arrangements in connection with American publication of editions of books often also complicate matters.

In order to contribute our mite to the solution of the difficulty, we suggest that those publishers who refuse to—as they very fairly consider it—unnecessarily damage the prospects of their books, should omit the date of the year of publication altogether on the title-page itself, but put both the month and year on the back of the title-page. This would get over the drawback that a book dated 1901 may be one month old or twelve months old.

We believe Messrs. Macmillan not only give the date on the title-page, but also the full date and number of the edition or impression on the back of the title-page of all their books, and there can be no question as to this being the most correct way. But what is correct is not always expedient, and anyone can understand in a moment the force of the publisher's objection to publishing the details of his actual sales. 'Why,' he says, 'should I tell all the world and the literary agent how many copies I have sold, when I know that the information will be used to induce another publisher to seduce my author away?' Quite possibly it is an author who has been discovered by his first publisher and well advertised.

In the case of technical books and guide-books, every edition should bear the date somewhere, so that the purchaser may know if he can rely on the work being up to date.

It had not been brought to our notice until we received the letter of which we give a copy below, that this question of dating title-pages concerns the interests of lending libraries and their subscribers. The letter will speak for itself:—

SIR,—Would it be possible for publishers to date their publications accurately at the real time of publication? There seems a very general practice of dating books published in the latter part of the year by the succeeding year. So many lending libraries now make a difference with regard to books published within a year, either excluding them from the cheaper ranks of subscribers, or limiting the time they may be kept. In consequence of the practice of publishers putting 1902 on books published in the latter part of 1901, they are not available for ordinary library subscribers until after 1903 is ended. As a subscriber to three libraries in which there is this rule, it may be worth taking my complaint into consideration.

Yours,

LIBRARY SUBSCRIBER.

WAS IT A SCOTTISH JOKE?

At the recent dinner of the Edinburgh Booksellers' Assistants the Chairman, Sir John Clark, Bart., said that for the life of him he could not see why a man who sold books should be called a bookseller; whereas a man who sold fowls or meat was not called a fowlseller or a meatseller. This is true; but if we sold meat we would much prefer to be called a 'meat-seller' than by the, to an English ear, rather creepy and blood-curdling name of 'flesher' so common in Scotland.

We agree entirely with Sir John that 'bookselling is one of the most honourable professions in existence'—though 'calling' might be a better word from the professional man's point of view; but we are sure that he was indulging in a little after-dinner fun when he suggested that the booksellers should call their shops 'LITERARY EMPORIUMS.'

Sir John made another suggestion which will be heard of with mingled feelings, according to the nationality and 'profession' of the hearer. He said that to his mind Edinburgh was an excellent publishing centre, and he hoped to hear of no more Scottish publishers making their headquarters in London. We can assure Sir John of one thing, it has been a verri gude thing for the London printers.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

His Majesty the King has been pleased to accept a copy of 'Memorials of Old Buckinghamshire,' edited by the Rev. P. H. Ditchfield, M.A., F.S.A., and published by Bemrose & Sons, Ltd.

Messrs. A. & C. Black announce the publication of Volume III. (L to P), the penultimate volume of the 'Encyclopædia Biblica,' for the 17th inst. Simultaneously, in deference to many applications from persons who have not hitherto found the work within their reach, the publishers have arranged to commence an issue in sixteen consecutive monthly parts, price 5s. each.

'Locke on the Education of Children.' Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. are bringing out immediately a pretty edition of this work under the title of 'How to Bring up your Children.' It is, of course, very well known; but, as the prefatory note says, 'the very clear and admirable directions that will be found in it for the bringing up and guidance of children from their earliest days, both as regards their bodily health and mental development, are just as applicable for the guidance of parents of to-day as they were when they were first written.' Here is a quaint bit of common-sense taken almost at random: 'I have known a young child so distracted with the number and variety of his play-games, that he tired his maid every day to look them over; and was so accustomed to abundance that he never thought he had enough, but was always asking, What more? What more? What new thing shall I have? A good introduction to moderate desires, and the ready way to make a contented happy man!' The volume contains an excellent portrait of the great philosopher.

The next volume of Messrs. Methuen's well-known edition of Shakespeare's Plays, of which Mr. W. J. Craig now acts as general editor, is 'The Tempest,' edited with an introduction, textual notes, and a commentary, by Mr. Morton Luce.

In view of the large demand expected from the clergy and public for a Coronation Hymn suited for church services, &c., commemorating the Coronation of King Edward VII., Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode, his Majesty's Printers, have just published the copyright Coronation Hymn, 'The King, O Lord, in Thee this Day Rejoices,' from the Coronation Prize March, by Mr. Percy Godfrey, Mus.Bac. The music has been arranged by Sir Frederick Bridge, Mus.Doc., Organist and Master of the Choristers of Westminster Abbey. Early intimation of the issue of this hymn is given in order that ample time may be afforded to church choirs &c. for the practice of the music. Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode have the following editions now ready: Congregational Editions with Music, Old Notation and Tonic sol-fa; and words only.

The Directors of G. W. Bacon & Co., Limited, have declared a dividend of 9 per cent. per annum for the half-year ended December 31, and carried forward the sum of £3,200.

The Religious Tract Society will publish on May 1 the authentic and complete 'Life of James Chalmers,' the great New Guinea missionary. It has been prepared by the Rev. Richard Lovett, M.A. The family of the late James Chalmers entrusted to Mr. Lovett the whole of the letters, memoranda, and reports in their possession, including an autobiography from the pen of James Chalmers himself, which has been incorporated into the Life. The directors of the London Missionary Society gave him free access to the whole of their official correspondence. Intimate friends of Mr. Chalmers allowed him to peruse and to make extracts from a very large mass of letters, especially between the years 1886 to 1901. Friends and colleagues, like the Rev. Gilbert Meikle, his old pastor in Inverary, Dr. Lawes, his lifelong colleague in New Guinea, the Rev. R. Wardlaw Thompson, Sir J. Erskine, of the Royal Navy, and a host of others have all co-operated in the effort to make this a true picture and a worthy life of one of the greatest missionary heroes of the nineteenth century. The effort of the biographer has been to depict the man as he was—in thought, in deed, in views of life, in passionate love for Jesus Christ, and in quenchless enthusiasm for the salvation of New Guinea's degraded savages, in his self-sacrificing life and in his heroic death. Two photogravure portraits, maps, and seven other portraits from photographs will be included in the volume.

'There is a rumour that the patch is to be revived. A contrary rumour says this cannot be unless powdered hair is revived too, for the patch needs white to justify it. Well, let us have patch and powder both. Sooner or later the fashion is certain to come round again, as all fashions do. Why not now? Why not commemorate the Coronation year by the recrudescence of the patch? There are spots on the sun—take that as an omen. I address you thus warmly because all that is necessary for the revival of any fashion is that a supremely beautiful woman should take the lead.'—From Messrs. Hatchard's 'Books of To-day and Books of To-morrow.'

On April 15, Mr. George Allen will publish the seventh part of the Rev. H. N. Hutchinson's 'Living Rulers of Mankind.' This part will deal with the Royal Families and Rulers of Japan, Korea, Liberia, Luxemburg, Mexico, Monaco, and Morocco, and will contain 47 illustrations.

A new monthly, entitled the British Journal of Health and Recreation, is announced to appear July 1. The publisher is sanguine that he is about to supply a long-felt want, not only on the part of the travelling public, but also experienced by those who, on the score of recuperation, require change of air, scenery, and relaxation. The journal will be illustrated, and contain articles dealing with the most practicable methods of preserving health, descriptions of new and old seaside and inland resorts, along with brightly written accounts of tours through Switzerland, the Continent, and America.

Mr. Bailey Saunders will publish immediately through Messrs. Williams & Norgate a reply to some recent criticisms on Professor Harnack's 'What is Christianity?' It will be entitled 'Professor Harnack and his Oxford Critics.' Messrs. Williams & Norgate also announce for publication at the end of the month a work on 'Women's Suffrage' entitled 'A Record of the Women's Suffrage Movement in the British Isles,' by Helen Blackburn, with a large number of portraits and diagrams.

The 1902 edition of that admirable little work, 'Clowes's Naval Pocket Book,' will be published by Messrs. Thacker & Co. about the end of April. It contains particulars extending to 900 pages respecting the navies of all nations, classified and analytical list; dry docks; guns and small arms; plans of ships, showing armours, decks, &c.; complete index of ships by name. It was founded by Mr. W. Laird Clowes, and is now edited by Mr. L. G. Carr Laughton.

A novel departure in journalism is the Play Pictorial, which is to make its first appearance next week under the editorship of Mr. Rudolph Birnbaum. Each number deals with a single play, and with the aid of pictures will furnish an illustrated record which playgoers should value. It will replace the fugitive and uncertain souvenir, and will enable those who are interested in the plays of the year to collect and bind in a uniform set of volumes the monthly numbers of the new journal. No attempt has ever been made on the lavish scale of the Play Pictorial. Its function is to do for the stage what a number of art journals do for art. It starts with a popular play, 'Mice and Men,' for which it will publish besides a special souvenir edition in the theatre.

Quite a number of swallows were flying about over the Avon, near Ringwood, last week. They must be sorry they came so soon.

A new novel by Lucas Cleeve, entitled 'Blue Lilies,' will be published by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin next week; also a third edition of Mrs. Campbell Praed's novel, 'The Insane Root.'

'The Letters of her Mother to Elizabeth' ended at the point where that peculiarly innocent ingénue was about to become a bride. Soon after her marriage, however, questions arose between her and her husband which compelled her to call in the aid of one who was specially qualified to deal with them. In 'The Grandmother's Advice to Elizabeth,' which Mr. Fisher Unwin will publish next week, will be found the bride's grievances and the astute old lady's remedies for them.

We are glad to see that Messrs. Williams & Norgate have nearly ready a revised and much enlarged edition of that very useful little book 'Nautical Terms in English and French and French and English, with Notes and Tables for the use of Naval Officers and Cadets,' by Léon Delbos, M.A., Instructor in H.M.S. 'Britannia.' Among other new plates to be included in this edition will be found 'English and French Distinguishing Flags' in colours, and a very useful plate, 'Vessels' lights as seen by the look-out man at night.'

The Shrine (London: Elliot Stock, 1s.) is the name of a new quarterly magazine which will make its appearance on the 23rd inst., Shakespeare's birthday, and will be controlled editorially from Stratford-on-Avon. Its contents will be entertaining to students of life, literature, and art. Due prominence will be given to Stratford-on-Avon, with all its diversified associations, to poetry and poets generally, and to book-lore in some of its most popular aspects. The Shrine will be printed on a specially manufactured paper, thick and rough-edged, and will be well bound in strong paper covers.—Morning Post.

Mr. Grant Richards informs us that he will publish immediately, under the title of 'The Burden of Proof,' a book which 'seeks to present some aspects of Sir Redvers Buller's work in South Africa considered from an ordinary common-sense standpoint. The writer has collected evidence to show that the facts presented to the public have been "doctored" in the interests of the War Office. The main events of the campaign are reviewed in detail, and the action of Lord Roberts is severely criticised.'

Messrs. W. Thacker & Co. will publish at the end of May a special Coronation number of 'Phil May's Annual,' appropriately clad in purple and gold. Mr. Phil May himself is now engaged in editing an édition de luxe of the cream of his work in past numbers of the annual. The same firm will issue this in the early autumn.

Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons publish 'Shakspeare as a Dramatic Artist,' with an Account of his Reputation at Various Periods. Shakspearean Wars, I. By Thomas R. Lounsbury. (Yale Bicentennial Publications.) Pp. xx, 449.

The Country for April is even more attractive than the first number. Messrs. Dent deserve the greatest credit for the faultless get-up of their beautiful sixpenny net magazine. The size being $10 \times 13\frac{1}{2}$, large illustrations can be given. We have never seen better half-tone engravings or better printing. Booksellers should introduce the Country to their customers, especially as it is published at sixpence net.

Messrs. Methuen will include in their Little Library at an early date 'Mansie Wauch,' by Mr. D. M. Moir. It is a study of Scottish life which is very popular in Scotland.

In view of the discussion in Parliament, special interest will attach to a volume which will be published this week by Mr. Brimley Johnson, entitled 'Buller's Campaign, with the Natal Field Force, 1900.' This work is written by Lieutenant E. Blake Knox, of the Royal Army Medical Corps, and contains full descriptions of all the principal and many minor engagements. Special reference is made to 'First Aid' work in the field, the conduct of the hospitals, and the general medical and surgical aspect of the campaign. It is illustrated by numerous full-page photographs, sketches, and battle-maps made at the time by the author.

Dr. Barnardo has been before the philanthropic world for many years, but beyond inadequate articles and meagre sketches of his work no serious record of his life has been published. We are glad to hear that Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co. will publish an account of this indefatigable 'Saviour of the Children' in their 'New Century Leaders' this spring. The book will contain a portrait.

Certain Undergraduate Members of the University of Oxford have, we are glad to hear, undertaken the direction of a new Review to be called the Oxford Point of View. No. 1 will be published on May 8 by Messrs. Alden & Co., Bocardo Press, Oxford, and Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co., London. The price will be one shilling net. It is a good thing for everybody that Mr. Rhodes so splendidly remembered 'my University' in his will, but it was a specially good thing for Oxford that she was Mr. Rhodes' University. We hope it is not unacademic to refer to Oxford as 'she.'

So far as smart Society is concerned, authors are lions no longer. Roar they never so loudly, not a soul shudders. Authors have themselves to blame. Their first mistake was committed in accepting Society's invitation and attending functions in short hair and conventional attire. Their second consisted in talking the epigram to death; but the fatal error was the illustrated interview. Familiarity breeds contempt, even for lions. Authors now entertain each other; and, banished from Mayfair, are glad to prowl in Maida Vale.—Bulletin, Sydney.

Mr. Frank Murray, bookseller, Derby, sends us a printed list of over 200 books on angling which he wishes, not to sell, but to purchase. He will send the list to anyone who has angling books to dispose of.

A female statue of unequalled hideousness has been 'donated,' as Americans would say, to one of the principal clubs in Pall Mall. It has been placed in the entrance-hall between the effigies of Mr. Gladstone and Lord Brougham. The young men of the club, shockingly deficient in reverence, call this trio 'Susanna and the Elders.'—Manchester Guardian.

Mr. Henry Harland's new novel, 'The Lady Paramount,' will be published by Mr. John Lane on April 17.

Among the books which Messrs. Anthony Treherne & Co. are producing will be one by Mr. Richard Marsh, called 'The Adventures of Mr. Augustus Short.' This firm is also bringing out new books by Miss Bessie Hatton, author of 'The City of Youth'; Mrs. Crawford, who wrote 'Jo of Auchen-dross'; and Dr. Helen Bourchier, author of 'The Ranees' Rubies.'

'A Meeting of Greeks and the Tug o' War' is the title of a sea story by G. Manville Fenn which Messrs. S. H. Bousfield & Co., Ltd., are to publish within the next few days.

A new novel by Mamie Bowles, author of 'The Amazing Lady' and 'Gillette's Marriage,' will be published immediately by Messrs. Duckworth & Co. under the title 'Seven Ladies and an Offer of Marriage.' It is described as a 'comedy.'

The same publishers will issue towards the end of the month Mrs. W. K. Clifford's new novel, 'Woodside Farm,' which has been running serially in the Queen, under the name of 'Margaret Vincent,' who is the heroine of the story.

Rev. J. G. Greenhough, M.A., will shortly publish, through Mr. Arthur

H. Stockwell, a volume of Reminiscences and Impressions received during his recent visit to the Colonies. The book will bear the appropriate title, 'Towards the Rising Sun,' and will be illustrated with some thirty special photographs.

Messrs. Skellington & Son inform us that Academy Notes will be published by them this year.

A NEW NAPOLEON BIBLIOGRAPHY.

'Bibliographie Napoleons: eine systematische Zusammenstellung in kritischer Sichtung.' Von F. Kirchheim.

No such critical and systematic bibliography of Napoleon as that before us has hitherto appeared, and this is not surprising when the mass of material and consequent difficulty of critically sifting it are considered. Herr Kirchheim, taking the person of Napoleon as the centre-point, accords priority to all personal matters and particulars relating to his life and family, and has placed these in the first of the six Divisions into which he has portioned his Bibliography, when they do not naturally fall into the second or third Divisions. Division II. includes political and domestic affairs of French history; Division III. comprises the international relations of the States of Europe, in which are also included the wars from 1796 to 1815, and such diplomatic negotiations as were carried on during a campaign. The next two Divisions are supplementary to the first three. Division IV. contains the history of the European States during the reign of Napoleon; and Division V. gives, in alphabetical order, the most important memoirs, correspondence, and biographies to which the many cross-references in the previous Divisions relate. Division VI. embraces a number of works containing longer criticisms on memoirs. The finding of any particular work is rendered easy by an excellent index. Herr Kirchheim has succeeded, in spite of the manifold difficulties of his task, in compiling such a bibliography of Napoleonic literature as cannot fail to be most valuable to historical inquirers, librarians, and also to booksellers, for the names of publishers, dates of publication, and prices are accurately recorded in the volume, which is printed in clear type on good paper. Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Company are English agents for the work.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Robert Gravatt, many years of King Street, Cheapside, who became a member of the Committee of the News-vendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution in 1840, died on April 1. He was greatly respected.

THE PROPOSED BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT SCHEME.

SIR,—The correspondence published in your columns has been somewhat inconsequent and lacking in businesslike consideration. Something more arduous and effective than holding a meeting somewhere will be required to carry such a proposal as Mr. Brabrook's into the region of accomplished facts.

Why has this proposal, and others like it, been met by the stolid indifference of those whom it is meant to benefit? Because, first, it is not a provident society in the ordinary sense. To the provident the bait is not particularly alluring. What is offered in return for the subscription? This; in the event of the subscriber being in necessitous circumstances he or his dependents will have the privilege of applying for relief; that relief, small or great, will not be granted as a matter of course. It will be given according to the financial standing of the society, and then only (a) at the discretion of the management or (b) by ballot of members. There is not much here to tempt even a small subscription from a provident man. It does not appeal to him. He will rather pay a little more, and in exchange for his money get the certain and more valuable asset of an assurance company's endowment policy or relief from a strong provident or friendly society. A second reason for the admitted indifference is to be found in the fact that the proposed society is a benevolent society. It is as a benevolent society that the man in the street regards it, and hence his indifference. It is as hard to be enthusiastic in a question of benevolence as it is difficult to be convinced of the need of providing against possible shipwreck in business or health.

It seems to me the promoters are working on wrong lines. It was an easier thing to start a benevolent society sixty years ago than it is now, when these are largely superseded by friendly societies. For that reason I think it regrettable that Mr. Shaylor's suggestion in your issue of March 8 has received no consideration from your correspondents. Mr. Shaylor's suggestion was that provincial institutions might be formed and eventually affiliated with the Booksellers' Provident Institution, an institution which has a record of sixty years' usefulness and funds exceeding £30,000. Extended as Mr. Shaylor suggests, it would cover all the ground the proposed new society seeks to cover, overlapping and antagonism would be prevented, and needless working expenses avoided.

Mr. Brabrook desires the proposed society to be governed by the best actuarial advice. Well, actuaries are hard to satisfy. The question of funds will be a harder nut to crack for the promoters than the expense of a preliminary meeting. A society without a sound financial basis would simply be another worry and burden to the already over-worried bookseller. The measure of support the society would receive from donations and legacies is an unknown quantity, and the funds available for benevolent purposes will certainly not be embarrassing if dependent mainly on the income from annual and life subscribers. The Booksellers' Provident Institution has derived no less than half its funds from donations and legacies, but a new society would not fare so well; it would be in competition with the older one, and at the best would probably split this source of income.

Mr. Brabrook says the Booksellers' Provident Institution has failed to gain the confidence and support of the younger men, but he does not say what reason he has to suppose that a new society engineered on practically the same lines would fare better. If booksellers are indifferent to the Booksellers' Provident Institution, what is to draw them to the new society? What objection is there to the existing society unless that its usefulness is restricted to a limited area? If it can be broadened as Mr. Shaylor suggests what more need be done than to set about to find a modus operandi. Why not approach the Board of Directors of the Booksellers' Provident Institution with a scheme for their consideration? If assistants will not join an institution with funds amounting to £30,000, what reason is there to suppose that they will flock to join a society which is unable to say whether it will ever be in a position to grant them aid were it ever so much needed?

Yours, &c.,

W. GRIERSON.

BOOKSELLERS' EXPERIENCES.

DEAR SIR,—The amusing note of a Bookseller's Assistant re the curious requests of certain bookbuyers reminds me of some oddly named books asked from me, while in the employment of an old-established firm in this city. Perhaps two or three samples will not come amiss to the readers of the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, many of whom, no doubt, could cap my experience. During the first fever of the South African war, and when General Joubert was much in evidence, a smart young fellow bounced into the shop and asked me for 'Joubert's Maxims.' I naturally handed him the choice collection published by George Allen. He stared at me and at the book, and then loftily exclaimed, 'I don't want that, it's a book about guns!' Another occasion a most intelligent-looking man coolly asked me for a novel called, he believed, 'When the Kye came Hame.' This for a moment staggered me, but the association of ideas made me venture to hint that he wanted Helen Mather's 'Comin' thro' the Rye.' And I was right. 'Man,' he said, laughing, 'that's it; I knew it was something in that line.' But the most ludicrous request of all, and the most unpardonable one, seeing it was made by an assistant in a well-known book-shop, was when a youth boldly demanded Annie Swan's 'Sunburnt Hearts!' I had to laugh heartily at this astounding title, and when I handed him

'Sundered Hearts' the youth looked a little foolish. Yet one more instance. A gentleman stepped in, looked round the stock, said he wanted a book, but really he could not remember its title. Of course, one could only leave him alone. After a long look round, he sadly departed without the book. No doubt an entertaining collection of these experiences could be made. Could you not invite your readers to contribute?

Yours truly,

D. STEWART.

179 Slatefield Street,
Dennistoun, Glasgow:
April 3, 1902.

[Why not? Smiles are cheap, and do no harm. The other day a copy of the P.C. was sent to an author whose book was reviewed in it. He wrote a letter profuse in thanks for the copy of our periodical 'Rariora' which we had so kindly sent him. There happened to be an advertisement of Mr. Hodgkin's work in the P.C. that week.—Ed.]

RUBBER ON PENCIL AND PEN HOLDERS, AND A SMALL GRUMBLE.

DEAR SIR,—Noticing your paragraph anent lead pencils and the discomfort in using them, which also applies to pen-holders, it may be useful to those afflicted to know that a perfect remedy is to be found in using a piece of india-rubber tubing about $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches long near the 'business end' (sample enclosed). Having suffered from writer's cramp, I have found this plan invaluable.

May I indulge in a small grumble? It is now a common practice of the printers of magazines to so fill up the top margin of the front covers as to leave no space for writing the names of the customers. I often have to write the names on the back covers, which is not commendable.

Truly yours,

W. H. BALL.

Barton-on-Humber.

WEEDS FOR PAPER MAKING.

DEAR SIR,—A copy of the CIRCULAR of the 22nd March has been sent to me, and at page 336 I find my name mentioned.

If the writer of the article would like to forward me any specimens of Byssus, or fresh- or salt-water weeds, that he thinks would be likely to be useful in the manufacture of paper, I will examine them and report.

Yours faithfully,

Leek.

THOMAS WARDLE.

[We are much obliged to Sir Thomas Wardle and will endeavour to obtain samples for him.—Ed.]

BOOKBINDERS' CLOTH.

SIR,—Is it quite certain that the cloth binding of Henry Moses' 'Collection of Antique Vases, &c.,' 1814, is of the same date as the year of publication? (See p. 363, ante.) It is quite possible that a number of copies might have been put into cloth boards at a later period.

'THE ENGLISH TRADITION.'

It is not very long since, in popular conception, imaginative literature was a form of expression from which pleasure of one kind or another could be extracted. Gradually this conception has been modified, and we have come to accept it as a very doubtful contributor to the sum of human happiness. It has been left for the Russian, Maxim Gorky, to convert it into an instrument of torture. The life represented in his tales of the 'Barefoot Brigade' is at best degraded and painful; at worst, indecent and hideous. To read it is to be overcome with a disgust for life, for any scheme of existence that admits such possibilities. The representation has no appearance of exaggeration, of an unscrupulous desire for effect; it gives the impression of literal truth; it creates a positive belief in the fact. No doubt this is what Gorky means to do, and, if to do it is to be a great force in literature, let none dispute his greatness. Fortunately for us, at least, who cherish the English tradition, there is still room and time to protest. For us, in the estimation of greatness, there are still to be considered the quality of the subject, the ideas and the ideals presented to us. The day has not yet come for us to crown the vivid reporter of the filthy lives of more or less professional tramps. On first acquaintance, Gorky's tramps are rather interesting, because of their curiosity about the mystery of life, which suggests a spirituality trying to escape and to rise above their wretched material condition. But it never does rise, and what seems an interesting and redeeming individual attribute is nothing but a national trait that makes itself an excuse for vice. Gorky may or may not think it an excuse; one cannot tell. He is almost perfectly the impersonal artist or reporter, who tells what he sees and knows, adding neither judgment nor apology. It is not to be predicted that he may never apply this art to the rendering of the more hopeful and beautiful aspects of life; but in his translated work, at least, limitations are distinctly hinted. His occasional sketches of presumably refined persons with civilised habits are awkward, imperfect, sometimes not quite intelligible. He does not understand, probably does not perceive, emotions in which the intellect and what we call character are involved. He really grasps nothing in men and women except animalism, sensuality, materialism. He appears, indeed, chiefly as a born captain of the 'Barefoot Brigade.'—The American Nation.

A BUSINESS-BUILDER.

There's money being spent for your kind of goods—money you don't get. Your present ways of advertising can't reach it all. Will you try new ways? Will you let me supply them?

It's my business to write ads. When you want shoes, you go to a shoe man. When you want ads, go to an ad man. I'd like you to come to me, but go to some ad writer anyway.

Tell me what you want to sell; I'll help you to sell it. If you want ads, I'll send you six for a dollar. I'll send three good business-bringing schemes for a retailer for a dollar. For three dollars: ten ads, two window-display plans, three business-building schemes.

If the ads don't suit—your money back; that's my way.

REV. A. HOFMEYER ON MR. RHODES.

The Rev. A. Hofmeyer, author of 'The Story of my Captivity during the Transvaal War,' has something in the current Chambers on 'Empire-Building,' in which he says he never fully understood and appreciated the actions of the late Mr. Cecil Rhodes until the outbreak of the South African War. He does not think that Britons all over the world valued his services highly enough as an empire-builder. About ten years ago he heard Mr. Rhodes, standing before a large map of Africa, dilate upon the necessity of land acquisition here, there, and everywhere over the vast Continent. To have been associated with him for some years in this way he accounted a high honour. Mr. Hofmeyer went through the Kalahari in connection with this work at the time the 'Ngamiland concession was granted. At that time he received a letter from a missionary living north of the lake 'Ngami, who wrote: 'Dear Mr. H., for God's sake bring up your men as soon as possible, so that an end may be put to the wickedness and cruelty of Seg-Komi.' A terrible story of Seg-Komi's treachery is related before his territory came under British control.

THOREAU.

'As a friend he was priceless, in his own original way; he had a genius for knowing one's need and supplying it; yet some would think him cold, he asked so little, and was as independent as the shrubs. Such words as these, "If my world is not sufficient without thee, my friend, I will wait until it is, and then call thee," frighten the demonstrative, dependent friend. He abhorred morbid sentimentality, or anything bordering upon selfish affection—loved rather the glow which the wind generates, and the warmth of snow, and says in his essay on "Love": "The luxury of affection, there's the danger. There must be some nerve and heroism in our love, as of a winter morning." And to a friend who is worthy he says: "What wealth is it to have such friends that we cannot think of them without elevation. And we can think of them any time and anywhere, and it costs nothing but the lofty disposition." One who knew Thoreau intimately, with whom he lived for two years, expresses himself warmly: "A truth speaker he, capable of the most deep and strict conversation; a physician to the wounds of any soul; a friend, not only knowing the secret of friendship, but almost worshipped by those persons who resorted to him as their confessor and prophet, and knew the deep value of his mind and great heart. His soul was made for the noblest society... wherever there is knowledge, wherever there is virtue, wherever there is beauty he will find a home."—From a very appreciative article on H. D. Thoreau by S. E. Saville in the April number of the Gentleman's Magazine. Among other interesting articles in this number is one on 'The Zirians,' or Russian Gipsies.

MORE MODERN ATHENIANS.

In 1892 a unique collection of over 1,000 portraits of notable Edinburgh inhabitants, sketched from life by John Sheriff (nicknamed Dr. Syntax) between 1800 and 1844, were on exhibition, and proposals were then made for their issue in volume form, like Kay's Portraits or Crombie's 'Modern Athenians.' This proposal never took shape, and the collection was purchased for the Corporation and the pictures are now stored in the Municipal Museum. Some fifty-four of these have found their way into frames, but, strange to say, those of Sir Walter Scott, of whom there are ten or twelve, are still in the portfolios. Two sketches of Scott as he appeared in the Court of Session in 1825 are reproduced in the current Chambers's Journal. The Scottish Judges are pen-and-ink sketches from life, and unmistakable portraits. As John Sheriff was a great haunter of the university medical classes and the city churches, all the leading professors and medical men are represented, as well as the leading divines. Chalmers, Guthrie in his early Edinburgh days, Candlish, Robert Murray, McCheyne—a more authentic portrait than that in the Memoir, which is by himself—Dr. Cunningham, Rev. John Thomson, the minister painter, Dr. Lee, Dr. Dickson of St. Cuthbert's, Dr. Duncan of Ruthwell, founder of Savings Banks, Dr. Christian, Professor Bell, Dr. Liston, Dr. Thatcher, Dr. Knox, of body-snatching fame, Robert Miller, bookseller, Professor Wilson as he appeared when lecturing the students, Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd, and a host of others find a place in this collection, which until a catalogue is prepared for this Municipal Museum is like a sealed book as far as the public is concerned. The Burns relics from the Calton Hill find a place in a side room adjoining the Museum. Besides the Burns relics and manuscripts, the autograph of the poet Shelley, when he made his runaway marriage with Harriet Westbrook, is also shown. The stone marking the residence of Sir Simon Preston, Provost of Edinburgh, where Queen Mary spent her last night in Edinburgh, June 15, 1567, has now been placed in position in the west archway of the restored screen in front of the Council Chambers.

'MONTE CRISTO.'

Lord Salisbury, according to a story in the Gem, told the following interesting and amusing incident a short time ago at a meeting of a certain literary club of which he is president: 'One book,' said Lord Salisbury, 'has always fascinated me, and on more than one occasion has drawn me out of bed very early in the morning. This is Dumas' "Monte Cristo." A few months ago I was staying at Sandringham. I had my favourite with me, and about half-past four in the morning I got up and went into the beautiful grounds, and sat down for an hour or two to be "carried away" by my book. I had been reading for about half an hour, when I heard someone say, "What! Are a Prime Minister's duties so heavy that he must needs be up so early in order to study?" I turned, and saw King Edward VII. I showed him the book that had drawn me out so early, and he said, laughingly, that he would read such an apparently fascinating book. Three weeks afterwards he said to me: "'Monte Cristo' drew you out of bed at half-past four in the morning; I may say that it drew me out of my bed at four in the morning."

[This may not be true, but it's a gem anyway.—Ed. P.C.]

Notices of Books

From Mr. George Allen.—'Women in Love: Eight Studies in Sentiment,' by Alfred Sutro. Very delicate in their treatment are these little 'studies,' but that they should be somewhat unsatisfying is in the natural order of things. Women in love, if we may accept their teaching, are passionate, impulsive beings, ready to sacrifice everything on the altar of affection. Man—sober, selfish, reasoning man—hardly stands out attractively by contrast. Thus when Kitty Bellamy, the pretty, affectionate little mistress of the dainty villa in St. John's Wood who has so fondly cherished the hope that her lover, the Hon. D'Arcy Galbraith, will one day marry her, and has striven with such pathetic earnestness to qualify herself in manners and education for the position—when she ventures to broach the subject, it is only to find that he is already engaged to be married and intends to discard her; nay, more, has entertained thoughts of passing her over to a friend. Again, when Mabel Ackworth is prepared to give up husband, children, home, everything, for Paul Varens, who is commissioned to go to the Philippines as a war correspondent, it is he who draws back and shirks the responsibility. Certainly there is one instance where the man is the generous, all-sacrificing party, but he is very young and excuses are to be made for him; the woman saves him from himself. Mr. Sutro's little sketches are written in the duologue form, and though they can scarcely be said to leave an altogether pleasant impression on the mind, being impregnated with much worldliness, despite their great sentiment, they are presented with such deftness and subtle intuition as to be distinctly attractive.

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—'Westminster Abbey: a Short History and Description of the Church and Conventual Buildings, with Notes on the Monuments,' by Charles Hiatt. Mr. Hiatt has had a most engrossing subject to deal with in this volume of 'Bell's Cathedral Series,' and considering the limited space at his disposal he has done thorough justice to it. The book consists of five chapters, respectively treating of the history of the Abbey, its exterior, interior, Henry VII.'s

Chapel, and the Conventual buildings. Under the headings of 'The Interior,' the Nave, Transepts and Choir, the Choir and Choir Aisles, the Confessor's Chapel, the South Ambulatory and the Chapels of St. Benedict, St. Edmund, and St. Nicholas, the North Ambulatory and the Chapels of St. Paul, St. John Baptist, St. Erasmus and Islip's Chapel, and the Chapels of the North Transept are described. A good index is appended, together with a list of the Abbots and Deans of Westminster, a table of chief events in the history of the Abbey, an index to tombs and monuments, &c. Much of the volume's attractiveness is due to the many illustrations which reproduce with photographic accuracy the chief features of interest in the building.

From Mr. Albert Broadbent, Oxford Street, Manchester.—'Rose's Diary, and other Poems.' At the suggestion and by earnest desire of the publisher, the author of the poems in this little book—samples from a much larger collection—consented to their publication. Admirers of "Rose's Diary" will be glad to find the original text reproduced in this edition. The poem for April has been added from the edition of 1886, in which it first appeared. In issuing these gems of poetry, the publisher asks the help of everyone into whose hands a copy may fall in making them more widely known. The low price at which they are published will enable each possessor to extend to some aspiring soul the religious solace, refreshment, and stimulus they are so well qualified to impart. The volume concludes with a poem now published for the first time. The charge for a single copy is threepence. There are many charming verses in these poems of religious feeling.

'Dedicated to the memory of one who was the wife of another dear and honoured friend of his youth, "Rose's Diary" was never intended to publish abroad the devout exercises of a heart whereinto, of course, the writer could not presume to intrude. All it professes to give is the result of an imaginative effort to enter sympathetically into the religious experiences more or less common in these freer and happier days to all divinely aspiring souls.'

Here is a little gem of a picture in words of what has ever been one of the sweetest sights to be seen—a maiden watering her flowers:

THE SHEPHERDESSES.

What plenteous largess from her hands
Descends in gentle showers!
The maiden in the garden stands,
And feeds her flock of flowers.
I thank thee, duteous Shepherdess;
Though 'tis unknown to me
Whether those streams enlivening bless
The flowers most or thee.

From Messrs. Hurst & Blackett, Ltd.—'Woman and Moses,' by Lucas Cleeve. When a young and single woman has a warm attachment for a married man who is not on good terms with his wife, her intimate friend, the situation is plainly unfortunate for all parties concerned, but more especially for herself. Such is the position of Avril Chichester in this story. She is a really good girl, and jealously guards her secret from the man whom it most concerns, but circumstances are against her. Despite all her efforts to bring about peace, the relations between husband and wife become more strained, and ultimately the latter, urged on by her own frivolous nature and the indifference shown by her husband, takes the fatal step, and divorce proceedings are the result. The husband then marries Avril. But the purpose of the story, if it has any, would seem to be to show that a man's first wife, though no longer bound to him by legal ties, can never be divorced from his mind. Arthur Trefussis has no sooner got rid of his erring spouse than his old affection for her revives. This is a little hard on Avril, who naturally sees the working of her husband's mind; and she regrets that she has married him. However, the first Mrs. Trefussis solves the difficulty by committing suicide, and after this we are given to understand Avril is happy, though her husband's thoughts still often recur to the departed one. The story produces an impression of having been somewhat hurriedly written, but is yet a very fair specimen of the author's powers and method of treatment. Of course it would be absurd to expect Lucas Cleeve to keep to any one distinct style; almost every story exhibits a new and surprising versatility.

From Messrs. Methuen & Co. — 'Lost Property: the Story of Maggie Cannon,' by W. Pett Ridge. The author in this novel has added another to his many attractive portraits of girl life among the poorer classes. The heroine first makes her appearance in the lost property office of the Cannon Street station, where she has been innocently brought, in company with an umbrella and two pairs of gloves, by a porter who has been investigating the carriages of the last Mid-Kent. She is then a deserted baby carefully concealed in a wine hamper, and has a long line of experiences before her, as varied and novel in their character as any that befell that other baby in years long ago who went by the name of Ginx. First she is consigned to the workhouse, from which she is adopted by a pompous Mrs. Malden, who is seized with the idea of taking some half-dozen friendless children and educating them to be respectable and useful members of society. This idea proving difficult of accomplishment, little Maggie Cannon is next passed on to a good motherly soul who promises, for a 'consideration,' to love her as one of her own, and who fulfils her promise by transferring the child with all possible expedition to the care of another and less reputable creature. After this poor Maggie falls very low in the world. At one time she is selling newspapers in the Hammersmith Broadway, but is deprived of even this slender subsistence by the action of two philanthropic ladies, who write to the manager of the paper concerning her. However, quite by accident she runs across her old nurse at the workhouse, who afterwards was engaged by Mrs. Malden; and from this time her fortunes change for the better. She now obtains a situation in a post office and stationery shop, and ere long has two suitors, between whom a sharp and sometimes rather amusing contrast is drawn. When she eventually marries (having greatly improved herself by private study during her spare time) Maggie seriously offends her old friend Nurse Watson, but the quarrel is made up by a baby, the nurse taking just as fondly to the new comer as she did to its mother in bygone days. Several of Mr. Ridge's characters are a little Dickensesque in their attributes, notably the Maldens, but all possess genuine interest.

From Mr. John Murray. — 'Old Diaries, 1881-1901,' by Lord Ronald Sutherland-Gower. It would perhaps be a little unfair to expect that this volume should prove quite so interesting as the author's previous collection of 'Reminiscences,' but indeed it falls little short of it. There is the same genial unaffected style, the same wealth of incident and moving scenery, the same wonderful variety of character to be met with. To mention even a quarter of the eminent beings, ranging from Royalty to mere commoners, whose acquaintance is to be made in these pages would tax our review columns to the utmost. At every turn we jostle a familiar character, and not only their number but their variety is prodigious. The author seems to have met, with few exceptions, every man and woman of mark in every calling of life. In politics we have Lord Beaconsfield, Mr. Gladstone, Prince Bismarck, Mr. John Bright, Lord Rosebery, Lord Dufferin, the Duke of Argyll, Lord Northbrook, Mr. John Morley, Sir William Harcourt; in literature, Mr. G. A. Sala, Mr. J. A. Symonds, Mr. Hamilton Auldé, 'Ouida,' Mrs. Hodgson Burnett, Miss Marie Corelli, Mr. Gilbert Parker, Mr. Zangwill; in art, Lord Leighton, Sir E. J. Poynter, P.R.A., Mr. G. F. Watts, R.A., Sir J. E. Millais, R.A., Mr. George H. Boughton, R.A., Mr. Phil May; among actors, Sir Henry Irving, Miss Ellen Terry, Mrs. Langtry, Mr. Charles Wyndham, Miss Mary Moore, Miss Fanny Brough, Mr. Arthur Benson; in the Church, Bishop Creighton, the Dean of Gloucester, Cardinal Manning, Cardinal Newman, and the author's great friend the Rev. Sidney Propert. These names are selected at random, but will give some idea of the vast range of Lord Ronald Gower's acquaintance. To members of the nobility there is of course constant reference. Of her late Majesty he has many touching remembrances to give. On the death of his sister in 1880 she wrote him a most sympathetic letter which reveals in almost every line the thorough kindness and womanliness of her disposition. The volume contains a frontispiece portrait of the author and several other illustrations, which greatly enhance its interest. In its perusal the reader may spend several pleasurable hours.

From Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd. — 'The Captain: a Magazine for Boys and Old Boys.' Volume VI. of this periodical, containing the numbers from October 1901 to March 1902, affords a great mass of reading that can scarcely from its variety and interest fail to win the approbation of youngsters. Among the many well-known writers who contribute to its pages are Harold Bindloss, the Rev. A. N. Malan, C. B. Fry, Dick Donovan, G. Firth Scott, Irving Bachelor, John Mackie, and others. Much of the attraction of the magazine, however, is furnished by the readers themselves, who are encouraged to take part in competitions, to express their opinions on given subjects, and so forth. There are also departments devoted to athletics, cycling, photography, football, stamp-collecting, and other pursuits that deeply interest the boy mind. The illustrations to the volume are both numerous and effective.

From the same. — The 'Wide World Magazine': an illustrated monthly of True Narrative, Adventure, Travels, Custom, and Sport. Volume VIII. — October 1901 to March 1902. To mention even a tithe of the attractions of this volume would be quite an impossibility in the space at our disposal, but two items in Dr. Conan Doyle's work on 'The Great Boer War,' reproduced by arrangement with the author and Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co., and Dreyfus's 'Five Years of my Life,' giving an account of his imprisonment on the Ile du Diable, stand out very prominently. The volume, however, is replete with interesting matter in the way of travel and adventure, and the illustrations are quite a feature in themselves. There are upwards of 600 pages in the book, and we doubt whether there is one that can with any truth be called dull.

From Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons. — 'Henry V.; the typical Mediæval Hero,' by Charles Lethbridge Kingsford, M.A. 'King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long! England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.' Thus wrote Shakespeare of one of the most deservedly popular of English kings, who, as Mr. Kingsford says, 'for two centuries' remained the peculiar darling of the English people. Full justice is done in this volume to Henry, whose fortunes we follow with unabated interest from the hour of his birth at Monmouth, on August 9, 1387. Of his early years we learn, among other matters, how four shillings were paid for seven books of grammar bought for him at London, and 'eight pence for harpstrings for the harp of the young lord Henry.' He had a natural taste for music and had been taught to play the harp, but was thought to devote too much of his leisure to music. Being forced by the troubles and revolts of the first years of his father's reign to take an early part in public affairs and lead a rough campaigning life, his educational course was necessarily abridged. Yet Mr. Kingsford states that Prince Henry had some tincture of Latin, and could write a manly straightforward letter alike in French and in English. Summoned by his father on his return from Scotland in 1400 to join him in quelling the rebellion in North Wales, when Henry IV. was called away by State affairs, the young prince was left as nominal Governor of North Wales and the Marches, but was guided by Henry Percy, famed in story as Hotspur, under whom the future king became practically acquainted with State affairs, both civil and military. The modes of campaigning adopted by the Welsh, as described by Mr. Kingsford, have no slight resemblance to that of the Boers in South Africa, and afforded admirable training for the future victor of Agincourt. Returning to London after the Welsh revolt was ended in September 1408, young Henry entered on his apprenticeship as a statesman in the Council Chamber, where he did not always agree with the policy of his father and his advisers, and in November 1411 he and his friends were relieved of their offices. But he triumphed in the fact that the foreign policy of his enemies failed. His father died in November 1413, and he found himself fully prepared by training and experience for the great and responsible trust that devolved upon him. How wisely and bravely he reigned is well told in Mr. Kingsford's biography, which, while it is terse and truthful, is as interesting as any romance. It appropriately appears at the present time to enforce the lesson taught by the fifth Henry's strenuous, businesslike rule. 'Nothing was too great for him to attempt and nothing too trivial for his notice.' 'As a General he laid his plans with care and forethought, and executed them with patient strategy or prudent daring as the occasion required. But his share in the war did not end thus. His great expeditions were prepared and organised under his personal supervision.' The book is well and fully illustrated, and contains six excellent maps and plans.

From Messrs. Sands & Co.—'Afoot through the Kashmir Valleys,' by Marion Doughty (Helton Mervyn). The author says that when a little girl she wished to go to Kashmir, and, by dint of hard wishing and much patience, arrived after long years in that land of roses of which so attractive a picture is presented in this handsome volume. That she should have travelled on foot over so much ground and made so many steep ascents, not seldom attended with danger to life and limb, very much astonished the natives, as it may some readers. Indeed, her pertinacity, perseverance, and pluck continually excite our admiration. She saw all there was to be seen at all risks, and describes con brío the objects, animate and inanimate, she came across. The rapid succession of scenes and incidents resembles a moving panorama, the effect of which is intensified by excellent illustrations. Other and equally attractive features of the book are the many passages dealing with the natives of various races and castes with whom the writer was brought in contact, and in whose deeds and sayings we find many of those touches of nature that make the whole world kin. Very sympathetic is the episode of the Sikh postmaster; and the incident of the British official down with fever reminds the reader of the burden resting upon those of our countrymen whose duty it is to help to safeguard our Indian possessions.

From Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Ltd.—'What Will It Cost? an Indispensable and Handy Reference Book for Booksellers, Stationers, and Printers.' The compiler might have added Publishers to his list, for his most useful little pocket manual gives 'Cost of Books with Odd Copy,' 'Sizes of Books,' 'Trade Prices Ready Reckoner,' 'Equivalent Weights in Printing Papers,' Diagram showing Folding Sizes of Papers, Sizes of Papers, and many other tables which relate in some way to book and stationery business.

From Messrs. Anthony Treherne & Co., Ltd.—'Thoroughbred,' by Francis Dods-worth. On the first page we are introduced to a November night, the darkness of which, the author assures us, could not only 'be felt, but even handled.' We must confess this statement prejudiced us against Mr. Dods-worth; the ensuing pages, however, gave us more confidence in the truthfulness of our novelist, and we followed his narrative with more interest than is usually aroused by the average sporting story. Bucephalus is born in Chapter I., in Chapter XVI. he is twelve years old, and on the last page of the book he dies. He is an intelligent animal, carries on conversations at great length, and meets with his death in a truly heroic fashion. We knew little about the thoughts and feelings of horses before reading this pleasant novel; we now know as much as horses themselves—which is saying a good deal!

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'Mistress Barbara Cunliffe,' by Halliwell Sutcliffe. Many of the good qualities that rendered the author's previous novels, 'Ricroft of Withens' and 'Shameless Wayne,' so popular with readers are discernible in the present work, but on the whole we are not inclined to rate it so highly as some of its predecessors, though, being of a more subdued character, it is possible that some people may like it better. The story is chiefly concerned with the doings of one Stephen Royd, who, having unfortunately lost his ancestral lands, has turned to trade with the object of recouping himself. A strange man, this Stephen Royd, hard to drive a bargain with, and yet generous in other matters. But, as one of the characters remarks, 'Breed tells, I reckon, an' if trade keeps his one pocket buttoned tight, breed oppens t'other.' The house and lands that at one time belonged to the Royds are now in the possession of Richard Bancroft, who is further an opponent of Stephen by reason of his being an admirer of pretty Barbara Cunliffe, the daughter of the Squire of the place, a man of impoverished property, who is popularly supposed to devote all his time to mysterious chemical experiments. The plot, however, is not the chief attraction of the story, though it will interest readers to learn how Stephen, after many anxieties and unwearied struggles, recovers possession of the family homestead, and, what is more, secures the hand of the charming Barbara. Where readers will mostly find their pleasure, especially if they come from the North Country, is in the admirable portraiture of Yorkshire life and character. Stephen Royd is a very distinctive member of his class—a blood relative, it may be, of 'Shameless Wayne,' whom the accidents of life have placed under different influences, but even still more distinctive, if more popular, are Tim o' Tabs and his sweetheart Tabitha. Billy Puff, the village constable, in his Dogberry-like omnipotence, seems something of an exaggeration, and the scene of Tim in the stocks hardly rings true. But even with its imperfections Mr. Sutcliffe has written a story that will appeal by its broad, homely humanity to a large concourse of readers, and in which feverish excitement will be subdued to the far greater interest of real life.

NEW EDITIONS.—We have been glad to renew acquaintance with the late Sir Walter Besant's little essay on 'The Art of Fiction,' a new edition of which, in a tasteful binding, has been published by Messrs. Chatto & Windus. The work, it will be remembered, was originally delivered as a lecture at the Royal Institution in 1884, but the Appendix is evidently of a later date.—Messrs. Treherne & Co. have issued a new and cheaper edition of Mr. Herbert Compton's novel, 'A Free Lance in a Far Country,' which contains an account of the startling adventures of Selwyn Fyeways of Fyeways Hall in the county of Gloucester, who, having left his ancestral mansion for reasons which are stated, was kidnapped by the East India Company's servants and, being landed at Bombay, eventually found his way into Hindostan and became, in an almost incredible manner, King Sooleeman of Sooleeman-poor.—The two latest volumes in the 'Complete Library,' published by Messrs. Gowans & Gray, of Glasgow, contain the 'Exemplary Novels' of Cervantes, edited by Jas. Fitzmaurice Kelly and newly translated by Norman MacColl. We have before commented on the excellent printing and all-round production of this Library, and in the present issues these advantages are well maintained.—Messrs. R. E. King & Co., Ltd., have sent us a copy of their sixpenny edition of 'A Life's Remorse,' by Mrs. Hungerford, perhaps better known to the majority of readers as the author of 'Molly Bawn.' It is one of the best of her novels, and, though not particularly profound in its observation of life and character, is pleasantly interesting from first page to last.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO.'S NEW NOVELS.

SANCTA PAULA: a Romance of the Fourth Century. By WALTER COPLAND PERRY. With 8 Plates. 6s.

Deals graphically with the chief agencies and conditions of the establishment of the Church, in the midst of social corruption, in the decline of the Roman Empire. The predominating figures are those of the beautiful Sancta Paula, her daughter, and St. Jerome.

NEW EDITIONS OF TWO ADMIRABLE DUTCH HISTORICAL ROMANCES
BY A. S. C. WALLIS. Each 6s. [This day.]

(1) IN TROUBLED TIMES: a Romance of the Netherlands.

'It is truly refreshing in these days to come upon a work of such unquestionable excellence. A whole shaf of words of wisdom, wit, and pathos could truly be gleaned from its pages. There are characters in the book that should live beside Romola and Tito, Becky Sharp, and Colonel Newcombe.'—SPECTATOR.

'A remarkable literary phenomenon.'—PALL MALL GAZETTE.

'The romance has great qualities.'—ACADEMY.

(2) ROYAL FAVOUR: a Romance of the Sixteenth Century.

'Her first effort won a hearing at once. The present should establish her position among us. It would be difficult when once launched on "Royal Favour" to lay it down.'—ACADEMY.

'Of conspicuous merit, vertebrate from end to end.'—ATHENÆUM.

'A remarkable analysis of character and motive.'—GUARDIAN.

'The work is to 16th century Holland what "J. hn Inglesant" is to the same period in English history.'—VANITY FAIR.

'It depends on Miss Wallis to attain the first rank among European novelists.'—MORNING POST.

EDITED BY SIR MOUNT-TUART GRANT DUFF.

THE VICTORIAN ANTHOLOGY. With Introduction and Notes. Cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

A. T. QUILLER-ROUCH in the BOOKMAN for April says: 'I have, I hope, by this time extracted enough to prove Sir Mountstuart's a delightful book, and hardly more indebted for its pleasing qualities to the masterpieces he has brought within its covers than to his own remarkable commentary in preface. For compressed elegance and pertinence I know nothing to compare with it.'

COMPLETION OF MR. MEAKIN'S 'MOROCCO.'

THE MOORS. Very fully Illustrated and Indexed. Forming the concluding volume of Mr. Meakin's Trilogy on Morocco. Vol. I, being 'The Moorish Empire,' and Vol. II, 'The Land of the Moors.' Each 15s. 8vo.

'Nobody is better qualified to write of Morocco than Mr. Meakin.'—PALL MALL.

'His admirable volumes.'—BOOKMAN.

'At once a generous and important contribution.'—ATHENÆUM.

'Fascinating pages.'—WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.

THE ASSOCIATED BOOKSELLERS.

Mr. Keay, in his speech at the annual meeting of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland, laid stress upon the very satisfactory relations which he said existed between his association and that of the publishers.

'Their relationship with the Publishers' Association continued to be of the same friendly and agreeable nature as it had been ever since the Association was formed. They were working hand in hand with the sole endeavour to do their best for the bookselling trade, and without the co-operation of the publishers all their efforts would be of no avail.'

Nothing could be more satisfactory than such a statement as this, especially as it is no question of a mere sentimental relationship, but a real and active alliance. Mr. Keay's words are not stronger than those used by the chief officers of the Publishers' Associations at the recent annual meeting.

An alliance, to be lasting, must confer some tangible benefits on both parties, and although it is not the only advantage, unquestionably the chief one is the benefit which publishers and booksellers have derived from the establishment of the net book system. A reference to our report of Mr. Keay's speech will show that the Associated Booksellers are delighted with the success of the net system, and evidently look forward to the time when the giving of trade discounts to the public will be a folly of the past.

In his reference to the interesting table of the comparative numbers and values of net and non-net books published during 1901, compiled by Mr. Bowes, Mr. Keay regretted that there had been some slight errors. He said Mr. Bowes compiled his figures from the weekly announcements in the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR and those in the Bookseller, which apparently did not include all books published. As far as the CIRCULAR is concerned, we can only say that we spare neither labour nor expense to make our lists as perfect and accurate as possible; it is manifestly impossible for us to insert particulars of books which are not advertised in the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, are not subscribed in the usual way, and of which the publishers will not trouble to give us any information. The annual volumes of the English Catalogue of course contain many entries not to be found in our columns, but when, as often happens, no notice is taken of repeated applications for particulars about a book it will be seen that omissions are inevitable.

It would be a mistake to suppose that all publishers and booksellers approve of the net system; there are still many who have to be converted, and it will evidently be a long time before colonial booksellers favour it—in fact, it may be said that dislike for the net book increases in proportion as the distance of the bookseller from the place of publication increases the cost of carriage.

It must be disappointing to those who have advocated the establishment of a Provincial Booksellers' Assistants' Provident and Benevolent Association to find that no reference to it was made at the meeting. It is evident that there is no general feeling that the time is ripe, or at any rate propitious, for such a movement.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Royal preferences in literature, probably for reasons easy to guess, are rarely given such open utterance as has been expressed both by His Majesty the King and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales in the case of Mr. Arthur Morrison's novels. It is now fully two years since the King, then Prince of Wales, in his speech at the opening of the new County Council buildings at Shoreditch, made a strongly appreciative reference to 'A Child of the Jago,' the only occasion, it is said, on which His Majesty has taken public notice of the work of a living novelist. On the 8th inst. the library of H.M.S. Ophir was sold by auction at Stevens's rooms, and it was then seen that in the copy of 'Tales of Mean Streets,' which was one of the very volumes of fiction selected to travel round the world with the Prince and Princess of Wales, His Royal Highness had written against the tale 'Lizerunt' the remark 'This is very powerful.'

The King has accepted a copy of the Rev. P. H. Ditchfield's 'English Villages,' and has commanded Sir Dighton Probyn to convey to Mr. Ditchfield an expression of his thanks.

The fourth and last volume of the late Prof. Huxley's 'Scientific Memoirs,' edited by Professors Sir Michael Foster and Ray Lankester, is now published by Messrs. Macmillan. It includes the admirable appreciation of Sir Richard Owen which Prof. Huxley contributed to the Life and Correspondence of Owen.

The second volume of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society's 'Report on the Climates and Baths of Great Britain' is now published by Messrs. Macmillan.

Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, made an interesting journey to Russia last year, and in the May Scribner's he gives his impressions of that great country which is so hard for us to understand. Senator Lodge is not optimistic about the economic future of Russia, taking a somewhat different view from that recently expressed in Scribner's by Mr. Vanderlip and Mr. Norman. He sums it up by saying that the 'truth is that the Russians are a primitive people and at the same time an old people. . . . A primitive people is economically wasteful, and the Russian system is wasteful and inefficient to the last degree.'

For April 25 Messrs. Cassell announce Part 1 of an entirely new work to be issued fortnightly, price 7d. net, entitled 'Britain at Work,' a pictorial description of our national industries, written by popular authors, and beautifully illustrated. With Part 1 will be presented a Rembrandt photogravure of the famous painting by W. L. Wyllie, A.R.A., 'The Birth of a Titan.'

Under the title, 'The Credibility of the Acts of the Apostles,' Messrs. Macmillan issue in one volume the Hulsean Lectures delivered by Dr. F. H. Chase, President of Queen's College, Cambridge, in the year 1900-1. The book is a vindication of the historical accuracy and value of the Acts, based upon minute and patient investigation.

The first of the festivities in connection with the Coronation will take place on Saturday, May 10, at the Criterion Restaurant, when a banquet will be given to the gentlemen of the Colonial and American Press by representative London editors. His Excellency the American Ambassador will be present. The chair will be taken by Sir Douglas Straight, and the other members of the Preliminary Committee are: Mr. Arthur W. A'Beckett, Mr. J. Nicol Dunn, Mr. W. J. Fisher, Major Arthur Griffiths, Mr. Bruce S. Ingram, Mr. Harry L. W. Lawson, Mr. C. Arthur Pearson, Mr. W. D. Ross, Mr. Clement K. Shorter, Mr. J. Alfred Spender, and Mr. Joseph Watson. All communications should be addressed to the Honorary Secretary, Mr. Austin Brereton, 13 York Chambers, Adelphi, W.C.

Messrs. Cassell announce a new popular work on butterflies and moths, to be published in fortnightly parts, price 7d. net, entitled 'The Butterflies and Moths of Europe,' by W. F. Kirby, F.L.S., F.E.S., with numerous coloured plates expressly prepared for the work. Part 1 ready April 25.

The series of little books, under the inclusive title of 'Nights at the Opera,' by Wakeling Dry, the music critic of the Daily Express and (in London) of the Scotsman, which will be published by the De La More Press, 298 Regent Street, will be found interesting and useful to the music lover during the forthcoming opera season, which opens at Covent Garden on May 8. Each book aims at reproducing, in an attractive form, an analytical programme, and a brief description of the particular opera to which it is devoted; in short, a 'history in little,' which no lovers of the opera should fail to possess. The first two books, which will be ready almost immediately, are the 'Lohengrin' and 'Tannhäuser' of Wagner.

Messrs. Methuen's next novel will be a story of ranch men and ranch life in North Mexico. The book is entitled 'With Hoops of Steel,' and the author, Miss Florence Kelly, is intimately acquainted with the wild life which she describes. Her book is full of exciting incident.

'Sporting Pictures' is the title of an important new Art publication which Messrs. Cassell & Company will publish in parts. Number 1 is to be ready on April 23. The coloured plates will be produced by the same process as 'The Nation's Pictures,' which is so successful, only they are to be better and larger. When complete, the new work will form a gallery of coloured sporting prints 'superior to anything produced in this country since the days of Alken and Herring.' The price is to be 1s. net.

Mr. Philip Wellby has been elected a member of the Publishers' Association.

'Royal Academy Pictures, 1902,' is to be distinguished by fresh features of popularity. It will contain two pictures in colour, and will be issued in four parts in place of five as hitherto, while additional pages will be given in each part. Part 1 ready early in May. To be completed in 4 parts, price 1s. each net.

'Christ the Indweller,' by the Rev. J. T. Jacob, Vicar of Tor, is an attempt to trace the practical training of the doctrine of the Inward Christ in common life, first generally, then in more particular reference to certain duties and virtues.

Owing to the demand for copies of the Play-Pictorial, a new edition is now in the press, and will be ready for the trade on April 19.

A novel by A. Danziger, entitled 'A Man, a Woman, and a Million,' dealing with social and commercial life in Poland will be published almost immediately by Messrs. Sands & Co.

Henry van Dyke was the poet of the Victor Hugo celebration at Columbia, and his poem is to be published entire in the May Scribner's.

The books of Mr. Joseph Hocking, author of 'The Scarlet Woman,' 'The Purple Robe,' &c., have been put by the Vatican on the Index Expurgatorius.

Before the close of the month Mr. Herbert Spencer proposes to issue, through Messrs. Williams & Norgate, a new volume entitled 'Facts and Comments.'

'Rooted in Dishonour' is the title of a new novel by Mr. Harold Tremayne which Messrs. Treherne will publish.

At a meeting of the Society of Public Librarians, held at the Bishopsgate Institute on Wednesday evening, April 9, Mr. C. W. F. Goss, the Librarian, read a paper on 'Descriptive Cataloguing,' based on the work recently published by the Governors of the Bishopsgate Foundation. An interesting discussion followed, lasting upwards of an hour.

At Messrs. Sotheby's sale on April 9 a copy of Holinshed's 'Chronicles of England, Scotland, and Ireland, 1577,' sold for £60.

THE HISTORY OF WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY.

A brief chronology of the various editions of Webster's Dictionary may be of interest to our readers. The first edition, called 'American Dictionary of the English Language,' was published by Noah Webster in 1828. After his death, in 1843, George and Charles Merriam, the predecessors of the present proprietors, purchased the copyright, plates, and unsold copies from the estate.

Since then—during a period of nearly sixty years—the house has devoted its energies and capital almost exclusively, and with marked success, to the making and publication of dictionaries of the English language. No outlay has been spared to attain the highest excellence, and the result is that Webster's in its latest revision is universally accepted as authority wherever the English language is used. Messrs. George Bell & Sons took over the publication of the English edition in 1861.

The first Webster's 'Unabridged'—largely a condensation into one volume of Dr. Webster's edition of 1828—was produced in 1847 under the editorship of Prof. Chauncey A. Goodrich, who died in 1860. The next revision was that of 1864, under the supervision of Dr. Noah Porter, with whom were associated many leading scholars. In 1879 and 1884 various supplements were added to this work.

In 1890 the famous 'International' was completed after ten years of arduous labour by a large corps of competent scholars under the leadership of Dr. Noah Porter, of Yale University. It immediately met with a flattering reception. A Supplement of 25,000 New Words, Phrases, and Definitions, edited by W. T. Harris, Ph.D., LL.D., has now been added, bringing it fully abreast of the twentieth century. You will make no mistake if you buy it. It will last you a lifetime.

CHANCELLORSHIP OF THE UNIVERSITY OF WALES.

INSTALLATION OF HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Bangor and Carnarvon, Friday, May 9, 1902.

The arrangements in connection with this important and interesting function are now well advanced. The installation takes place on Friday, May 9, within the walls of the historic castle of Carnarvon, and the subsequent luncheon at Bangor. About three thousand guests are expected at the former and about seven hundred at the latter. Mr. W. A. Foster, of Messrs. Jarvis & Foster, Publishers, Bangor, is the Honorary Secretary.

ASSOCIATED BOOKSELLERS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

The annual meeting of this Association was held on Friday of last week at Stationers' Hall. Mr. Henry W. Keay, the Chairman, presided, and those present included Messrs. Hanson, F. Denny, Truslove (London), Calder Turner (London), J. Macniven (Edinburgh), G. B. Bowes (Cambridge), B. H. Blackwell (Oxford), Hiscoke (Richmond), Martin (Clapham), Bacon (Streatham), Farmer (Kensington), Connor (Finchley), E. W. Coates (Huddersfield), Hughes and Sherratt (Manchester), Turner (Reading), &c.

In the absence, through indisposition, of Mr. Edwin Pearce, the Hon. Sec., the secretarial duties were performed by Mr. Hanson, who, after reading the minutes of the last meeting, submitted the

REPORT FOR THE YEAR ENDING DECEMBER 31, 1901

The Council, in presenting their Annual Report to the members of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland, have pleasure in congratulating them upon the successful efforts that have been made during the past year in maintaining and developing the net system inaugurated two years ago.

The Council is also pleased to report that with few exceptions no difficulty has arisen in securing the net prices from the public, and now that the system is becoming better known, it will, they think, still further tend, not only to benefit the trade at large, but also to cement the good feeling already existing between Publishers and Booksellers. It is a source of much gratification that so few cases of discounting net books have come to their notice—every case that has been reported has had very careful consideration, and, by the assistance of the Publishers' Association, energetic steps taken which resulted in the discontinuance of such discounting.

Herewith is forwarded a synopsis of books published during the last year, which shows the growth of the net system. For this synopsis, the Council are indebted to Mr. Robert Bowes, of Cambridge.

The early part of the past year was clouded by the lamented death of Queen Victoria, and your Council were not wanting in loyalty, and dutifully conveyed to the King, on behalf of the bookselling trade, an expression of sympathy on the death of the Queen, and congratulation on His Majesty's accession to the throne.

By the courtesy of the Master and Wardens of the Stationers' Company, the monthly meetings of your Council have been held in the historic buildings at Stationers' Hall, and your Council wish to place on record their hearty thanks for the accommodation so courteously granted.

Your Council have pleasure in reporting that by prompt action they succeeded in getting a very material change in the Stationery Office Contract, which in the early part of the year was open for tender, for a period of ten years. Net books were scheduled at a discount, but by the combined action of your Council with the Publishers' Association this was altered and net books were scheduled at net published prices.

A very successful dinner of the Publishers' and Booksellers' Associations was held in May, and it is hoped that similar reunions may be held periodically, so as to give publishers and booksellers the opportunity of meeting together in a cordial manner.

Your Council have repeatedly approached Messrs. Whitaker & Sons upon the question of making their Almanack a net book, and it is with much pleasure the Council record the success of their efforts, and that, through the courtesy of the Publishers, this has become an accomplished fact. The full benefit of this important change was reaped over the last issue. Your Council are glad to report that they have had no intimation of any attempt to sell the book below the published price. This warrants the Council in still further impressing upon the trade generally the necessity of combination. A few years ago this result would not have been possible, but by the joint action of Publishers and Booksellers what seemed an insuperable difficulty has been overcome.

Your Council are ever on the alert to take action for the benefit of the trade. Many matters have received their careful consideration during the past year, and by their action they have been able to solve many difficulties, and in several instances improved terms have resulted from their action.

New branches have been formed in Newcastle-on-Tyne and in Belfast, and both are carefully watching the trade's interest. More of these branches are wanted, especially in the Midlands, and it is hoped that now some tangible results have ensued from the work of the existing societies the members of the trade in these still unrepresented districts will be induced to co-operate. The Council will readily give every assistance in their power in the formation of such local Associations.

Your Council are pleased to hear that the distribution to the various branches of the Minutes of their meetings has been much appreciated, and would suggest that members should meet at least once a quarter and have the said Minutes read to them, so that they may become acquainted with the work that is being done for the benefit of the whole bookselling trade.

The following members of the Council retire by rotation, and are eligible for re-election: Messrs. Blackwell, Farmer, Hiscoke, Jackson, and MacLehose.

Subscriptions for the current year are now due, and the Council in announcing this hope that a hearty and generous response will promptly be made from the trade generally, in recognition of its appreciation of the useful and successful work the Association has accomplished and is accomplishing for them.

Subscriptions and Donations should be forwarded to the Hon. Secretary, Edwin Pearce, 1 Bathurst Street, Hyde Park Gardens, London, W., or to either of the Hon. Secs. of the various branches.

Signed on behalf of the Council,
HENRY W. KEAY, Chairman.
EDWIN PEARCE, Hon. Secretary.

The Chairman, in proposing the adoption of the report and accounts, said he was pleased to be able to congratulate the members upon the satisfactory financial position of the Association. Whereas at the end of 1900 they only had a balance in hand of £4, last year they had the respectable sum of £22 2s. 2d. He trusted that the fact of their having a fairly good balance in hand would not induce booksellers to cease to subscribe liberally towards the funds, because there were various expenses which arose from time to time which would soon run away with their balance. At the same time they could not but feel that it was a source of great satisfaction that their funds were in such a healthy state. (Hear, hear.) Before he touched upon one or two matters mentioned in the report he would like to re-echo what he said at the last annual meeting—viz. that their relationship with the Publishers' Association continued to be of the same friendly and agreeable nature as it had been ever since the Association was formed. They were working hand in hand with the sole endeavour to do their best for the bookselling trade, and without the co-operation of the publishers all their efforts would be of no avail. Knowing they had the co-operation of the publishers, their friendly sympathy and their help, they had been able to preserve the net book agreement during the year with scarcely any exceptions, and the net book agreement was as intact as when it was first entered into. With regard to the report, there were one or two paragraphs in it to which he would like to draw their attention. With the report was forwarded a synopsis of books published during the past year, which showed the growth of the net system, and they owed a deep debt of gratitude to Mr. Robert Bowes for compiling that synopsis, which he (the chairman) believed would be most valuable to them. (Hear, hear.) It put clearly before the trade of the country what had been done with regard to net books during the year. It showed how very much the net book system was increasing, and the work that Mr. Bowes must have had in getting out the synopsis could hardly be imagined except by those who had gone into matters of the kind for themselves. Mr. Bowes regretted, and he (Mr. Keay) regretted, that in one or two cases the figures given of the net books that had been published were not quite accurate. Mr. Bowes compiled his figures from the weekly announcements in the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, and they were always under the impression that any book published during the week would appear either in that or in the Bookseller, and that they would be perfectly accurate if they took that as the basis of their work. But it would appear that from time to time books were published which did not appear in either of the trade journals, and therefore in order to be quite accurate in the future they would possibly have to send out advance proofs of the list to publishers before they issued it. It was the earnest wish of the Association that whatever it issued should be as accurate as it was possible to be, and they could only express their regret that in some cases there had been some slight errors, although in the main the figures were accurate. They found from the synopsis that there were 5,675 books published which were called subject books, and 2,322 net books. If they went to the value they would find that £1,211. 8s. 7d. represented the subject books and £983. 3s. 4d. the net books, so that, although the numbers were not nearly so many as far as net books were concerned, yet the amount came very close indeed, and he thought it must be a matter of great gratification to them as booksellers to feel that the net book system was growing. It had been encouraged by nearly every publisher, he was glad to say, and although there were some who had not yet seen their way to publish net books, they hoped they would soon fall into line, and it was a great gratification to them to feel that the net system was increasing in volume as month by month rolled on. Another gratifying paragraph in the report was that which announced the formation of new branches during the year in Newcastle-on-Tyne and Belfast. They very much wanted a branch in the Midlands. If they could only get one good man in the Midlands who would throw in his lot with them and endeavour to start a branch he believed the trade would very soon follow. He did hope that before they met next year they would have someone come forward and establish a branch in the Midlands, where he felt sure it would be as successful as any of their other branches in the country. Although they were not very large in numbers, and although their balance sheet did not show any very large sum, he would like those present to remember that it did not by any means give them the numbers connected with the Association nor the amount of money they received. Each Association had its distinct membership and its own financial arrangements. Each one worked its own centre and sent a contribution to the Associated Booksellers. He was glad to be able to tell them that their membership was larger than it had ever been before, and he trusted that soon they would not have a single bookseller in the United Kingdom who was not represented on the Association. There were some booksellers who did not appear to know anything of the Association, for whenever they had a complaint to make they sent it direct to the publishers, with the result that the publishers always sent it to him for the Association to deal with. If the booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland had any complaints to make, and if they only subscribed to the Association, they could make their complaints through the Association without any delay. They would notice that Messrs. Blackwell, Farmer, Hiscoke, Jackson, and MacLehose retired from the council this year. They had all worked well in the past, and if he might offer a bit of advice to the meeting it would be that they should re-elect those gentlemen, as he believed in keeping men who were in touch with the work. At the same time if there were any gentlemen present who wished to propose other names they were at perfect liberty to do so. There was one question which he had thought of bringing forward that afternoon—the question raised by the Library Association; but as he found that so far up to the present the resolutions embodied in the paper had not been acted upon, and as he was most anxious not to have anything in print which was likely to harm them in any shape or form, he would refrain from commenting on the paper, although it bristled with points he would like to touch upon. Under the circumstances, however, he thought it would not be wise for them to discuss that question now; but if the resolution proposed were carried out, then it would be a matter that would be dealt with by the Council, and they would let the booksellers of England know how they had dealt with it through the ordinary channels.

Mr. Connor, in seconding the resolution, said that while he must congratulate the Council upon the financial position of the Association, he hoped members would not take that to mean that they need not send up their contributions. The probability was that they would have troubles in the future—that, after enjoying calm for awhile, they would get into rough waters, and then it would probably be necessary for them to fight again, which would entail expense.

Mr. Calder Turner, the treasurer, said he was very pleased to be able to say that so far the fact of their having a balance on the right side had had no adverse influence on their subscriptions. The subscriptions had come in earlier and better than usual, and in most cases they were accompanied by most agreeable letters of thanks, expressing appreciation of the services which were rendered to the bookselling trade by the Association. Up to the present he had received more money than he had at the corresponding date last year, and there seemed to be a very general disposition throughout the United Kingdom indicating that booksellers felt they were doing well in supporting that Society.

The report was then adopted.

Mr. Bowes proposed the re-election of the retiring members of the Council, and remarked that all the gentlemen concerned had served them well in the past, and they could not do better than ask them to continue their services.

Mr. F. Denny seconded the proposition.

Mr. Farmer said he thought it would be well if they were to elect someone from Manchester on the Council, and he would be very pleased to retire in order that that might be done.

The Chairman replied that he agreed with Mr. Farmer that it would be desirable to have a Manchester representative, but it was not necessary for Mr. Farmer to retire in order that that might be done. They had Mr. Hughes with them, and he would make an excellent member of the Council.

Mr. Farmer said it would give him much pleasure to move the addition of Mr. Hughes as a member of the Council.

Mr. Coates seconded the nomination, and said that Mr. Hughes was Chairman of the Northern Branch of the Associated Booksellers. He had large personal dealings with the publishers, and knew all the ins and outs of the trade, and he felt sure he would be a very great acquisition to the Council.

The retiring members of the Council were then re-elected, with the addition of Mr. Hughes.

Mr. Blackwell, in proposing the re-election of Mr. Calder Turner as treasurer and Mr. Edwin Pearce as hon. secretary, said he hoped it would go forth from the meeting that they were deeply grieved at the absence of Mr. Pearce, and wished him a speedy and thorough restoration to health. Both Mr. Turner and Mr. Pearce had deserved well of the whole of the booksellers of the United Kingdom for their work in connection with the Association, and in their name he offered them his best thanks. The goal, the object in view, was the re-establishment of the old and honourable business of bookselling on such a basis that a man could live by it.

Mr. Bacon seconded the motion, and endorsed what Mr. Blackwell had said respecting the debt of gratitude the Association owed to Mr. Turner and Mr. Pearce, and said he hoped Mr. Pearce would understand how highly they appreciated what he had done for them, and what a thorough good Secretary he was.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Calder Turner, in thanking the meeting for his re-election, said he would like to express the great grief he felt at the absence of his friend Mr. Pearce, who, he believed, had never before missed one of those gatherings. Regarding himself, it was a pleasure to do what little he could for the Association. Looking back, he noted that that was the twelfth anniversary of his treasurership. He did not know that he had ever had to report a deficiency, although on one occasion they closed the year with a balance in hand of just 3s. 8d.

On the motion of Mr. Jackson, seconded by Mr. Hiscoke, a vote of thanks was passed to the Master and Wardens of the Stationers' Company for the use of the Hall, and a similar compliment having been paid the Chairman for presiding, the proceedings terminated.

ASSOCIATED BOOKSELLERS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND: EASTERN BRANCH.

The Third Annual Meeting of the Eastern Branch of this Association was held at the Maid's Head Hotel, Norwich, on Thursday, April 10. There were present Mr. Robert Bowes, of Cambridge, President; Mr. John Leach, of Wisbech, Treasurer; Messrs. Dixon, Diver, Harry Johnson, and Tomlin, Cambridge; Mr. W. E. Harrison, Ipswich; Messrs. A. H. Goose, T. H. C. Jarrold, W. Jarrold, and Kettlewell, Norwich; and Mr. H. W. Keay, Eastbourne, Chairman of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland.

The members having lunched together, Mr. Bowes read the report for the year 1901. It was there pointed out that while little had occurred during the year of a purely local character, there had been many important questions brought before the Council in London, where the Eastern Branch was represented. Mr. John Leach, Treasurer, then presented his statement, showing a membership of 32, and a balance in hand. The adoption of the report and balance sheet was proposed by Mr. Jarrold, seconded by Mr. Goose, and carried. Both speakers warmly welcomed the Association to Norwich. Mr. Keay gave a short summary of the work of the Central Association for the past year, referring especially to the synopsis of net books issued with the annual report, and the evidence it gave of the growth in the number of books so issued. He concluded by referring to the ever-ready help which he found the officials of the Publishers' Association were ready to extend to the Booksellers' Association.

The following were elected officers for the year: President, Mr. R. Bowes; Treasurer, Mr. John Leach; Secretary, Mr. G. H. Tyn-dall; Executive Committee, Messrs. Driver, Groom, Harrison, F. R. Hockliffe, Harry Johnson, A. Earnshaw Smith, and Tomlin.

A NEW ROMANCE BY MARIE CORELLI.

Messrs. Methuen & Co. will publish during the summer a new romance by Miss Marie Corelli, the manuscript of which will be in their possession next month. The story is said to be a singularly powerful and striking one, dealing with a subject which has never before been treated in fiction, and intimately touching on certain topics which have been for some time uppermost in the minds of many people. The book will be only very slightly less in length to 'The Master Christian.' The title is at present withheld.

CHARGE OF OBTAINING BOOKS.

A tall, well-dressed man, known as Hubert Middleton D'Este, was charged before Mr. Marsham, at Bow Street, with obtaining books by false pretences. The prisoner was arrested last week, when it was stated that he had obtained valuable books from Mr. B. T. Batsford, 94 High Holborn, by pretending that he wanted to review them in the columns of the Admiralty and Horse Guards Gazette.

Another case was now gone into.—The prosecutor stated that on the 22nd ult. the prisoner went to his shop and asked for the loan of 'Ford's Descriptive Flower Studies,' which he said he wanted to review. The prisoner said his wife was a countess, and witness was so impressed that he directed an assistant to lend the book to the prisoner.—A pawnbroker's assistant stated that the prisoner pawned the book for 8s. the same day he got it, and a detective said that he found that the Admiralty and Horse Guards Gazette had not been in existence for twelve months.

The prisoner said he had never denied that it was non-existent. Before it died he was part proprietor of it, and for a short time had brought it out in monthly parts.

The prosecutor said he did not wish to press the charge. He understood that the prisoner's wife, instead of being a countess, had to be at the washtub from morning till night to support her children.

Detective-sergeant Callaghan said she told him she washed from eight till eight, and then commenced needlework to earn a little more.

The prisoner said that he was of opinion that he could deal with the books as he liked so long as he reviewed them.

He was committed for trial, Mr. Marsham offering to accept two sureties in £20 each.—Daily Chronicle, April 16.

WHAT IS GERMANY?

A population numbering 56,000,000, firmly united into a great national State; a system of internal communication the second largest in the world; a foreign commerce inferior only to that of England and the United States, which has reached out to the uttermost parts of the world in its conquest of markets, and has won its place in the face of long-standing commercial connections; a system of industry which has utilised to the full every resource the nation possessed, which has brought the waste places under cultivation, and by careful methods of scientific agriculture has developed the yield of the soil more than threefold, creating de novo the beet sugar industry; a system which has quadrupled the production of coal and tripled the production of iron; which has developed the greatest chemical trade, the second largest electrical industries, the third textile, iron, and steel industries, and the second shipping system of the whole world; which has tripled the city population, reduced a large and threatening emigration to insignificant proportions, raised wages, increased value of land, and tripled the revenues of the State; a strong, self-reliant, progressive, prosperous nation—such is modern Germany, the result of thirty years of nation building. Never before in the industrial history of the world, unless we accept the victory of the same race in the Low Countries over the waves and tides of the German Ocean, has such success been achieved against such heavy odds.—Scribner's Magazine.

THE AUTHORS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

The Authors' Club of Philadelphia was formally organised February 21, by J. Bertram Lippincott, Francis Howard Williams, Harrison S. Morris, William Jasper Nicholls, Cyrus Townsend Brady, John Luther Long, S. Decatur Smith, Jun., Frederick W. Unger, and Francis Churchill Williams, at a meeting in the University Club. Mr. Lippincott was chairman of the meeting. Previous meetings had permitted of a formulation of plans, &c., so that the due process of organisation was carried out smoothly. Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, although not present at the meeting, was unanimously elected president of the new club. Mr. Nicholls was made treasurer, and Francis Churchill Williams, secretary.

The following is a copy of the resolutions unanimously adopted with regard to eligibility of members:

'Any man over twenty-one years of age who is the author of one or more copyrighted books within the domain of poetry, the drama, fiction, history, science, or art (not including text-books or professional treatises in medicine or jurisprudence); or who shall be an accepted contributor of stories, articles, or poems to any periodical of literature of established reputation; or who shall be the editor or publisher of the same; or who shall be the publisher of literary works of such character as confer eligibility upon their author. Non-resident membership to be confined to those persons who shall possess the qualifications of eligibility stated above, and who shall reside at a distance of twenty-five miles or more from the limits of Philadelphia.'—The Publishers' Weekly.

CRESTS, MEDALS, AND RIBBONS OF THE BRITISH ARMY.

Messrs. Gale & Polden, of London and Aldershot, have brought out in most attractive form coloured sheets folded in wrappers—of 'The Official Crests of the British Army now in Daily Use,' and the 'Official Medals and Ribbons of the British Army, 1800 to the present day,' each at 2s. 6d. net. Booksellers would find a sale for these among all who collect for crest and scrap albums, as well as for those who will like to possess such very interesting memorials of the glorious deeds of the British Army. The same firm send a forty-page list of their new and recent military publications, many of which we have already noticed. Messrs. Gale & Polden are doing excellent national work in the production of so many valuable books for and about our soldiers.

Letters to the Editor

THE PROPOSED BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT SCHEME.

SIR,—One can forgive the thinly-veiled sarcasm more or less underlying Mr. Grierson's letter for the yeoman service it will do the proposed scheme by its trenchant criticism, revealing, as it does, the defects of its merits, and presenting in terse yet cynical language its negative points; which is just what is wanted to provoke attention, and a desire to know what it is all about.

I heartily agree with him that the title 'Benevolent' is misleading, and must be discarded for the word 'Provident'; and 'the man in the street' must be made to clearly understand that if the idea, when matured, is floated, and he becomes a subscriber, he will be entitled to claim certain clearly-defined advantages, should he unfortunately need them, free from any mental freaks of a Benevolent Committee. On no other basis will the suggestion commend itself for adoption.

There are two reasons why the Booksellers' Provident Institution has not caught on more largely after all these years of its existence; one is the limited area within which its usefulness is restricted, the other is that when a subscriber is driven by force of circumstances to apply for assistance it is given on the benevolent principle, with uncertain results to the applicant.

When Mr. Shaylor suggested that 'provincial institutions might be (?) formed, and eventually affiliated with the Booksellers' Provident Institution,' did he make this suggestion with the authority of a Director of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, or only on his own individuality?

During the past fifty years the Booksellers' Provident Institution has observed a strict conservatism of its original rules. Is there any hope that it will now show a disposition to enlarge its sphere of usefulness, and open its doors to provincial assistants, and to amend its distributive powers on a more defined principle?

Mr. Grierson says: 'Why not approach the Booksellers' Provident Institution with a scheme?' &c. To whom is this query addressed? It is hardly a 'businesslike question' when he knows there is no authoritative respondent existent to do so. 'First catch your hare,' &c.

Let me respectfully remind your worthy correspondent that, considering the idea is as yet only in the most undefined embryonic stage—without form, it is very premature to talk of the existence of a 'stolid indifference' to a proposal which has not yet reached the eyes or the ears of one-fourth of those for whose benefit it has been conceived. Where it has been made known, a hope is generally expressed that it may be consummated. I speak from experience—not theoretically.

To mature the scheme and mould it into a workable shape demands the help of clear headed critical men, such as Mr. Grierson has shown himself.

Will he and Mr. Shaylor join with Mr. Brabrook and, say, two other practical 'working men,' and form themselves into a committee of five to thresh out the proposal, which could be done by each member formulating his own ideas on paper and passing the same round to each member of the committee on the same principle as was adopted on a larger scale with the last revision of the Bible? A meeting at this early stage is not a sine qua non, but could be deferred to a time when a general consensus of opinion had been crystallised, and was ready to lay before the Directorate of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, with a view to affiliation, or to go forth to the whole of the assistants of the United Kingdom on its own merits.

Given a workable scheme, and I believe it would receive the support of the publishers and employers.

I ask once again, in conclusion, will Mr. Grierson and Mr. Shaylor be kind enough to intimate, either through your columns or direct to Mr. Brabrook, 12 Battlefield Gardens, Langside, Glasgow, their willingness to help in the manner proposed, or in any way more practical that may suggest itself?

Yours truly,

HENRY M. CATER.

WHY NOT APOTHECARY INSTEAD OF BOOKSELLER?

SIR,—In the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR of April 12 a leader headed 'Was it a Scotch Joke?' mentions Sir John Clark's objection to a man who sells books being styled a bookseller, and also to the worthy Baronet's suggestion that bookshops should be called Literary Emporiums. But we read that in Italy, or at least in Florence, during the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, apothecaries also sold books, and that men of learning and artists were affiliated to their guild. For instance, in the year 1295 Dante was enrolled in the Guild of Physicians and Apothecaries. That apothecaries did actually sell books is shown by the statement of Boccaccio,* 'that the author of the "Divina Commedia" was so pre-occupied with study that taking up a book in an apothecary's shop one day, he was totally unconscious of a tournament, with its shouts and dancing, taking place in the street.' Now, Macaulay's schoolboy would know that apothecary is derived from the Greek word apothēke, a storehouse. Why not, therefore, call a bookshop an Apotheke (the German for a chemist's shop, by the way), which is more concise and elegant than Literary Emporium? Unfortunately, we must then call a bookseller an apothecary, which is a reductio ad absurdum. But so long as the vendor of books gets a living wage by the sale of his wares, he may probably be indifferent as to his style and title.

Your obedient servant,

A SHELVED BOOKSELLER.

DATES ON TITLE-PAGES.

SIR,—I hope you will continue to keep the question of dates on title-pages before the mind of the publishers. You, as also the President of the Publishers' Association, seem to think that post-dating is the only sin. It is, no doubt, the most common form of false dating, so far as independent works are concerned, and especially guide-books, text-books, and the like. By the way, I know a text-book published in June 1899, but dated 1900. On the other hand, many scientific works, especially in serials, or in the publications of learned societies, are pre-dated. Whatever may be the reason for this, one of the consequences is that an author can claim priority for his work over that of another author who has, spontaneously or under compulsion, adhered to the truth.

But, setting aside the very natural desire of human beings to cheat their fellows, permit me to ask you, as authorities on the subject, whether there is any cause or impediment why the true year and month of publication should not be placed on the title-page? Is there any reason, except the fooling of the purchaser, why the truth should be hidden 'on the back of the title-page,' or 'somewhere' (in a cryptogram, for instance)?

As an outsider, I seek for more light on those difficulties which you hint at as below the surface. I use your term 'outsider' in reference to what are euphemistically known as trade practices; but so far as experience goes, I may say that I have been an editor off and on for twenty-one years; a book-buyer for a much longer period, and for over ten years a professional.

ROYAL LITERARY FUND.

ANNIVERSARY DINNER.

SIR,—Viscount Goschen having kindly consented to take the chair at the 112th Anniversary Dinner of this Fund, at the Whitehall Rooms, Hôtel Métropole, W.C., on Friday, May 2, at 7 for 7.30 P.M. precisely, the Anniversary Committee venture to hope that subscribers will support the Chairman by their presence at the Dinner.

Those subscribers wishing to be present are requested to be so good as to inform the Secretary, in writing, of their intention to be present not later than the first post of the 28th inst.

The price of dinner tickets is one guinea each; cheques, payable to the 'Royal Literary Fund,' should be sent with the application for Tickets. Donations, to be added to the Chairman's list, are invited from those who cannot attend the dinner.

I remain, yours faithfully,

A. LLEWELYN ROBERTS,

Secretary.

VISIT OF THE KING TO PENZANCE.

DEAR SIR,—We saw the King on Wednesday afternoon. He was driven in Lord St. Levan's carriage from Marazion to Penzance, and along the harbour, quay, and Esplanade and Alexandra Road into Alverton, and back to Marazion through the town. His Majesty looked remarkably well, and younger and not so stout as he appears in some recent photos.

He was well and enthusiastically received, barring three incidents. One rough fellow tried to seize his arm, and was immediately floored with a stick by a detective who accompanied the carriage in a dogcart. For there was no escort save that given by a few bicyclists who rode in front of the landau. Another fellow tried to seize the King's hand, but was repulsed by the Portuguese Minister; and a street arab threw a dirty handkerchief into the carriage. These incidents were unfortunate. In other respects the visit was most satisfactory. The King seemed pleased, and the people were delighted. The weather was cold, but bright and sunny.

Yours faithfully,

April 17.

PEN. ZANCE.

NOT IN STOCK.

SIR,—There's a pleasant little town in South Africa where the buyers of books know little about them, but the booksellers even less. Hearing of Mr. Dooley's fame, I went to a book store and asked, 'Have you "Mr. Dooley on Peace and War"?' 'No,' was the reply, 'but we have "Three Men in a Boat."'
Turning pensively away I proceeded to the only other book store, and again but with less enthusiasm asked, 'Have you "Mr. Dooley on Peace and War"?' 'No,' again came the cheerful reply, 'but we have Tolstoy's "War and Peace."'
This is a quite true story.

Yours &c.

THE CASUAL COLONIAL.

MUSHROOMS AND LITERATURE.

'Prestonfield, Sept. 4, 1762.

'I promise you a hearty welcome, to our genial roof, to your quiet bed-chamber, and your long room, to your little Library, which happily has, John Major's history of Britain, the book you want, and I think I may promise you welcome (from these showers) to a profusion of new verdure, which I see rising instantaneously, and I foresee will paint the amenity (which you lik'd so much in my place), with beautiful various tints, among the chequer'd shade of my fields, when the fall of the leaf next October approaches. I expect, after the first Lightning, a deluge of fine mushrooms from my sheep walks and lands; this I have learned from observation, since I saw you; and I happily found it confirmed, when I was reading the fourth Book of Plutarch's Symposiasts, to which I refer you, as a very singular and curious passage in antiquity about Lightning. This wonderful vegetable raised in a night, (I mean those of the best kind), by the power of lightning penetrating into the dry and warm surface of the earth, where pasture is; when a drizzling show'r, which we know to be the conductor of this fire, suddenly operates upon the seed or spawn of the mushroom; really prepares for you, every morning a dish of (pardon me!) Celestial food! ambrosia, or whatever you please to call it.

'I am raving about this! for nothing agrees so well with myself, (and I can recommend it to all my friends, who are marching towards, or have past their climacteric), as a small dish of these every morning before tea, prepared by my man James, toasting them well before the fire, and basting them with a little new-churn'd butter, and dashing them with some pepper and salt, very finely pounded. The nerves of the whole man feel the immediate benefit of this ætherial dish, if taken fasting before tea, and greatly improves the relish of fine tea, and wonderfully prevents the effect of shakings and palpitations, which many people find from a large use of that admirable liquid.'—Sir Alexr. Dick to Joseph Spence.

A 1632 EDITION OF SHAKESPEARE FOR SALE.

Messrs. Puttick & Simpson will include the following interesting item in their sale early in May: 'Mr. William Shakespeare's Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies. Published according to the True Originall Copies. The Second Impression, calf. Printed by Tho. Cotes for John Smethwicke, 1632.' A complete and genuine copy, measuring 12½ x 8½, of this excessively rare edition, an example of which sold last month for £690. The defects in the present instance are of the slightest description, comprising faint staining, a repair to a small portion of the plain margin of A1, and the strengthening of the last leaf. The copy is in old calf, and in every respect desirable. The only others known appear to be those in the Lenox Library and the one referred to above.

TRADE CHANGES &c.

Mr. David Cadney, of 139 Seven Sisters Road, is removing to 27 Regent Street, Cambridge, where he will add new bookselling to his secondhand business.

Mr. H. Glaisher, new and secondhand bookseller, has removed to temporary premises at 32 St. Martin's Lane, W.C., his premises at 95 Strand having been acquired for the Savoy Hotel extension.

'POEMS' about the soldier-boy so far away, who weeps over the hard tack and sees visions of the folks at home, are now pouring in from the States. The chances are that the boys foraged a better dinner, or got it from the commissary, than they would have had at home. Maybe the particular 'weeper' in mind had won all the cash in his mess before midnight on Christmas Day. The boys in the field probably succeeded in forgetting that it was Christmas. The soldier is all right in any climate. He is resourceful and will get there, without being embalmed in so-called poetry. Manila American.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Adam and Charles Black.—'Central and South America, with the West Indies,' selected by F. D. Herbertson, B.A., and edited by A. J. Herbertson, Ph.D. This little work in Messrs. Black's series of 'Descriptive Geographies from Original Sources' is distinguished by an excellent discretion in the matter of selection—a task which must have presented, as we can well understand, great difficulties. It is not alone merit in such cases that has to be consulted, but length, importance, and a variety of other considerations. That Mr. Herbertson should have accomplished his task with such success is infinitely to his credit, and the volume, we are sure, will prove extremely valuable in the teaching of geography. Among the well-known authors laid under contribution are Charles Darwin, J. A. Froude, Charles Kingsley, Sir Clements Markham, Lady Brassey, Anthony Trollope, Dr. A. R. Wallace, W. H. Bates, E. F. Knight, and others, while the book is well illustrated.

From Messrs. Blackie & Son, Ltd.—'Tales in English Verse,' with an Introduction by C. H. Herford. The Introduction contributed by the Professor of English Literature in Owens College, Manchester, to this representative collection of English verse tales contains in brief compass a store of information concerning the 'Tale in Verse,' drawn not only from our own but also from other literatures, ancient as well as modern. A careful perusal of it will enable the reader to appreciate at their true value the tales which follow. These include judiciously selected examples of Chaucer, Shakespeare, Dryden, Crabbe, Wordsworth, Keats, and William Morris, and cover a period of five centuries. This volume forms one of the series, 'Warwick Library of English Literature,' of which Professor Herford is general editor, and the production of which is alike creditable to editor and publishers.

From Messrs. William Blackwood & Sons.—'Thomas Henry Huxley,' by Edward Clodd. Though Mr. Leonard Huxley's 'Life and Letters' of his father will always remain the standard work of reference on one of the greatest scientific thinkers of the nineteenth century, yet Mr. Clodd's volume is very welcome for its compact and admirably sympathetic account of Huxley's life and work. One may not perhaps agree with all that is said in the present volume—for instance, with the remark that few will dispute that Huxley was 'the greatest master of prose of his time'; still, Mr. Clodd has so deep a knowledge of his subject, and approaches it with so much reverence and good taste, that one feels grateful to him for his useful and timely work. Huxley is examined from four different points of view—as man, discoverer, interpreter, controversialist, and constructor. There is a complete chronology and index.

From Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd.—'Peter III., Emperor of Russia,' by R. Nisbet Bain. Peter III. is generally regarded as having been a half-witted, utterly feeble and ineffective monarch: this scholarly volume does much to qualify this popular verdict. As a child, the young Prince was subjected to cruel treatment at the hands of his governor, Von Brummer, who was 'rough, quarrelsome, and choleric.' His favourite method of punishment was to make the child kneel for hours on hard peas, till his little legs were red and swollen. This kind of treatment was not calculated to make the child particularly intelligent, and there is little doubt that his strange, neglected, and loveless childhood had much to do with developing any weakness of character inherent in him. His young manhood is described in detail, and Mr. Nisbet Bain is careful to make his subject stand out from his pages as a living man and not as a mere lay figure demanding attention because of its historic associations. His book is almost a 'human document,' and the appendices (consisting of copies of different narratives of the times) are of considerable value. The book is judiciously illustrated, and the paper and type are excellent.

From the same.—'The Making of a Country Home,' by J. P. Mowbray. This book is both modest in its claims and successful in achieving what it sets out to do. It is a 'record of an ordinary man's experience and success in his efforts to make a home for himself in the country,' with a spice of romance thrown in to make the narrative move along with a swing. Mr. Mowbray writes pleasantly and simply, and many useful hints may be gathered from his delightful and not too technical book.

From Messrs. Digby, Long & Co.—'The Pagan's Cup: a Country Story,' by Fergus Hume. We naturally settled down to the perusal of Mr. Hume's story in the confident expectation that before long we should be confronted by a murder, with its inevitable consequence, the detective. But, much to our surprise, at least a quarter of the book was traversed before even the trail of a mystery was encountered, the interval being spent in the society of a rather commonplace set of country people. Among these is an apparently honest, hospitably disposed American gentleman, who has settled down in Colester village with the intention, as he himself announces, of ending his days in that peaceful retreat. The rural population, however, do not take altogether kindly to Mr. Richard Pratt, and he feels it necessary to do something to encourage their esteem. As a move in this direction he makes a present of a gold communion cup to the village church. It was not originally designed for this purpose, but is well calculated to excite admiration. Out of this the mystery, such as it is, arises, for the cup is stolen, and after Mr. Hume's usual fashion suspicion of the robbery is shifted from one character to another with baffling, but hardly convincing, ingenuity. Now, also, the detective appears. If we did not know from Mr. Hume that he was clever, we certainly should never have suspected it from his methods. After the author has made his characters perform a variety of irrational and unexpected actions, and produced a noble lord's long lost son from a humble plebeian who has the necessary strawberry mark, or rather three-mole indenture, on his left arm, we are permitted to see the true nature of the mystery. His present novel will do nothing to advance or even sustain Mr. Hume's reputation as a novelist.

From Messrs. R. A. Everett & Co.—'On the Grass: a Sporting Comedy,' by 'G. G.' A very slight plot holds together the three and twenty chapters of sporting scenes and incidents of a more or less humorous character that make up the contents of this clever and amusing volume, in which 'G. G.' himself plays a very prominent part. The amatory interest is supplied by Mrs. Leverner, a lovely widow, whose smile is described as being 'more exhilarating than two nips of fine sloe gin on a cold hunting morning,' and her admirers, among whom figure prominently 'G. G.,' Major Barkley, a grass widower, and Dick Marbury, and Miss Constance Acroyd and her cousin the gentleman rider Joey Jasper. Joey's wooing is enri generis and capitally told; especially good is the climax when he wins the double event. Some of G. G.'s own adventures are irresistibly funny. Indeed, the book is full of fun and fresh air, and is an agreeable pick-me-up after a course of novels of the day.

From Messrs. Greening & Co., Ltd.—'A Dead Woman's Wish: a Novel,' By Émile Zola. Translated by Count C. S. De Soissons. This story is an excellent one. It is a sample of Zola at his best; not as a morbid anatomist of depraved human nature, but as a past-master of story telling and an able delineator of good as well as bad men and women. Prior to her marriage, which was an unhappy one, Blanche de Rionne had adopted Daniel Rimbault, the only child of a poor woman who had lost her life by leaping from a window of a burning house with the child in her arms. She had not told her selfish and dissipated husband of her protégé, and the boy himself, who is educated at her expense in the Lycée at Marseilles, is ignorant of the name of his benefactress until, at the opening of the story, Madame de Rionne summons him to her deathbed in order that she may ask him to protect her six-year-old daughter Jeanne from her good-for-nothing father and his sister Madame Tellier, the extravagant and very fast wife of a prosperous Paris tradesman. Daniel swears to comply with the dead woman's wish, a very difficult matter for anyone, but far more difficult for an awkward, shy young man without means or a position. However, he is so fortunate as to make acquaintance with a clever, steady young fellow, George Raymond, who is one of a band of thirty workers on an Encyclopedic Dictionary at salaries varying from eighty to one hundred francs a month. Daniel goes cheerfully to work, and not only makes a position as a scientist, but saves money and is prepared to look after Jeanne de Rionne. The reader will be deeply interested in his trials and struggles to safeguard Jeanne. This is a beautiful story of self-sacrifice.

From Mr. William Heinemann.—'Mr. Dooley's Opinions.' Mr. Dooley is such an established favourite that we may assume his Opinions are likely to be as acceptable to his admirers as his Philosophy, of which there is a fair share in the book before us, and of 'fun galore.' Among the sixteen opinions offered there is sufficient variety to suit all tastes. Those which have amused us the most are 'Life at Newport'; 'The City as a Summer Resort'; 'On the Poet's Fate,' which contains a very laughable appreciation of Mr. Rudyard Kipling's 'pomes'; and 'An Editor's Duties,' which, after giving Mr. Dooley's opinion of the multifarious duties of a able editor and expressing a feeling of envy at the great man's lot, concludes: 'I think I wudden't like to be an iditor after all. I sometimes wondher they don't come out with a line printed acrost th' first page: "We don't know annything about it an' we don't care, an' what business iv ye'ers is it annyhow?"' 'I shud think th' wurruk wud kill thim,' said Mr. Hennessy sadly. 'It does,' said Mr. Dooley. 'Manny gr-reat iditors is dead.' There is, perhaps, just a trifle too much about politics in this clever production, and 'The Supreme Court's Decision' and 'The Truth about Schley' certainly come the day after the Fair.

From Mr. John Long.—'Through the Mists, or Leaves from the Autobiography of a Soul in Paradise,' recorded for the author by Robert James Lees. The extraordinary nature of this story may readily be conceived when we say that it is supposed to embody the experiences of a man who has passed the grave. Mr. Lees was sitting in his study on Christmas Eve when a stranger entered the room, announced that he had just arrived from the other world, and desired that his record might be taken down. Mr. Lees kindly consenting, this volume is the result. We cannot say we have much sympathy with these attempts to foretell a future state. The sublimity of the subject is hampered by the natural grossness of the human conception. It is claimed that the story throws a flood of light upon the Bible teaching, and explains many passages that hitherto were irreconcilable. If readers can find any consolation in this direction, we envy them their credulity. Mr. Lees's book is certainly not without merit. The author possesses a vivid imagination and has considerable powers of description; he treats, too, of some of the problems of the age with insight and discretion; but we are afraid the subject-matter of his volume will be against it attaining any wide circulation.

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—'Tales of my Father,' by A. M. F. The father of the author was at one time aide-de-camp to the Duke of Cumberland, and was in this way brought into intimate relationship with the Royal Family. He has many interesting stories to tell regarding distinguished people, and these are so pleasantly put into shape by the present chronicler as to lose nothing of their attraction. In the first chapter the author relates how her father first met the Princess Victoria, then a little girl, and how the future Queen confiscated a Pomeranian dog that belonged to him; in the second we learn more of the life at Kensington Palace and its royal inmates; the third takes us to St. James's, and we are introduced to the Duke of Wellington, Lord Melbourne, Prince Frederick (son of the Duchess of Cumberland by her first husband), and others; the fourth makes brief reference to King William's death; the fifth describes the accession of Queen Victoria; and so in a particularly chatty manner we are carried through a number of notable events at home and abroad, and are told many anecdotes concerning the distinguished personages that took part in them. Of these we may quote the following as being one of the most characteristic, and as showing far better than any words of ours can do the nature of the volume: 'The Prince (Louis Napoleon) always talked more after dinner—not that he drank, for he was most abstemious, and maintained that Englishmen drank far too much. He spoke freely and openly, and was very fond of trying his fate by cards. One day a fortune-teller came on the scene, but made very bad shots, telling the Prince he would have lots of money and a pretty wife. "Will he ever be a great man?" laughingly asked my father. "Never greater in rank than he is now," was the reply. When the man had left, the Prince said feelingly, "I can never wish to be a greater man; I am Hortense's son, and that is enough greatness for me." 'This,' the author goes on to point out, with a simplicity and worship of royalty particularly noticeable in her pages, 'was very touchingly said, and showed the great love with which that beautiful woman had inspired her son.'

From Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.—'Dictionnaire des Langues Anglaise et Française,' par W. James et A. Molé. Seizième Édition Nouvelle et Moderne, entièrement révisée et considérablement augmentée par Louis Tolhausen et George Payn, avec le concours de E. Heymann. To the present edition of this valuable work many new words that have come into use in the French and English languages within recent years have been added, while the inclusion of colloquial phrases is made as heretofore an especial feature of the book. Altogether the previous edition has been increased by some three hundred pages. The good quality the volume has always possessed of easy reference is largely due to the arrangement of the book and the clear type that has been used. The tables of pronunciation will be found very useful, and in every way the authors have spared no pains to make their book thoroughly reliable and helpful.

From Messrs. W. P. & J. Mackay, Limited, Chatham.—'Professional Papers of the Corps of Royal Engineers,' edited by Captain R. F. Edwards, R.E. Occasional Papers, Vol. XXVII. Several highly important and interesting subjects from a military point of view are considered in this volume, among them being the 'Graphic Solution of Engineering Problems,' by Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. C. Harrison, late R.E.; 'Electric-Pneumatic Signalling,' by Ernest de M. Malan; 'The Work of the Royal Engineers in Natal,' by Brevet-Colonel C. K. Wood, R.E.; 'Recent Developments in Locomotive Practice,' by C. J. Bowers Cooke; and 'Fireproof Construction,' by Edwin O. Sachs. There are several plates and other illustrations to the volume, which is one of great value.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co.—'The French Prisoners,' by Edward Berty. The incidents related in this interesting and brightly written book occurred in the year 1870, when France and Germany were engaged in their historical struggle; but, as the author himself says, it is not a history of the war but of peace in war. The story is centered around the friendship of two German schoolboys, Hans and Fritz Enderlein, with a French prisoner, Lamin by name, and deals with the risks experienced by the boys in their endeavours to see their friend. Many other characters are introduced, chief amongst whom is Jonas Krakel, an intensely patriotic but misguided soapboiler. The evident aim of the author is to institute a repugnance of war, and so in years to come make war as despicable as the duel.

From Messrs. Marshall Brothers.—'A Tale of Red Pekin,' by Constanica Sergeant. This is a story with a distinctly religious colouring. Recent events in China are taken as the foundation for the plot, and the chief characters—a medical missionary and his wife—have many thrilling experiences. They are rescued from their perilous position by a converted Chinaman, one Mr. Li, who, when the party return to this country, accompanies them, and is regarded as a splendid example of a native Christian.

From Mr. John Murray.—'Speeches on Canadian Affairs,' by Henry Howard Molyneux, Fourth Earl of Carnarvon, edited by Sir Robert Herbert, G.C.B. Lord Carnarvon spent both time and energy in working for the constitutional and political development of Canada, and his death was a serious blow to the welfare of the Dominion. At the present time his speeches should command a ready sale, that on 'Colonial Fortification and Defence' being particularly illuminating. Sir Robert Herbert's Introduction is excellent, and the index is as complete as an index well can be.

From Messrs. George Newnes, Limited.—'Swiss Life in Town and Country,' by Alfred Thomas Story, with 25 illustrations. An attractive account of that very attractive country, so small and yet so grand, through which the tourist or excursionist hurries without seeing or learning much about its people or their life. The writer of this book, however, has lived among the Swiss and traversed their land in all directions while studying their institutions and types; and he has arrived at the conclusion that 'they are as simple and sincere a people as perhaps can anywhere be found in this modern world of ours.' No doubt the natural difficulties of the country, as well as its geographical position, hemmed in by powerful neighbours, have helped to form the Swiss character. From this brightly-written volume we can learn more of the people and country in a few hours than in a tour of as many weeks. Mr. Story tells us of the magnificent works constructed by Swiss engineers in the struggle with Nature in the Alps; relates the history of events which led to the sovereignty of the people; initiates us into the local and central government of the country; devotes chapters to education, philanthropy, industry, vine-culture, Alpine life and work, Cantonal life and character, women and home life, children, military system, working men's societies and co-operation, religious life and influence, festivals, literature, and the press, and tells some capital stories. Only by extracts, for which space fails, could we convey an adequate idea of the interest of the book, so informing, so well illustrated, and so capitally produced.

From Messrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd.—'The Lover Fugitives: a Romance,' by John Finemore. George Ferrers, a young Hampshire landowner of good family and a captain in the service of King James II., hearing in London of the cruelties perpetrated by the soldiery on the West Country folk after the defeat of the Duke of Monmouth and his brave but undisciplined followers at Sedgemoor, and seeing no likelihood of active service, had resigned his commission, and when the story opens in August 1685 is riding home from London with his man Tom Trott at his heels. Outside Winchester he meets a comrade, Lieutenant Poyntz, with a troop of horse guarding a farmer and eight fugitive rebels whom he had concealed. All these prisoners were sure of the gibbet. Then he comes upon a signpost at two cross roads on which is spiked the gory head of his old gamekeeper John Woodley. He desists from attempting to remove the head, because to do so would have jeopardised the lives of his own tenantry. Presently he meets his sweetheart Cicely Plummer, whose manner is reserved and cold. It is six months since they have met, and a new suitor, the Earl of Kesgrave, has appeared upon the scene. Ferrers meets the Earl and some other country gentlemen and officers at dinner at the house of Humphrey Lester, an old friend. Cicely is also there, but always with the Earl. Over the wine old Commodore Cliffe, the host's brother-in-law, expresses his disapproval of the cruelty shown to the rebels and of two guests who take pleasure in seeing women flogged. For this he is challenged by a Major Ryecroft, who also twits Ferrers for leaving the army, and some officers express doubts if he should be allowed to sit with them. The result is that the Major and Ferrers fight with swords and the former is disarmed, vowing vengeance. Soon afterwards the hero aids Mr. and Mrs. Blake, a farmer and his wife, to escape from their pursuers, and harbours and feeds them. Then he has an explanation with Cicely, who thought he had left the army from cowardice and not because of the wrongs of the country folk, and they become sweethearts again; but George has been seen with Mrs. Blake, the wife of the rebel farmer, and Commodore Cliffe's rude jests compromise the hero with Cicely. Then Ferrers is astonished to see constables arrive to arrest Mrs. Plummer and her daughter Cicely for harbouring rebels. At this crisis the Earl and Ferrers plan to rescue the two ladies from the minions of the law, but they find themselves forestalled by gypsies. From this point until the end the story is full of incident and movement, and will be followed by its readers with intense interest. Mr. Finemore has made excellent use of his thorough knowledge of the tragic period of our annals dealt with in this well-told tale, which is far superior to the general run of present-day novels.

From Mr. William Reeves.—'Mastersingers: Appreciations of Music and Musicians, with an essay on Hector Berlioz,' by Filson Young. There are ten studies in this attractive volume, which captivates the reader by the variety and interest of the subjects dealt with, by the appreciative faculty brought to bear upon them, and by the beauty of the get-up. Of these ten articles we have been most struck by the delightful appreciations of Beethoven's pastoral Symphony, of Bach's Organ Fugues, and of Mozart's Requiem Mass. To all these three grand composers and their works due justice is rendered by one who knows of what he writes. Especially interesting to English readers are the appreciation of the composer in England, which deserves especial attention, and that of Charles Hallé, to whom the author awards a generous meed of praise for his successful endeavours to brighten a dull manufacturing and commercial city by planting and cultivating a taste for good music in the hearts of its honest workers. The sympathy shown at his funeral proved that Hallé's strenuous efforts were appreciated. This is a refreshing book for all who love music.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'The Beginning of South African History,' by George McCall Theal, Litt.D., LL.D. The publication of such a work as this at the present moment is exceedingly opportune, and no doubt it will attract, as it well deserves, wide attention. The author in his first chapter carries the reader back to the earliest inhabitants of South Africa, and speaks of the evidence in favour of a more ancient race than any of those we are acquainted with. Long before the people could be definitely divided into the Bushmen, the Hottentots, and the Bantu, we hear of a number of Asiatics, who possibly came from the great city of Tyre, and are identical with the travellers who, as recorded in Holy Scripture, went down the Red Sea to Ophir in the time of Solomon and returned with gold, silver, precious stones, ivory, &c., for all these valuables are to be found in South-Eastern Africa, and the destination of the vessels was probably the mouths of the Zambesi or Sofala. The succeeding three chapters are devoted to an interesting account of the Bantu tribes of South Africa, and in subsequent sections the author treats of the circumstances that led up to the discovery of an ocean route to India, various voyages and conquests, the occupation of Sofala and Mozambique, relations between the Portuguese and the Bantu, the disastrous expeditions under Barreto and Homem, and the trend of public events in South Africa up to the close of the sixteenth century. From this point the interest gradually quickens. Rivals to the Spanish and Portuguese made their appearance in Eastern seas in the English and Dutch, and an account of the proceedings of these two nations constitutes one of the most absorbing portions of the volume. Remaining chapters are devoted to events of importance from 1628 to 1652, the weakness of Portuguese rule in South Africa, the chief incidents of the eighteenth century, the lowest point of Portuguese authority, and the revival of activity in Portuguese South Africa. A good index completes the work, and there are several maps and plates. Dr. Theal has treated his subject with the skill and breadth that one would expect from so eminent an authority, and in contenting himself with a plain, unvarnished account of the beginnings of South Africa has steered remarkably clear of controversial matter.

From the same.—'I, Thou, and the Other One,' by Amelia E. Barr. Mr. Unwin is issuing a series of popular copyright novels at the price of half-a-crown, and Mrs. Barr's clever love story is sure of a ready sale in this neat and handy form.

From Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co., Ltd.—'For England,' by Morice Gerard. The frontispiece of this exciting but not particularly well-written story is by Mr. Powell Chase, and represents a man with a black bag running away in the dead of night from a determined-looking female. The lady has not the slightest chance of capturing him, though, maybe, she will collide with the thief's right leg, which is so ill-drawn that it appears to enjoy an independent existence, and seems to be running along yards behind the body of which it is a member. The man is Felix Boisdoffre, and he has stolen valuable documents from Marcion Dacre. These documents contain valuable information concerning the coast defences of England, and Marcion Dacre is in great danger if they are not recovered. He goes in pursuit, but fails to recover them owing to the lightning-like rapidity with which they change hands. Eventually, however, they are returned to him in recognition of his having saved the life of the President of the French Republic. For railway travelling the story is adequate: it is not in the least degree like life, but to some readers this is a distinct recommendation.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co.—'The Missionary,' by George Griffith. We are afraid Mr. Griffith takes rather a fanciful conception of life, but his characters have at least the merit of novelty. Early in the story we are introduced to a member of the demi-monde whom the hero, a young Oxford undergraduate, meets at the Palace Theatre of Varieties, and whose conversation and manners are of an exceedingly pleasing lady-like description. This young person bears a most remarkable facial resemblance to himself. Eventually he discovers that she is his half-sister. But before this, she on her side has discovered something. This is that a queer kind of light comes into his eyes, 'a sort of dancing, jumping yellow flame that makes them look almost red,' when he has had too much to drink. A similar light, she remembers, used to appear in her mother's eyes when she was under the influence of alcohol. Rather a surprising form of opening the reader will say, but the standard in the succeeding events is fully maintained. Vane, as if to justify the unfortunate taint he has inherited, gets helplessly drunk in his father's house. Rendered miserable by the consciousness of his weakness, he determines to part from the girl he is engaged to be married to. Two years pass away, during which he is serving a time of probation, and he again yields to temptation. This happens on the day he is to receive his degree, when his relatives and the only girl have come up to Oxford to be witnesses of the proud event. This catastrophe puts a climax to the matter, and the only girl marries a rival. Vane then resolves to enter Holy Orders, and becomes a missionary to the West End. He preaches such candid, straightforward sermons at South Kensington that the wealthier portion of the congregation are disgusted and leave the church. Meanwhile his half-sister is sought in marriage, notwithstanding her past, by a young West Australian millionaire who has been living with her for some time, while her friend, of the same persuasion as herself, but equally ladylike, becomes the spouse of a clergyman. We think we have now said enough to justify our criticism of the imaginative character of the story, and must leave our readers to investigate its further incidents for themselves. The book is decidedly startling.

JACKSON'S U.P. PENS

Specially adapted for Elegant and Rapid Writing, and for all Styles of Penmanship

THE great demand for these Pens has suggested the production of two extra kinds of the same size and shape as the No. 4 Corresponding Pen, which is such a general favourite. The New G Nib is characterised by a greater fineness and flexibility, so that for those who indulge in fine writing and for Shorthand Writers it will be found unsurpassed. The New J Pen, with a broad but still somewhat flexible point, is richly gilt, and is eminently adapted for large bold styles of Penmanship, being peculiarly suitable for Ladies, whether they write vertically or obliquely. No more durable and delightful pen need be desired.

A Sample Box, containing a Quarter Gross Assorted Pens, sent post-free on receipt of seven penny stamps.

'Unquestionably capital pens. . . Beautifully soft and fluent writing pens.'—SCHOOL BOARD CHRONICLE.

A Foreign View of England in the Reigns of George I. and George II.

Translated by Madame van MUYDEN. Large crown 8vo. With a Photogravure Plate and many other Illustrations. 10s. 6d. net. [Ready next week.]

An account of London and England written during the years 1725-1729, by Monsieur César de Saussure, a descendant of the French family of that name, who came over to this country for an educational visit, and wrote a continuous and detailed account of what he saw and did. Commencing with an account of his journey from Switzerland down the Rhine to Rotterdam, and of the voyage to England, he describes the Court of George I.—the Coronation of George II.—the Opening of Parliament—the Streets and Buildings of London, including the Tower and its Menagerie—the Investiture of the Knights of the Bath—the ways and doings of English Society, with anecdotes of those who are best known in it—Sports and Pastimes—Highwaymen—the Coffee Houses—the Suburban Villages of Kensington, Islington, Hackney, &c.—the King's Savage—the Penny Post—River Boats. The book is, in short, a most careful and remarkable description of London, its life and society two hundred years ago.

Publishers' Circular 'Export Number'

TO PUBLISHERS AND BOOKSELLERS.

On the 10th of May will be issued the Sixteenth Annual Export Number of the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, and we again venture to solicit your order and copy for an Advertisement. The PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR is steadily increasing in circulation and influence, and we may say that of this Special Number 2,000 extra copies will be printed and distributed, CHIEFLY DIRECT BY POST, amongst the best and largest buyers in the Colonies and United States, and on the Continent.

The Number will be found a most suitable medium for advertising NEW and FORTHCOMING BOOKS, COLONIAL EDITIONS, REMAINDERS, &c.; the great object being to place before the EXPORT TRADE not merely announcements of forthcoming works, but lists of Standard and other Books suitable for the BOOK MARKET ABROAD.

Within recent years the export of books has enormously increased—as may be seen from the Board of Trade Returns—and the value of this Special Number of the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR as an advertising medium can scarcely be over-estimated.

The Church in the Fort, and Twenty-seven other Sermons.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

‘The discourses throughout a lively and practical.’—BAPTIST MAGAZINE.

‘Among the deluge of books of Sermons it is pleasant to note one from the Rev. David James Burrell, D.D. . . . The present volume breathes a more rarified air than is found in many British contemporaries. Its sermons are neither profound nor ornate, but they are distinguished by sound thought and Christian wisdom.’—DUNDEE ADVERTISER.

‘Dr. Burrell bids fair to take the foremost place among the American preachers whose sermons appeal to us.’—EXPOSITORY TIMES.

The Unaccountable Man, and Twenty-eight other Sermons.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

‘Dr. Burrell is a powerful and impressive preacher, whose discourses speak to simple people rather than to theologians.’—SCOTSMAN.

‘Dr. Burrell is a popular preacher.’—BAPTIST MAGAZINE.

‘Rich matter, apt quotation, and illustration.’—IRISH PRESBYTERIAN.

‘These addresses are simple, direct, vivid, and effective. The ability and experience of the preacher are manifest in every page.’—DUNDEE ADVERTISER.

ATHENÆUM (on Volume I).—‘Dr. Hume Brown has been hitherto known as the biographer of Knox and Buchanan; henceforth it should be as the historian of Scotland. . . . Every page evinces deep research and wide erudition. . . . It is a most inestimable boon to possess at last a history of Scotland brief, but connected, lucid, learned, and accurate.’

TIMES (on Volume II).—‘Probably no other writer on Scottish history could have written a book so good in limits so narrow. Professor Hume Brown is always scientific alike in manner and in method, and he can condense the results of weeks of patient work into fine, clear, and lucid lines.’

ILLUSTRATIONS IN BOOKS AND SAD ENDINGS.

Illustrations are very valuable helps to the popularity of a book, and are sometimes indispensable; it would not be easy, for instance, to measure the added interest supplied by Tenniel's illustrations to 'Alice in Wonderland,' or of Linley Sambourne's to Kingsley's 'Water-Babies.' In instances like these, where artist and author are in perfect harmony, illustrations are of inestimable value in making a book popular; on the other hand, even where author and artist are identical, this harmony may be conspicuous by its absence. Thackeray's illustrations are often successful only in destroying the high ideal of his word-picture. Then take such familiar instances as Cruikshank or Phiz's illustrations to Dickens. Some are admirably in touch with the subject, and are now invaluable as pictures of the times, but it was by an accident almost if they gave much grace or beauty to a female character; an exception is the wonderful scene by Phiz of 'The Shadow in the Little Parlour,' where Captain Cuttle says to Florence, 'Steady, darling! courage! Don't look round yet. See there! Upon the wall!'

The most difficult subject to illustrate is a powerful novel, and, judging from the want of success which often attends the attempts of an artist to realise an author's ideas, there must be many who agree with the late Mr. R. D. Blackmore in thinking that illustration is a mistake in some cases. He often said to us that he did not like to have his own idea of a character imagined by himself, or pictured in his mind from the description of a favourite author, spoiled by some artist's poor depiction. It is bad enough when an artist fails from lack of imagination, but it is a great deal worse when an artist illustrates a story without taking the trouble to read it, of which many instances might be given. So frequently are mistakes in illustration to be met with that it would pay publishers to employ an illustration expert, one who could not only select the most suitable artist for special work, but see that he carried it out without the glaring anachronism which so often disfigures whole series of illustrations.

Not long since we gave a good artist some work in connection with a sport in which he is an expert; the drawings wanted were only simple diagrams, and yet he made blunders in every one of them, and with the best will in the world could not get them right, proving how difficult it may be to illustrate a most simple action, just as to boil a potato or make melted butter properly are the most difficult of culinary feats—judging by results.

The artists employed by binders are often very happy, and they are often very—well, not happy, in their attempts to tell the whole story of a book by a cut on its cover. Some quarter of a century or more ago we asked a binder to send in a design for a work on the modern breech-loader, which was pretty well known even then; but the illustration sent was from a block which might have done duty on an edition of Colonel Hawker's masterpiece on shooting.

To come to a more recent instance of book illustration, look at Miss Mary Johnston's sweet and pathetic story, 'Audrey,' published here by Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co. and in America by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., who have sold 150,000 copies of it. We say it is sweet and pathetic on the assurance of two ladies who have read it; but it certainly is an inviting book to read, so light to handle and so attractively illustrated in colours by F. C. Yohn. Here again, although the illustrations are very clever indeed, that facing page 66 gives us beautiful Mistress Evelyn with the square jaw and high forehead of a woman of fifty—not that it follows that a woman is fifty because she has the traits referred to, but they do not seem to fit Evelyn.

We congratulate Messrs. Constable on being the English publishers of Miss Johnston's work, as its success is a welcome indication of the revolt of the public taste, sickened by the pornographic Englishwoman's libels on her sex. It is pleasant to find a young American authoress taking her country by storm with a book which is sweet and wholesome and old-fashioned in a new way.

'Sweet, sad little Audrey' is the verdict of one whose four words heard tell far more than they do read. We gather from the tone in which they were said that Audrey's story is worth reading, and that it has a sad ending.

In his very pleasant and interesting 'Life' of William Black which was published last week, Sir Wemyss Reid tells how Black was besieged with letters from people who begged him to avert the sad end to which Macleod of Dare seemed fated; President Garfield, who had read the work with keen interest, sent Black an almost prophetic message to say he had no right to end a novel so miserably, as 'human life has tragedies enough.' But Black was powerless to save the children of his imagination from the sacrifice demanded by the eternal verities of art. It is the same with 'Audrey'; millions who follow her career will remember her because of her dramatic death, who would have forgotten her if the point of the dagger had not quite reached her heart. Certainly, as regards the murderous nature of the dagger the artist has left nothing to the reader's imagination, and the only wonder is how poor Audrey lived at all after it was sheathed in her breast.

And this death of Audrey reminds us that science has removed one of the literary artist's most effective weapons—the wounded heart is no longer necessarily fatal. The modern surgeon would have saved Audrey; he would have done in her case, as he has done in others, cut through to the heart, found the bleeding wound, and sewn it up as he would any other cut. We read of triumphs of surgery which might make the fortune of a sensational novel; fancy the palpitating heart of the heroine being gently held and pressed between the hands of the surgeon, while his assistant finds the wound and sews it up. This is fact, not fancy, and though recovery cannot always be guaranteed, we believe Lord Lester even contemplates the cure of a diseased heart by the life-giving as opposed to the death-dealing knife. French surgeons even hint at the lancet's 'ministering to a mind diseased.'

COPYRIGHT IN CANADA.

The interesting letter by Mr. Morang on the subject of copyright in Canada which we publish this week appears to us to very fairly cover the whole ground, and will be useful in view of the renewed interest in the subject of Imperial copyright. Canada has at times been more inclined to adopt a selfish policy than to throw in her lot with the Empire generally, but there are good hopes now that a more patriotic policy will prevail.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

After passing through numerous editions, Sir Wemyss Reid's novel 'Gladys Fane' is to be produced in an entirely new edition which Messrs. Cassell & Co. will publish on the 30th inst. The author contributes a new preface and has revised the text, which has been reset throughout.

His Majesty the Shah is evidently much concerned about the romance of Queen Mary. On hearing about a book on 'Palaces and Prisons of Mary Queen of Scots,' by M. M. Shoemaker, he was so interested that a copy was cabled for from Teheran and sent out to him.

We regret to record the death from hemorrhage of the brain of Mr. Frank R. Stockton, the well-known American author. Mr. Stockton was born in Philadelphia in 1834. Many of his best works are published in this country by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., including 'The Hundredth Man,' 'The Late Mrs. Null,' 'The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine,' 'The Dusantes,' 'The Squirrel Inn,' 'Rudder Grangers Abroad,' 'Three Burglars,' &c.

'British Rule and Jurisdiction beyond the Seas' is the title of a book by the late Sir Henry Jenkyns, which may be expected immediately from the Oxford University Press. The author was Parliamentary Counsel to the Treasury from July 1886 to February 1899, and in the December of the latter year he died. Sir Courtenay Ilbert has written a preface to the volume, in which are given some interesting details of Sir Henry's remarkable career and personality.

Next week Messrs. Rivington will publish another volume of their Series of Oxford Church Text Books, which will be entitled 'The Church, its Ministry and Authority,' by the Rev. Darwell Stone, Principal of Dorchester Missionary College.

The June number of the Art Journal will be a special double Coronation number, with several extra Plates, including a special etching of the interior of Westminster Abbey, by Axel H. Haig, the noted etcher of architecture. The price of this number will be raised to 2s. 6d., and, owing to the extra trouble involved in producing the number, the date of publication will be postponed until June 3.

Messrs. T. & T. Clark announce that every article in the fourth volume of Hastings' 'Dictionary of the Bible' is now in type and returned for press, and that they hope to publish it the last week of May. This volume includes 'Pleroma' to 'Zuzim,' and in the opinion of the editors it contains some of the most important and finest articles in the entire work. Among such may be mentioned 'Prophecy, and Prophets,' by the late Professor A. B. Davidson; 'Priests and Levites,' by Graf. Baudissin; 'Propitiation,' 'Sabbath,' 'Son of Man,' by Canon Driver; 'Psalms,' by Professor W. T. Davison; 'Righteousness,' by Professor Skinner and Professor Stevens; 'Sacrifice,' by Professor W. P. Paterson; 'Satan,' by Professor Whitehouse; 'Sin,' by Canon Bernard; 'Solomon,' by Professor Flint; 'Son of God,' by Canon Sanday; 'Tabernacle,' 'Weights and Measures,' by Professor A. R. S. Kennedy; 'Text (O. T.),' by Professor Strack; 'Text (N. T.),' by Professor Nestle; 'Versions,' by Principal L. L. Bebb; 'Writing,' by Dr. Kenyon.

The Poet Laureate's new volume, 'A Tale of True Love,' to be published by Messrs. Macmillan, takes its title from the opening poem, an idyll written in six-lined rhyming stanzas.

An ideal book for spring and summer reading should be 'Letters to Dolly,' by Keble Howard, otherwise known as 'Chicot' of the Sketch. The volume, which will be published by Mr. John Long at the end of April, contains upwards of eighty drawings by Mr. Tom Browne.

Messrs. Dent are about to publish 'African Wastes Reclaimed: the Story of the Lovedale Mission,' by Robert Young, F.R.G.S., with numerous illustrations from photographs by the author.

Messrs. Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier will publish a new work by Mrs. Margaret S. Deming, entitled 'Mosaics from India.' The proof sheets have been submitted to Sir William Muir (Principal of Edinburgh University and a great authority on Indian matters), who says: 'The book is throughout beautifully illustrated, and is full of the social and religious state of the people, both Hindoos and Mohammedans, their castes, weddings, Purdah life, &c. Much attention is given to missions throughout India, and altogether the work promises not only to impart a singularly full conception of the country to the reader, but also to promote the cause of Christian endeavour throughout the land.'

The forthcoming Special Summer Number of the Studio, will be devoted to a consideration of the present aspect of the graver's art in Europe and America. The illustrations, which will be very numerous, will include examples of the work of all the leading etchers of the world.

Messrs. Whittaker & Co. have in the press, and will publish in their 'Specialists' series, a work entitled 'Mechanical Refrigeration,' by Mr. Hal Williams, A.M.I.Mech.E. This book will deal with the whole field of Ice-making and Cold-Storage, and, while designed for the use of those technically interested in the industry, is an attempt to express in simple language the principles regulating the action of refrigerating machinery, and the latest and most up-to-date practice in its application.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will publish shortly a new historical romance by Mr. Albert Lee entitled 'The Frown of Majesty.' The story deals with the varied fortunes of Catholics and Huguenots, and the scene of action is laid in France during the reign of Louis XIV.

Barry Pain's new novel, 'The One Before,' is almost ready for publication by Mr. Grant Richards. It will be provided with eighty illustrations by Tom Browne.

A remarkably interesting collection of books and leaflets printed at the Strawberry Hill Press is included in Messrs. Hodgson's catalogue for next week. This collection, which is unusually extensive, derives special interest from the fact that it was bequeathed to the Hon. Mrs. Damer by Horace Walpole, and through a relative of hers it subsequently passed into the hands of the present owner. The most important item is Horace Walpole's own copy of Gray's 'Odes'—the first work issued from the Press—with manuscript notes and criticisms in his handwriting. It is an unusually fine copy in the original grey wrapper, and has the rare leaflet, 'To Mr. Gray, on his Odes,' of which it is said only six copies were printed. There is also a very interesting copy of Walpole's 'Anecdotes of Painting' and the 'Catalogue of Engravers,' two volumes of the set having a number of corrections in the autograph of the author. Besides the books, which are all in a fine state of preservation, there are a considerable number of the extremely scarce leaflets and detached pieces, all in the original condition and not in any way mounted or cut down.

The same sale also includes an item of interest to Thackeray collectors. It consists of a copy of Charles Tennyson's 'Sonnets and Fugitive Pieces' having on the front cover the autograph 'W. M. Thackeray, 1830.' But the feature of this copy is that it contains three original pen-and-ink sketches, apparently drawn by Thackeray during his residence at Cambridge at the early age of nineteen. The catalogue also contains fine copies of the original editions of Tennyson's 'Lyrical Poems' and 'Poems by Two Brothers,' and many other interesting first editions and presentation copies, as well as a number of choice extra-illustrated and colour plate books.

There seems to be an impression that Mr. Waineman's novel 'A Heroine from Finland,' which has been received with much popular interest, is a translation from the Finnish. This is a misunderstanding. The story is published as it is written in the English tongue.

Miss Isabel Lilian Glog, whose works are among the most interesting produced by English women painters, is the subject of the opening article in the Magazine of Art for May. Her picture, 'Rosamond,' is reproduced as an engraved frontispiece. The decorative sculpture of Mr. F. Lynn Jenkins is discussed by Mr. M. H. Spielmann. The 'Curiosities of Art' are exemplified in an article by Mr. W. Roberts on 'Copies,' and another by Mr. H. Clifford Smith on 'The Full and True History of the Portland Vase,' in which the discovery, destruction, restoration, and reproduction of that marvellous work are for the first time fully set forth. Under the section devoted to 'The Collector' will be found a useful article on 'Japanese Prints,' by Mr. E. F. Strange, and a notice of a recently discovered portrait of a lady, by Hoppner. 'The Acquisitions of our National Museums,' 'The Monthly Chronicle of Art,' and 'Notes and Queries,' are, as usual, among the contents.

'The Book Lovers' Library has stopped admitting members in New York, and has sprung the Tabard Inn Library on the community. To be a "Tabard" costs $3 a year. After paying that, a book can be obtained by depositing 5 cents in any of the Tabard Inn libraries. These libraries will be revolving bookcases with 200 to 300 books, placed in stores throughout the country. Surely every bookseller in the country can go this one better. If such a case of books can pay when in a drug store or a department store, it will do likewise in a book store. It may be interesting to note that Max Fast, a stationer and bookseller, of Hackensack, N.J., solved this problem years ago by supplying any book at 5 cents per week, or perhaps a trifle more if the borrower read several books. He calls it "The New Library," and it has been generally successful. There doesn't seem to be very much opportunity for either plan when there is a good free library in a town, but where none exists, which includes a larger proportion of towns throughout the country, there ought to be a good profit in this branch of a book store.—American Stationer.

Mr. John C. Nimmo will publish in the first week of May two new volumes of the 'Semitic Series,' viz., Professor Archibald Duff's 'Hebrew Ethics and Religion,' and the 'Early History of Syria and Palestine,' by Dr. Lewis Bayles Paton. Mr. Nimmo will also issue 'Immanuel Kant, his Life and Doctrine,' by Friedrich Paulsen, translated from the revised German edition by J. E. Creighton and Albert Lefevre; and a new revised and enlarged edition of Mr. R. A. Streatfeild's 'The Opera,' with introduction by J. A. Fuller-Maitland, the first edition of which, published a few years ago, was quickly absorbed. A new edition of Anthony Hamilton's 'Memoirs of Count Grammont,' in demy 8vo., illustrated with 12 etched plates, will also be ready at the same time.

In 'Rita's' new novel, 'The Lie Circumspect,' which Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. are about to issue immediately, that popular author 'shows how a good woman can be a true angel of mercy to another woman of a passionate temperament whose stormy past is not wholly due to her own shortcomings.'

A book which is likely to appeal to book-lovers will be published immediately by Messrs. Duckworth & Co. It is entitled 'The Book of the Courtier,' and is a translation of a celebrated Italian treatise which was printed in Venice by the Aldi. The author was the Count Baldesare Castiglione, a contemporary of Michael Angelo and Raphael, who in 1505 was an envoy at the Court of King Henry VII. of England, and who died in 1529, holding the office of Papal Ambassador at the Court of the Emperor Charles V. The work now appears adequately illustrated, being embellished with fifteen autographs as well as seventy-one reproductions of portraits from paintings, drawings, reliefs, and medals by Mantegna, Raphael, Titian, Leonardo, Cellini, and others.

The first volume of Mr. C. Oman's 'History of the Peninsular War,' which will shortly be issued from the Oxford University Press, deals with the events from the Treaty of Fontainebleau to the Battle of Corunna, 1807-1809. Mr. Oman explains that he no more dreams of superseding the immortal six volumes of Napier than Dr. Gardiner dreamed of superseding Clarendon's History; but points out that while Napier is unrivalled as a narrator of the incidents of war, he is a less trustworthy guide in politics. The new history will contain a considerable amount of new matter, and maps, plans, and portraits.

Professor Bury's 'History of Greece,' published by Messrs. Macmillan two years ago in a single volume, is now issued in a library edition of two volumes. The text has been revised and slight additions have been made, incorporating the results of recent archaeological discovery in Crete and elsewhere. The volumes are amply furnished with maps and plans.

Messrs. Sands & Co. have in the press a scientific and historical work by a Jesuit author who has given some fifteen years to its preparation. It is entitled 'Anglo-Jewish Calendar for Every Day in the Gospels.' The author, Father Power, B.A., intends it to be no more than the framework of a voluminous 'Essay towards a Final Determination of the Gospel Chronology,' based on an exhaustive study of the Jewish Calendar in its bearings on the Gospel history.

The eleventh and twelfth volumes of 'The Temple Bible' are almost ready for publication. They are 'The Book of Numbers,' edited by the Rev. G. Buchanan Gray, M.A., with frontispiece-reproduction in photogravure of George Tinworth's 'Moses and the Serpent'; and 'The Earlier Pauline Epistles,' by the Rev. Vernon Bartlet, M.A., with frontispiece after Watts's 'Charity.' 'Genesis,' edited by Dr. Sayce, has recently passed into its second edition.

The May number of Messrs. Dent's new magazine for nature-lovers, the Country, will contain some thirty articles and as many illustrations. Some of the most notable items are: 'A Plea for Shrubberies,' by E. V. Lucas; 'We'll go no more a'Maying,' by H. C. Smith; 'My Resting Garden,' by the Rev. P. H. Ditchfield; 'Wood Anemones,' by P. Arnott; 'Birds' Nests,' by Helen Milman; the first article of a series on 'Country Cottages'; and a cricket article by Harold Macfarlane.

'The Newcomes,' the next addition to Messrs. Dent's new 'Thackeray,' with an introduction by Mr. Walter Jerrold, some thirty illustrations by Mr. C. E. Brock, and a drawing of Thackeray's College in photogravure, will appear immediately.

Collectors and amateurs of artistic glass ware should note that Mr. Karl W. Hiersemann, the publisher, of Leipzig, has just published a very finely illustrated portfolio describing the collection of glass preserved in the Industrial Museum, Reichenberg. There are 37 phototype plates, 3 plates in colours, and 18 text illustrations. Judging from the illustrations in the prospectus it must be an exceedingly fine work. The price is 48 marks.

BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

At the last monthly meeting of the Board, Mr. C. J. Longman in the chair, the sum of £97. 6s. 4d. was voted for the relief of 75 members and widows of members.

Letters to the Editor

THE PROPOSED ASSISTANT BOOKSELLERS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT SCHEME.

SIR,—In view of the correspondence that has lately appeared in the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR in relation to the establishment of a Booksellers' Benefit Society, I should like to point out that, at least as far as London is concerned, the long-established Booksellers' Provident Institution very fully meets the objects aimed at, and, as one who has been for many years concerned in its administration, to explain the conditions of membership and state what the institution really does in giving substantial help to its members in time of need.

By its rules the institution is enabled to provide relief for the temporary pressing necessities of members or widows of members arising from sickness or other misfortune; grants are also made towards funeral expenses; help is given up to fifteen years of age to distressed children of members; and all members who have attained the age of fifty-five, or their widows the age of fifty, are eligible to receive permanent assistance. Beyond this it is open to every member, on a vacancy, to become an occupant of one of the houses of the Booksellers' Provident Retreat at Abbots Langley, where house, coals, vegetables, and medical attendance are provided free; while there is a furnished house where members may reside for a holiday without any charge whatever. One further great benefit is open to members. Associated with the institution are four eminent medical officers who, with a kindness unfailing, are ready to give their services when occasion arises. It also sometimes happens that situations have been found for members out of employment through their cases having been known to the Board of Directors.

It should be borne in mind that the institution is no new and untried scheme, but has the experience of sixty-five years behind it. In these years £71,000 has been paid in relieving the necessities of members and of their widows, and still the capital of £30,000 remains intact. During the year 1901 grants amounting to £1,226 were paid to sixty-four recipients, giving an average of more than £19 each.

In the distribution of this large amount no record exists of any claim within the rules having been refused; no canvassing nor election is required. Wherever the need is shown to exist, either from entire absence or insufficiency of means, the administration of relief has been carried out with kindly sympathy, and entirely without harsh or unnecessary scrutiny; even the applications of members who have long left this country and have settled in Australia and America have been fully met. The system of grants varying with the necessity of cases which has been adopted by the institution has been subjected to adverse criticism; but it is held that circumstances differ so widely—such as the case of widows left with or without families—that it is the only method that equitably meets the wants of members.

Only on such a basis as that on which the institution is established could such great results have been accomplished; a settled amount to which a member could look forward with certainty is impossible outside Government Annuities, Insurance Companies, or Friendly Societies bound by actuarial tables.

In order that conditions of membership may be made as easy as possible, the Directors have lately consulted an eminent actuary, who has prepared the scales now in operation. By these a young man may become a life member at 18 years of age on one payment of £16 6s. 10d., or by instalments extending over six years; he may do so by twenty annual payments of £2 1s. 7d.; or he may become entitled to all the institution offers for a payment during the term of his life of 13s. 11d. per annum.

Although the rules do not permit the operations of the institution to extend to the country trade, yet it offers an excellent model on which to frame a kindred society. Its work, however, in London covers a very wide field, and it is to the young men engaged in London that I address myself; their futures will certainly be chequered—success to some, failure to others—but in any event the surety which the Institution gives to its members that whatever happens some provision is within reach at the time of need should impel them to some effort. No doubt effort and self-denial are wanted, but without them nothing worth having can ever be attained.

My friend, Mr. George Larnar, 23 Paternoster Row, the Secretary, will, I am sure, with pleasure afford full information to any one applying to him.

I am, Sir,

Yours most obediently,

WILLIAM BARTRAM.

39 Paternoster Row:

April 12, 1902.

SIR,—Mr. Rymer is right; at the very first time I would certainly avail myself of the opportunity and become a member of this society, provided always there was a reasonable chance of its success; but that depends upon a number of factors, most of which at present are unknown quantities.

Mr. Rymer gives us two reasons why assistants have not come forward to discuss this question in your columns, but I regret to have to say that these are excuses, not reasons. You have been good enough to print letters on this subject signed by pen-names, so that those who dreaded the consequence of their names appearing in print were clearly not conversant with the whole of this correspondence. All the same, if any good is to be attained it will never come to maturity unless the assistants are able and willing to state their opinions, and to stand any criticism on them which may ensue.

To argue with Mr. Rymer the question of benevolent or provident, and how far they are related to each other and to us in this particular case, would take up too much space, and raises abstract questions which may remain at present.

In my example from the New Testament it was not intended to pass over the spirit of the teaching there, but to show clearly what the practice of the world was, and I am afraid it is only too true that the weakest do go to the wall, and we could hardly hope to alter that to any great extent.

My object in writing regarding the proposed society in terms which might seem antagonistic was to try to impress upon those interested that there were serious difficulties in the way, some of which may be restated—viz., want of enthusiasm or esprit de corps among the assistants, without which very little can be done; next, lack of organisation, hence a want of knowledge of what the assistants really desire brought to a focus; further, to urge the assistants in the larger towns to form themselves into Associations, so that through the discussion of trade and literary subjects they may become of more value to their employers, and to their own advantage; and, lastly, that they should resolve to help themselves and each other.

I think Mr. Rymer agrees with these opinions; but others may not do so, and it is for them to speak out.

With apologies for again trespassing on your valuable space, and thanking you for your kindness to us in this matter,

I remain,

Yours faithfully,

Edinburgh:

G. HALDANE.

April 7, 1902.

SIR,—The trade are indebted to you for the generous way in which you are giving your valuable space in the interests of this proposed society. May I make a few comments on the points raised in various letters that have appeared?

I was glad to see that Mr. Shaylor was the first to criticise the scheme—for we need, and I think have, Mr. Shaylor on our side. He is heartily in sympathy with our objects, and when we start—well, Mr. Shaylor, we trust, will be a most prominent official in the society.

Referring to your comments, it was far from my intention to undervalue the excellent work that the B.P.I. has done and is doing. I have personal knowledge of some of the cases this Institution has dealt with, and know that its record is no mean one. My remarks (March 1) were quite in conformity with Mr. Shaylor's letter of July 27, 1901.

Several correspondents seem to be under the impression that you have simply to agree to have a certain thing, and, behold! it is established. It is not so with a society as proposed. It will mean months of hard work from many willing hands before a start can be made.

Mr. W. Grierson* in his letter presumes that a society of this kind must start with a big capital. It may interest Mr. Grierson to know that the majority of the successful trade provident societies started with nothing but a band of earnest, willing men anxious to help their fellows when help is needed. Mr. Grierson states that, instead of joining the proposed society, a man would rather pay a little more and get the certain and more valuable asset of an assurance company's endowment policy. Will Mr. Grierson tell us what assurance company will give a sure and certain pension for a premium of 'a little more' than five shillings a year? The statement is absurd. Mr. Grierson's letter, on the whole, savours of selfishness. Another objection given by Mr. Grierson is on the 'benevolent' nature of relief. I take it that he objects to any relief tainted with charity. I fail to appreciate this point. When I insure my home against fire I do so, not with the certainty of having a fire at some later date; but should I have the misfortune to find my home burnt out, I should take the insurance money as my right. I certainly would not consider myself under any charitable obligation to the other policy-holders in the company. And the provident society is worked on the same principle as the fire insurance company.

The question has been asked as to how this society could be managed when the members would be scattered over the country far away from each other. The seven societies mentioned in the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR of March 1 evidently do not find this a difficulty. What more scattered body than the Gardeners? Yet this is one of the most successful societies.

Finally, Mr. Editor, your generosity in helping us is not in vain. Another step is to be taken, and willing helpers are now coming forward. Perhaps at no distant date you will have the pleasure to announce a definite organised movement, and I pray that the result of this movement will be a society for the United Kingdom working in all friendliness and harmony with the B.P.I.

Yours faithfully,

Glasgow.

HENRY R. BRABROOK.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a little space in which to reply to Mr. W. Grierson, whose letter appeared in your last issue. He complains that the correspondence published has been 'somewhat inconsequent and lacking in businesslike consideration.' This I must emphatically deny, for had it been so I feel sure that you, sir, would not have allowed it to appear in these columns. Most of your readers will, I am sure, agree with me in saying that, however much entitled Mr. Grierson may be to his own private opinion, it was most questionable taste to characterise in print what had already been passed into these columns as 'inconsequent' and 'unbusinesslike.'

I hold no brief for Mr. Brabrook, who is quite capable of defending himself; but as the suggestion came from me to 'hold a meeting somewhere,' I feel that Mr. Grierson is sneering at me with his 'counsel of perfection' when he says that 'something more arduous and effective will be required to carry such a proposal into the region of accomplished fact.' Of course it will; the correspondence proves that. No one interested in this movement has left this out of account. Mr. Grierson has evidently discovered a mare's nest.

The first thing to be done in a case of this description, I take it, is to create a public opinion in favour of the scheme, or, if you will, a scheme; but Mr. Grierson is apparently not of that opinion—in fact, he throws cold water all round upon the idea, the meeting, the correspondence, the benevolence, aye, even the Booksellers' Provident Institution itself comes in for a little shower 'on its own.'

No, sir. To say that the springs of benevolence in our trade would be dried up with the advent of a new benevolent society embracing the whole trade from Land's End to John o' Groats, and from Cromer to Cork, is a libel upon our fellows, rich and poor alike. We need go no further for proof of this than the recently published subscription lists, which would do credit to any trade, much less our own. I do not doubt for one moment that Mr. Grierson finds it 'hard to be enthusiastic in a question of benevolence,' but he must not tar us all with that brush. I, for one, object to the operation.

Just a word upon the need of a benevolent society. Speaking on the point to a gentleman who has five adult male assistants, all married, he said, 'Not one of these fellows has made the slightest provision for the future. If they are ill I pay them their wages, but they belong to no club, friendly society, or institution that could help them in time of need; nor have they insured their lives.' What, I ask, would become of these men should anything happen to render them incapable of earning a living for themselves or their families? This is by no means a solitary case; it is the rule, not the exception—'pity 'tis 'tis true.'

I should like to see 1,000 assistants and principals put down their 10s. 6d. at once. The first year would give us £500 without donations and life governorships; this would be a fair start, and I think that before very long we should have at least a membership roll of 2,000.

Anyway, we mean business; and before very long I hope to see the National Book Trade Benevolent Society 'un fait accompli.'

Yours, &c.,

FRED. J. RYMER.

SIR,—It has been suggested to me that the promoters of this scheme may be interested in the Western Friendly Society, a seventy-year old Scottish provident organisation.

The Directors and Auditors give their services gratuitously, and the Society is purely mutual and has no paid agents. Members receive a non-reducible allowance of £54. 15s. a year during disablement or illness (whether physical or mental), £30 a year in old age, and £50 at death. Premium may be paid quarterly or at longer intervals.

These benefits may be varied. The cost varies with the age at entry; e.g., at age 19 £1. 4s. 8d. yearly, and at age 30 £1. 14s. yearly for minimum benefits. The rates have the approval of the highest actuarial authorities. The Society is not a benevolent one, no donations being receivable. Judging from the correspondence in your columns, interest has been aroused regarding thrift schemes, and I shall be glad to forward to any of your readers a print explaining the operations of the Western Friendly Society.

Yours, &c.,

JNO. MANN.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

SIR,—In his letter in your issue of the 19th Mr. Henry M. Cater states that there are two reasons why the institution has not 'caught on' more largely in recent years, one being the limited area of its operations and the other that applications for assistance meet with uncertain results.

Surely an area of ten miles from Paternoster Row is large enough from which to draw members, especially if it is remembered that the fact of 'once a member always a member' holds good. Handsome grants are regularly remitted to aged and needy members and members' widows in the Provinces as well as in London, and that by virtue of their rights; while the benevolent principle regulating these grants applies from the fact that the greater part of the Society's income arises from investments and legacies bequeathed by wealthy members, who doubtless approved of the rules which govern the institution.

With regard to Mr. Cater's point as to the uncertainty of the result of an application, I would say that such a statement could only be made by one who has but a slight knowledge of the working of the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

I would rather suggest that the reason why young men do not join us is that they fail to realise the value of the benefits to which members and their widows and children have an undisputed right.

Yours, &c.,

A DIRECTOR.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly announce that Lord Monkswell is promised a large representative assembly at the Sixty-third Anniversary Festival of the Newsvendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution on Wednesday, May 7, at the Trocadero?

Thanking you for the valuable space and support you are frequently affording to this institution,

I am, dear Sir,

Your faithful servant,

W. WILKIE JONES,

Secretary.

ASSOCIATED BOOKSELLERS.

NORTH-EASTERN BRANCH.

The first annual meeting of the North-Eastern Branch of this Association was held in the Vegetarian Café, Nelson Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on Wednesday, April 16. The attendance was not what it ought to have been. While we were pleased and glad to see Messrs. Rapp, of Saltburn, and Mr. Mark Smith, of Alnwick (both gentlemen having upwards of forty miles to travel to be present), and three of our Sunderland friends, the local trade was alone represented by Messrs. Porteus, Robinson, Blackie, and Allan. This comprised our audience to listen to a carefully-prepared and instructive address by our esteemed president, Mr. R. J. Porteus. Both he and it deserved better treatment, and we trust that our members and executive, at any rate, will see that this precedent is not repeated.

The annual report stated: Your committee view with increased favour the development of the net system by the publishers, and look for a still greater advance in this direction in the future. We are glad to intimate that from reports received from various members no difficulty is experienced in carrying out the principle of net prices. We have been watchful of the interests of the trade, both locally and nationally, and desire to say that cases requiring the consideration of your committee have been amicably and successfully settled on right lines. Your committee also desire to intimate that their action with respect to Messrs. Methuen had the spontaneous and unanimous support of the whole trade, and were glad to find that their efforts with other existing Associations were partly successful, and hope eventually to bring about the desired results. Your committee regret the fact that no local arrangement between the members of the trade (as at Sunderland and other towns) has been effected with respect to a uniform price for certain discount books, but feel that this matter is only deferred.

The balance sheet showed receipts £9 19s. 6d., and a balance forward of £1 3s. 4d.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the reports, said this was their first annual meeting, and they had reason to congratulate themselves upon the success of the Association. They were perhaps not very numerous, but they were fortunate in this that their nineteen members represented nineteen important firms of the district. The Association had done vigorous work, and for an infant a year old they had not only cut their teeth, but shown them. For unfortunately, like some of the trade associations, they had had to use a little coercion. Their primary object was the betterment of the trade, and the net system devised at a conference between the booksellers and the publishers was a means to this end. There were some black sheep, however, who had violated this agreement, and to these the Association had had to show its teeth. They would notice that they had contributed £5 to the parent Society, which had done a good deal to stop underselling, to get better terms from publishers, and in other ways had corrected abuses in their trade. The betterment of the bookselling trade was really an advantage to the public. If they had a living profit out of their business in the future, which they had not had in the past, they would be able to get a better stock of books for the public to choose from, and also be able to keep a better class of assistants to attend to the trade. The reports were adopted, and other business referring to the book trade was reported on and transacted.

Mr. R. J. Porteus was re-elected President, as were Mr. L. E. Robinson and W. Blackie Secretary and Treasurer respectively, and an Executive Committee of six.

Notices of Books

From Mr. J. W. Arrowsmith—'The King's Sceptre,' by Walter E. Grogan. This is a story of noble resolve devotedly carried out, though occasionally the means employed may seem a little incomprehensible. Ludwig the Great, King of Hartzene, has a treacherous brother, Prince Leofric, who is leagued with the opposing forces of the Duke of Vernan. On the death of Ludwig the Prince sees his way to taking possession of the throne, for the heir is but a boy of some sixteen years; but he is opposed by the Lord Chancellor, Count Arnac Rambertin, who for the better preservation of the State assumes the throne himself. It must be confessed, as we have already said, that many of his actions appear a little uncalled for, but then, on the other hand, they contribute to the making of an heroic, impressive romance, for which the non-critical reader should be profoundly grateful. Mr. Grogan's work is by no means free from fault, but it has the advantage of a brave colouring, and the young and imaginative will scarcely look beyond this.

From Messrs. G. Bell & Sons—'The Cathedral Church of Amiens: a Short History and Description of its Fabric,' by the Rev. Thomas Perkins ('Bell's Handbooks to Continental Churches'). To those who have visited the cathedral at Amiens this volume will revive many pleasurable remembrances, and to those who have not had this experience it will give an excellent idea of one of the most beautiful ecclesiastical buildings on the Continent. Following the usual plan of treatment in these handbooks, the author, after some few words of general introduction, first devotes himself to a brief history of the cathedral, then passes to a consideration of the exterior and interior. In his work of description he is effectively aided by the numerous illustrations, which furnish a very realistic impression of the architectural and other beauties of the building. At the close of the volume some reference is made to the other churches in the city, and there is also a list of the Bishops of Amiens, a plan of the cathedral, and a short but sufficient index. Within its limits the book is an exceedingly efficient guide.

From Messrs. Blackie & Son, Ltd.—'Blackie's Illustrated Continental Geography Readers: Asia.' This is one of a series of five volumes dealing with the five continents. The lessons are brightly and attractively written, and are calculated to make a lasting impression on the minds of youthful readers—an impression which the beautiful photographs, admirably coloured pictures, and accurate sketch maps illustrating them are well adapted to intensify. Certainly books like this afford an almost royal road to learning. Indeed, the rising generation is highly favoured in having such school books, the like of which were never dreamt of in the philosophy of the schoolmaster abroad or at home in the first half of the last century.

From the same.—'Blackie's South Kensington Drawing Cards,' Sets V., VI. These cards are reduced copies of the publishers' 'South Kensington Drawing Sheets.' Set V. contains 20 cards of Advanced Ornaments, coloured; and Set VI. consists of 20 cards of Plant Forms, also coloured. Both drawing and colouring are excellent. Such drawing copies as these mean a blessing to art students in large cities where it is so difficult to realise what some plants are.

From the same.—'Blackie's English Classics: Marmion, Cantos I.-III.' This is a carefully edited, annotated, and clearly printed edition of Scott's beautiful tale of 'Flodden Field.'

From Catholic Truth Society.—'Dante,' by Henry Sebastian Bowden, Priest of the Oratory. In this pretty little volume we have a concise yet charming biography of the author of the 'Divina Commedia' from his birth at Florence in 1265 until his death at Ravenna in 1321. A second part contains a summary and consideration of the 'Vita Nuova,' the 'Convito,' and the minor works; while a third is devoted to the 'Commedia.' An appendix, giving diagrams of Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise, completes this handy and attractive work, written by one well qualified to treat of a subject so attractive and yet requiring no ordinary knowledge of the period and of the works discussed. A photograph of Giotto's portrait of Dante makes a pleasing frontispiece.

From Messrs. W. & R. Chambers, Ltd.—'Religious Progress of the Century,' by W. H. Withrow, M.A., M.D., &c. In a volume of some four hundred and fifty odd pages Dr. Withrow gives an account of religious progress in the nineteenth century. He has the necessary gift of compression, and uses considerable art in presenting his facts with that degree of picturesqueness and adequate quotation which makes his writing pleasant and inviting. His views are a trifle conventional, however, and there are times when we could wish that he had kept more to his subject and put his own opinions in the background.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—'The Consolation of Philosophy,' translated by W. V. Cooper. 'The Consolation of Philosophy,' by that learned and illustrious patrician, Anicius Manlius Severinus Boethius, has been often translated into various languages. The first English translation was made by King Alfred the Great in collaboration with Asser. 'But,' as Mr. Gollancz tells us in his editorial note, 'his version does not give us a very true knowledge either of Boethius or his Consolation.' He proceeds to state that the more abstruse parts are wholly omitted, while Alfred has added many wise thoughts of his own, which are interesting and valuable as being his, but are outside the theme chosen by Boethius. The version before us is the work of Mr. W. V. Cooper, B.A., of King's College, and reads like a prose poem. The editor says: 'The recent Millenary celebrated at Winchester has perhaps justified the issue of this first of twentieth century versions.' No justification or apology was needed for so admirable an English rendering as this by Mr. Cooper, which it is a real pleasure to read in this new volume of the Temple Classics, so conscientiously edited by Mr. Israel Gollancz.

From Messrs. Digby, Long & Co.—'A New Messiah,' by Robert Cromie. This book is quite good enough to be much better, and we find it difficult to imagine how a writer of Mr. Cromie's talent can remain satisfied with the greater portion of what he has written. It is melodrama run mad—so mad, indeed, that one is almost inclined to doubt the sanity of the author. 'The Vengeance of the Vehm' is the title of the third chapter; now, this chapter is good, but the climax (which is meant to be tremendously impressive) made us shriek with laughter. Leslie Zietsman is the central figure of the tale, and he is the typical stage villain with his disguises, murders, coolness in time of danger, &c. We are not able to give an outline of the plot: we rather doubt if the author could. Suffice it to say, it is concerned with detectives, company promoting, secret conclaves, money, and—love.

From the same.—'Scoundrel or Saint?' by Gertrude Warden. A race-course, a gipsy, manslaughter, love at sight, and other dramatic ingredients are what Miss Warden has used in the making of her latest novel. Stuart Ventriss, Lady Draycot, Miss Minting, and Dr. Mayhew are the names of some of the characters. Her puppets are in keeping with the plot—that is to say, they are not in the least like living people, and say and do precisely what one doesn't expect. Still, the novel has merit, and we suppose it should be classed with those that are credited with making bright a dull railway journey.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—'State Trials, Political and Social,' selected and edited by H. L. Stephen, 2 vols. Tired readers of fiction should turn to these volumes for refreshment, excitement, and human interest. The eleven trials, with one exception, are all taken from Howell, and though from 150 to 300 years old they are so full of passion, anger, and nervous tension that they might be the most recent products of the times. Their style is dignified, direct to curtness, and absolutely alive. They contain material for a hundred novels, and have side-issues of unexpected and extraordinary dramatic force. The trial of the Earl of Essex, for instance, is so finely realised that one almost despairs of modern fiction. The Annesley Case (1743), again, has points in it which for sheer sensationalism would cap Mr. Fergus Hume at his best. Mr. Stephen evinces discrimination and taste: he has taken the very best from Howell, and the neatness and format of his volumes enhance their value.

From Messrs. Gale & Polden, Limited.—'Physical Culture and Self-Defence,' by Robert Fitzsimmons, with an introduction by A. J. Drexel Biddle, F.R.G.S. This is a book that will prove interesting to more than mere cultivators of muscle; it may almost be said to have an artistic and scientific value. Much of this arises from the illustrations, which have been taken from poses by the author and George Dawson, physical instructor of the Chicago Athletic Club. These, from the painter's and sculptor's point of view, are of considerable importance. The chief object of the work, however, is to afford information as to the best methods of procuring bodily health and vigour. Part I. is devoted to the subject of physical culture, Part II. treats of self-defence, and in Part III. some account is given of the life of the author and the many memorable fights in which he has taken part. The book will have interest for all who exult in bodily prowess and who desire to receive instruction in the very useful accomplishment of boxing.

From Messrs. Gibbings & Co., Ltd.—'The Tower of London,' by Harrison Ainsworth. This popular tale by the Lancashire novelist forms vols. III. and IV. in the Windsor edition of this writer's works. Their binding and general 'get-up' is choice and artistic, and the illustrations, though somewhat gruesome, are well and realistically drawn.

From Messrs. William Hodge & Co., Glasgow.—'The Lost Eurydice and other Poems,' by Robert Bain. The most ambitious attempt in this volume of verse we are not inclined to consider the most meritorious. Rather would we prefer some of the minor poems, which oftentimes display great grace of expression and soulful conception. From one of these—'The Moorloch'—we take the following extract, which must serve as a specimen of the rest of the volume:—

'Among the lonely hills it lies,
Deep, dark and still;
And mirrors back the changeful skies,
The sun, moon, stars, the bird that flies,
The broad, brown-shouldered hill.

'The world's wide voice is silent here:
The cries of men,
The sob, the laugh, the hope, the fear,
The things which make earth sad and dear,
Lie all beneath its ken.'

From Messrs. Hurst & Blackett, Limited.—'Under Cloister Stones,' by Alfred E. Knight. The familiar subject of hidden treasure is again exploited in this novel. The 'jewels of gold' are buried in the cloisters of Westminster Abbey, and thither both the good and bad characters of the story make their way very soon after the opening of the narrative. The struggle between the opposing parties is both protracted and exciting, but eventually virtue is triumphant and vice comes by a miserable ending. The book contains many thrilling situations, one of the last being a fire at which the hero and his sweetheart are in imminent danger of losing their lives. Mr. Knight might perhaps have constructed his plot a little more deftly, but to compensate for this he has distributed his sensational incidents with a liberal hand.

From Messrs. Jarrold & Sons.—'Tales from Gorky,' translated from the Russian, with a biographical notice of the author, by R. Nisbet Bain. One of the chief impressions that the reader of a thoughtful disposition will derive from these stories will be of the Bohemian character of the author. Every novelist brings much of his own individuality to bear upon his creations—in his portraits you can discern the promptings and tendencies of his inner nature, and could, if you were studiously and analytically inclined, build up a very fair idea of the man himself. Especially is this the case with Gorky's work. The author from his early training and the impetuosity of his nature is little disposed for concealment; he stands out plainly for what he is, an apostle of freedom. Mr. Bain tells us in the introduction to this interesting volume something of the life of the Russian writer. He has been successively a cobbler's workman, draughtsman's assistant, turnspit on board one of the Volga steamers, slave in a biscuit manufactory, wandering vagrant; and though his careless, Bohemian life has in no way lessened his love of literature, it has largely influenced the tone of his compositions. One cannot but be struck by the rough, undisciplined character of the author's powers. It is genius, if you will, but genius tilting wildly at shadowy objects. There are frequent telling expressions in these stories that will cause the reader to think. Listen, for instance, to one of the rogues: 'Believe me, to lie with gumption is a high delight. If you lie and see that folks believe you, you feel yourself on a higher level, and to feel yourself above your fellows is a rare satisfaction. To command their attention and think much of yourself in consequence is foolishness; but to fool a man is always pleasant.' As extremes meet, it is more than probable that a large section of the society-ridden class will take unusual interest in these stories of scampish life in Russia; but in saying this it must not be thought we in any way underrate the talents of Gorky, which are of a very remarkable and striking description.

From Mr. John Lane.—'The Decoy,' by Francis Dana. 'When you bring a woman to a house where there ain't none, you're agoin' to make it heaven above or you're agoin' to make it hell below. So you go slow! You don't never let no man fool ye on a hoss trade. All the more, don't you let no gal fool ye on a matrimonial dicker. You c'n have your pick o' the county. Go slow an' see you git it.' Such are the words of wisdom addressed by Jake Henshaw to his master, a young bachelor farmer of New England. But the woman upon whom Roger Bowman has fixed his affections, being proud and with aspirations above her lowly position, refuses to entertain his matrimonial proposals. As a result she falls into the hands of an unscrupulous spiritualist, who utilises her services as a medium. How best to rescue her from this degrading position becomes the study of her lovers (for she has two), and their efforts are very interestingly described in this story. Mr. Dana has introduced more than one clearly defined original character into his plot, and the action of the narrative, if occasionally a trifle slow, is never wanting in attraction.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—'Napoléon,' par Alexandre Dumas, adapted and edited by W. W. Vaughan, M.A., Assistant Master at Clifton College. This is a volume of 'Siepmann's Elementary French Series,' which contains works by distinguished authors prominent in their own country but not yet recognised in schools here. Mr. Vaughan states that, to meet the requirements of the series, he found it necessary to abridge the narrative of Napoleon at Elba, the Hundred Days, and his exile and death at St. Helena, taken from Dumas's 'Vie de Napoléon,' and that, in order to avoid controversy upon disputed military questions, and to show more clearly the true cause of Napoleon's fall—the fact that he was attempting an impossible task—he has omitted Dumas's inaccurate account of the battle of Waterloo and substituted the succinct description by Léon Meyniel. Mr. Vaughan seems to have forgotten that great leaders are not always satisfied to do that which is possible. It was Napoleon himself who once said: 'What is possible has been done, what is impossible has to be done.' However this may be, he has successfully accomplished the not very easy task of so editing this interesting narrative as to greatly help the dullest pupil to progress in his knowledge of the French language and in general culture, which is the commendable object of this well-edited series.

From Messrs. Marchant, Singer & Co., 47 St. Mary Axe, E.C.—'Directory of Paper Makers of the United Kingdom for 1902.' This is a work that should prove exceedingly useful for all who have business relations with paper manufacturers. One of its principal features is a list of trade designations used as water names, &c., by paper makers and wholesale stationers. This now numbers over 4,000 different names, and should be of exceptional value to printers and stationers. The book has apparently been very thoroughly revised and brought up to date in its present edition.

From Messrs. Methuen & Co.—'A Heart of Flame,' by Charles Fleming Embree. Though this story of Mexican life falls a little short of its object, being evidently intended for a moving portrayal of passionate life, it has so many good points, such delicacy of treatment and felicity of expression, that it is certain to hold the attention of readers. The fault lies principally in the want of a clearly outlined, vigorous plot. There is much refined subtle indication of character, but this in itself will not make a good novel. We want the thorough exhibition of sustained action that, having once taken possession of the reader, will carry him through to the end. The story is certainly not wanting in exciting episodes, but they are spasmodic in their character, and in the intervals there is a dangerous descent into the monotonous. In its presentation of Mexican life the narrative is excellent. The characters of the two sisters Ramoncila and Mathilde, the indolent lover Antonio, Patricio Borrego and his wife, the false priest Madret, are very dexterously hit off, and can scarcely fail to arouse interest. 'A Heart of Flame' is a novel that will appeal more to the student of character and foreign life than to the simple lover of fiction, but to each it will present many features of attraction. The book is illustrated by Dan Smith.

From Messrs. J. Nisbet & Co., Limited.—'When the Dream is Past,' by Eva Jameson. The author, we take it, is new to fiction writing. She commences well, raising expectations of a really good story, but soon relapses into the commonplace. The narrative is crowded with ordinary every-day conversation, of which the following may serve as an example: "'Is your brother in?' he asked.—'No, he has gone to Bridport.'—'When will he be back?' asked Ralph impatiently. 'I wanted particularly to see him.'—'I don't know,' said Modwenna. 'I will see whether Rachel does. Won't you come in, Mr. Hepworth?'—'No, thank you, I must get home. Perhaps Mr. Rathven would come and see me to-night.'—'I am sure he would,' said Modwenna.' This Ralph Hepworth is a very 'superior' sort of person and an atrocious prig. He becomes engaged to the heroine, who is also in the way of being affectedly clever. But before this she has pledged herself in rather an extraordinary fashion to another suitor who disappears from the scene for some time, though, as far as we can discover, there is no reason why he should. The priggish Ralph subsequently hears of this previous engagement, and, considering—perhaps not unnaturally—that he has been deceived, breaks off the engagement. This leaves the heroine free to make up the quarrel with her former lover, which she does in her new capacity of hospital nurse—a form of employment, as all must know who have had any experience of hospital work, that has a peculiar fascination for the love-blighted maiden. The story shows promise, but unfortunately presents few characters with whom it is possible to have any genuine sympathy.

From Messrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd.—'The Teller,' by Edward Noyes Westcott. The author of 'David Harum' is endeared to the hearts of many English readers, who will turn eagerly to this well-told tale of bank life in Chesterton, U.S.A. It is but a short story of about 10,000 words, but the volume contains many extracts from the author's letters, three portraits, and a sketch of Mr. Westcott's life by Forbes Heernans. From the letters we learn that 'David Harum' was refused by every publisher to whom it was sent until the author, growing disgusted, flung it on to the top shelf of a closet, where it remained for some time. 'I was so sick of the stuff that I could smell it when I opened the front door.' Eventually, however, it was accepted by Messrs. D. Appleton & Co.; and though the author lived to read the complimentary letter which this firm sent him, yet he died knowing nothing of the wonderful success the book was destined to enjoy, and hardly guessing that it possessed the qualities necessary to make it sell.

From Mr. Grant Richards.—'The Adventures of Samuel and Selina,' by Jean C. Archer. This welcome addition to the widely popular series called the 'Dumpy Books for Children' contains the chronicle in amusingly absurd rhymes of the haps and mishaps which befell Samuel and Selina during their courtship, and at their visit to the menagerie on Selina's birthday. The highly-coloured illustrations are both clever and comical, and will hugely delight countless little ones.

From Mr. James Robinson, Bridge Street, Manchester.—'Sermons on Gospel Themes,' by the Rev. Charles G. Finney. The writer was at one time President of Oberlin College, and these sermons were preached there during the years 1845-61. They are earnest and thoughtful addresses, full of much wise counsel and excellent teaching, and they can scarcely fail to be of great service in the promotion of a spiritual life:

From Messrs. Sands & Co.—'The Kiss,' by Dr. Christopher Nyrop, translated by William Frederick Harvey. In the midst of deep learning and wide reading we have found so much that is in execrable taste that we are afraid we can say very little in favour of this history of kissing. It is readable, certainly, but in one or two places it is utterly disgusting. Treated from a scientific point of view, the subject would have afforded good material; but in attempting to write of the kiss poetically, Dr. Nyrop has betrayed himself. What is one to think of the following, for instance? 'And how disgusted and indignant he (Cato) would be . . . at the sight of the duty-kisses after dinner, which are often exchanged between man and wife at dinner-parties. Ah, yes, when the belly's full.'

From the Unicorn Press, Ltd., Cecil Court, St. Martin's Lane.—'Little Engravings, Classical and Contemporary.' No. I., Albrecht Altdorfer; No. II., William Blake. Both of these volumes are exceedingly interesting, as illustrating the value of wood engravings and their position in earlier times. In the first over seventy woodcuts are photographically reproduced, while the second contains all the work of William Blake. For the introductions Mr. T. Sturge Moore and Mr. Lawrence Binyon are respectively responsible. The former, who occupies the position, we believe, of general editor to the series, indulges in some 'high falutin' artistic sentiment that might well have been toned down. In writing, for instance, of future volumes, he refers to Blake's pupil Calvert, 'whose exquisite docility has enabled him to produce perhaps the most felicitous of cuts, though the sweep of his wing will not bear comparison with that of his master, much less with greater names whose thought has been interpreted to us on the block'; while of Giulio Capagnola he says that his lovely plates 'are as though he had childishly kissed the soul from some waif fragment of Praxiteles and received encouragement in his efforts to express it from Giorgione himself.' We are afraid such flights of imagination—to say nothing of wing—will be quite incomprehensible to the ordinary reader, and it is therefore satisfactory to find that Mr. Moore himself acknowledges his deficiencies, being only, as he confesses, 'a stammerer' in his appreciation of Altdorfer.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'Certain Personal Matters,' by H. G. Wells. Here we have Mr. Wells in lighter vein, and though his humour has 'points,' it is not so striking or original as one might have expected from so brilliant a writer. The author of 'Anticipations' trying to squeeze humour out of 'The Coal-scuttle' is a somewhat pathetic sight, and the sketch entitled 'Cheapness and my Aunt Charlotte' is poor stuff.

Fortunately, each of the thirty-nine chapters is short, and variety of subject does much to lighten the dreary monotony of his homely and suburban wit. We suspect that the sketches contained in this volume are early magazine work reprinted; if so, we can find it in our hearts to forgive him. That Mr. Wells has humour of a distinguished order no one can deny who has read 'Love and Mr. Lewisham,' but curates at Sunday-school treats can reel off stuff quite as good as much of this.

From the same.—'Happy-Go-Lucky Land,' by Max Schmidt. This is a book on the government, navy, army, sports, &c., of England, and it is frankly critical in its tone and observation. It is written by a German who knows his own country as well as he knows England, and when he compares the two nations to the advantage of his own Fatherland it is always done with good taste and a certain amount of humour. Many readers will find much with which to disagree, but honest, well-intentioned criticism such as Mr. Schmidt gives us is always welcome. The papers, if we mistake not, originally appeared in the columns of a well-known half-penny daily, where they attracted considerable attention.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co.—'A Dream of Freedom: a Romance of South America,' by Hume Nisbet. We wish Mr. Nisbet could be persuaded not to write prefaces to his novels denouncing his critics. It is a great mistake, and only draws attention to the defects of construction and style that he should be anxious to hide. Qui s'accuse, s'accuse. In his present story he describes with great wealth of imagination a communist colony in Paraguay, founded by one Martin T. Steadman, who comes over to this country to obtain converts to his views. Among those who decide to throw in their lot with the New Spartans is Bernard Castleton, an artist who has 'lived his life,' as the saying is, and is heartily weary of everybody and everything. Existence under this new régime will provide fresh interest for him. On the voyage to South America he meets with other of his future fellow Spartans. They consist of a contemptible little man, Julian Saltmarsh, and his fine handsome wife and young daughter, and another married couple named Baldwin, whose object in seeking a new country is to wean the husband from a passion for drink. Owing to his kindly manner, Castleton is regarded as a sympathiser by his fellow-travellers, and into his unwilling ear are poured all the family troubles. Saltmarsh is feverishly jealous of his good-looking wife, who delights in tormenting and snubbing him; Mrs. Baldwin is anxious that her dipsomaniac husband should be kept from intoxicants during the voyage, and looks to Bernard to help her. Eventually Mrs. Saltmarsh and Denis Baldwin strike up a close intimacy, and it is mainly owing to her influence that he breaks out again. Arrived at New Sparta matters are in no way improved, and the end comes about in rather an extraordinary manner, Denis running away with Mrs. Saltmarsh and a fatal disaster overtaking them both. The story drags a little in places, Julian Saltmarsh in particular becoming something of a bore; but the interest attaching to his wife and the reckless Baldwin is quite sufficient to carry the reader very pleasantly to the end of the book.

NEW EDITIONS.—Messrs. Thomas Nelson & Son send us two volumes of a new edition of the writings of that popular story-teller, Robert Michael Ballantyne. These are the well-known 'World of Ice, or the Whaling Cruise of "The Dolphin,"' and 'Hudson's Bay, or Everyday Life in the Wilds of North America,' to which latter a brief but interesting memoir of the author is prefixed. Both volumes are stitched in tastefully coloured picture wrappers. Messrs. Nelson also send us a new edition of the same writer's 'Young Fur-Traders,' with a coloured frontispiece of 'Deer-spearing in the Far North.' This work is bound in cloth.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

* In addition to the names of book sizes, such as cr. 8vo., royal 8vo., &c., the sizes are also given where possible in inches: inch=2½ centimetres.

REGULATIONS.

- BOOKS IN PRINT ARE NOT ADVERTISED FOR, but can only appear in the ordinary Column advertisements and at the usual scale rate. Every care is taken to prevent this rule from being infringed; but we cannot hold ourselves in any way responsible for occasional oversights. Subscribers are requested to make careful inquiry at the Publishers' before sending their lists for these Columns.
- Only one title will be inserted in each line.
- Collective advertisements are not admissible, except in the case of very old subjects, where it may naturally be supposed the Advertisers have a difficulty in obtaining the titles.
- All lists should be sent to the Office, addressed to the 'Manager of the Publishers' Circular,' as early in the week as possible, and in no case later than Wednesday morning. Advertisements received too late for one issue (i.e., on Thursday) are not inserted in the next unless express instructions to this effect are given. This is to avoid any misunderstanding arising from charging for extra lines.
- Every Annual Subscriber has the privilege of a four-line Advertisement free each week in these columns, and can have extra lines at 3d. per line prepaid. For Non-Subscribers a uniform rate of 3d. per line prepaid is charged, the name and address being counted as one line.
- The Proprietors reserve to themselves the right of refusing any Advertisement.

The Copyright Question in Canada

A LETTER TO THE TORONTO BOARD OF TRADE

TORONTO, February 19, 1902.

The Secretary,

The Board of Trade,
Toronto.

SIR,—The Council of the Board of Trade lately adopted a resolution asking that Canadian Legislation be passed giving effect to the Copyright Bill proposed in 1895 by Mr. Hall Caine, 'making it obligatory that a book shall be printed and bound in this country in order to secure Canadian copyright, and continue to be so printed and bound in order to retain such copyright, and that upon failure to print in Canada, within a reasonable time, provision shall be made by which the Government may issue to a Canadian publisher a license to print in Canada, subject to such safeguards as will secure to the owner of such book a reasonable royalty upon his work.' The resolution is to be forwarded to the Boards of Trade of other cities in Canada, together with the request that they join in representations to the Government asking their consideration of this important question, and urging the passing of this legislation.

This resolution emanated from the Wholesale Booksellers' Section of the Board of Trade, of which Mr. W. J. Gage is the chairman. The Report of this Section presented to the Board recites that in 1895 Mr. Hall Caine came to this country, the duly accredited representative of English authors, accompanied by Mr. Daldy, representing the English publishers, and that after a conference with Canadian publishers, papermakers, printers, and bookbinders, a draft Bill was completed, which Mr. Hall Caine announced to the Canadian Government as containing an understanding reached with the Canadian publishers, and to which Mr. Daldy, on behalf of the English publishers, consented. These statements were made in the Report of the Section, notwithstanding the fact that at a Committee meeting composed of its members, held last year, I read a letter from the Secretary of the British Society of Authors stating that Mr. Hall Caine's proposed Bill had never received the approval of the Society; and although at the same meeting I stated that Mr. Daldy had informed me he had never consented to the Bill. After the Report of the action of the Board of Trade reached England, Mr. Daldy addressed a letter to the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, from which I quote:—

'So far from consenting to it [i.e., the Hall Caine Bill], I pointed out several important errors to which I could not agree; and being invited by some printers, publishers, and papermakers to meet them in Toronto just afterwards, I distinctly assured them that I could not consent to any restriction of the rights and privileges contained in the Imperial Acts of 1842 and 1886.'

I was absent from Toronto when the Booksellers' Section framed and passed its Report, and only returned to Toronto after it had been adopted at the meeting of the Council of the Board. Knowing that the Council was being misled, I communicated with the President, and requested that I might be heard before the Council, offering to explain the copyright question, which I knew was little understood by the members, of whom only two or three are publishers. The President frankly admitted to me that he had not investigated the question, and told me he would bring my request before the next meeting of the Council. I was somewhat surprised to receive a letter from the President a few days afterwards declining to allow me to be heard, and still more surprised to read that in his annual address to the Board, delivered four days later, he energetically pressed upon the Board the necessity for the legislation referred to in the resolution of the Council.

I therefore take this means of presenting the true position of literary copyright in Canada, a subject which is but little understood, and upon which the Executive and the Council apparently did not desire enlightenment.

Under the British Copyright Laws, which extend to Canada, a British or Canadian author of a literary work has the undisputed right to his manuscript; he may withhold, or he may communicate it, and in communicating it he may limit the number of persons to whom it is imparted, and impose such restrictions as he pleases upon the use and printing of the work. Foreign reprints of such a work cannot be imported into Canada. Canadian publishers are just as free to deal with authors under the British Copyright Laws as publishers in the United Kingdom, and are, therefore, on the same footing as the British publishers.

Prior to 1847 it was a common complaint in Canada that, owing to the provisions of the Imperial Copyright Act, a sufficient supply of English literature could not be obtained, while the reading public in the United States were well supplied with the best English books in cheap form. To remove this ground of complaint, the Imperial Parliament passed the Foreign Reprints Act (1847), under which Canada was permitted to import cheap pirated editions of British works produced in the United States, on an undertaking to collect a Customs duty thereon of 12½ per cent., which was to be paid over to the British Government for the benefit of the authors interested. The results of this legislation were unsatisfactory to the British authors, few of whom received any benefit under the provisions of the Act. The sums collected were ridiculously small. In 1894 they amounted to $1,433.66, and in 1895 to $2,211.33. While the arrangement was in existence, British copyright works were openly printed in the United States and imported into Canada without payment of the duty, to the exclusion of British editions. So long as this arrangement remained in force, a British copyright owner could not prevent the importation into Canada of pirated editions of his work, unless he reprinted the work in Canada and copyrighted it under the Canadian copyright laws. The arrangement was terminated by the Canadian Parliament in 1895 at the instance of Sir John Thompson.

Every lover of books will remember that during the continuance of the arrangement a Canadian publishing trade hardly existed, and that the reading public who bought books were compelled in a great measure to satisfy themselves with American reprints of so little value

Prior to 1887 a Canadian author was entitled to little protection under the Copyright Laws of European countries, and prior to 1891 was entitled to no protection whatever under the Copyright Laws of the United States. In 1886 the Imperial Parliament passed an Act which provides, in effect, that the British Copyright Acts shall apply to a book first produced in Canada or any other British possession in like manner as they apply to a work first produced in the United Kingdom. If the book is copyrighted at Ottawa, a certificate of registration signed by the Minister of Agriculture is proof in all Courts throughout the Empire of the existence of such copyright. No registration in England is required.

In 1887 a comparatively uniform system of International Copyright was established under the Berne Convention, which applies to the British Empire, Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Switzerland, Norway, Japan, Luxembourg, Monaco, Tunis, Hayti, and Montenegro. These countries comprise what is called 'The Copyright Union.' Under this Convention Canadian authors enjoy in the other countries of the Union for their works—whether published in one of those countries or unpublished—the rights which the respective laws grant to natives. (Austria-Hungary has a separate Convention with Great Britain on the lines of the Berne Convention, from the benefits of which Canada is expressly excepted.)¹ A book, therefore, first produced in Canada and registered at Ottawa, obtains at once the same copyright advantages throughout the British Dominions and the Copyright Union that it would enjoy if first produced in the United Kingdom and registered at Stationers' Hall in London.

Prior to 1891, books written in any part of the Empire were public property in the United States, and, although there were many honourable exceptions among American publishers of reputation, such books were as a rule appropriated on the scramble system, chiefly to supply material for the weekly issues of the cheap 'Libraries,' such as 'The Seaside' and 'The Franklin Square.' The 'fifteen cent quarto' of the Libraries was not a book; it was usually sold for railway reading, and thrown away at the end of the journey. Canada was deluged with these productions.

In 1891 the Chace Bill was passed by Congress. One provision of this Bill enacts that any citizen or subject of a foreign country, which has been declared by the President's proclamation to permit citizens of the United States the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as its own citizens, can obtain copyright in the United States. The author obtaining such copyright is protected from piracy in the United States, or from importation of foreign reproductions into the United States. It is popularly understood in Canada that, before the passage of the Chace Bill, the Imperial authorities gave some concession, or made some change in the British Copyright

¹ Canada had two years in which to decide if she would join the Convention with Austria-Hungary, but did not do so. So she is excluded by her own act.—ED. P.C.

Law, or entered into some International Agreement providing for reciprocity in the granting of copyright, in order to secure an arrangement with the United States. Such is not the case.

Only a few days ago I read a report of an address upon copyright delivered to the Canadian Club by Mr. Thomas, a leading member of the firm of The Copp, Clark Company, from the published report of which I quote:—

"In turning to the conditions of copyright in the United States, Mr. Thomas stated that prior to 1891 there was no protection for British authors there, and his books were pirated at will. The result was so disastrously manifest that a conference was held, and an Act was passed giving them protection. That Uncle Samuel had both eyes open when the Act was passed and the agreement made was shown when Mr. Thomas stated that one condition upon which the British author was given protection was that the book be printed and made in the United States, and that it be published prior to or simultaneously with foreign publication. This action of the Americans was contrasted with that of the British, who, while they demand the making and publication of a book in Britain to ensure the protection of copyright, yet construe the Act so as to allow it to be possible to have the book made in the United States and then have a sample sent to Stationers' Hall, London, which sending allows the work to be entered as published in England. Mr. Thomas said that the United States was the best book market in the world. He pointed out that the Americans, being aware of this, compelled the outside authors to have their books published in the United States. Mr. Thomas was applauded when he said: "There is not a single book made outside the United States as a result of this Act, for if you wish to secure the American copyright you have to have your book made there. What is sauce for the goose is not sauce for the gander, for we do not compel books to be published here in order to secure the British and Canadian copyright."

There is no foundation for these statements of Mr. Thomas in regard to the action of the United States. The Imperial authorities gave no concession to secure the passage of the Chace Bill, made no change in British Copyright Laws, entered into no agreement, and Uncle Sam played no sharp trick upon the unsuspecting Englishman. All this is pure fiction. What really happened was this, and it may be easily verified by reference to an English Blue Book, published in 1891, containing the correspondence relating to the 'United States Copyright Act.' The Act of Congress was passed in March, 1891. On May 27, 1891, the American Ambassador at London wrote to Lord Salisbury, then Foreign Secretary, enclosing a copy of the Act of Congress, and pointing out that the benefits of the Statute only extended to citizens of foreign countries after the President's proclamation had been issued under conditions specified in the Act. On June 16, 1891, Lord Salisbury wrote the American Ambassador as follows:—

"Her Majesty's Government is advised that under existing English law an alien by first publication in any part of Her Majesty's Dominions can obtain the benefit of English copyright, and that contemporaneous publication in a foreign country does not prevent the author from obtaining English copyright."

"That residence in some part of Her Majesty's Dominions is not a necessary condition to an alien obtaining copyright under the English copyright law; and "That the law of copyright in force in all British possessions permits to citizens of the United States of America the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as to British subjects."

On the first of July, 1891, and without further communication between the two Governments, the President issued his proclamation proclaiming, that as satisfactory official assurance had been given that in Great Britain and the British possessions the law permitted to citizens of the United States the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as to the citizens of that country, the above condition in the Chace Bill was fulfilled in respect of British subjects. Thereupon the authors of the United Kingdom and Canada, and of every other British possession, became entitled to the benefits of copyright in the United States on a perfect equality with American authors.

It is, therefore, plain that the action of the United States was entirely voluntary; it was the result of no bargaining; it was a straight concession to British authors, to secure which the Imperial authorities conceded nothing. The United States by the Chace Bill conceded to British subjects privileges substantially equal to those conceded to its own citizens. The provisions of the Chace Bill are also in force with Germany, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Italy, Denmark, Portugal, Spain, Mexico, Netherlands (Holland), Chile, and Costa Rica.

The Chace Bill was the result of a struggle extending over fifty-three years to secure the recognition in the United States of International Copyright—a struggle of authors supported by the most eminent American publishers and journalists, having in view the relief of the publishing and all kindred trades from the blight of piracy, and the removal of the stigma which had rested on the American literary and publishing world. Prominent in the agitation which terminated in the Chace Bill was the American Copyright League, which included among its members the authors of the United States, and was presided over by such men as James Russell Lowell, Stedman, and Eggleston. The League in a noble letter published in 1887 appealed to all good citizens for justice to foreign authors, upon the ground that they were entitled to receive from those who read and benefited by their books the same fair payment one would expect to make on any other article, such as clothes or pictures, bought from foreign producers. The League appealed for the widening of the circulation of the best new literature, home and international, on the ground of the lessening of the price which would ensue, in the case of original American books, from distributing the first cost among the greater number of copies for which sale would be secured among American readers if the market were not flooded by pirated reprints of poor English novels; and in the case of books of international importance, whether from American, English, or Continental writers, from giving a basis of law to business arrangements for sharing the expense of production among the several nations interested.

A recent report to the United States Senate on the effect of the passage of the Chace Bill sets forth that the great preponderance of opinion among publishers, book manufacturers, and large printing establishments supports the change. The condition of the book trade in the United States prior to the passage of the Chace Bill in 1891 was deplorable. If the suggestion of the Board of Trade of Toronto were adopted, Canada would be in exactly the same condition as the United States before the Chace Bill was passed.

The Canadian author, therefore, has obtained security in the vast market of the United States, because of the proclamation of the President, based on Lord Salisbury's satisfactory official assurance that in Great Britain and the British possessions the law permitted to citizens of the United States the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as to British subjects. If Canadian authors—Mr. Seton-Thompson, Ralph Connor, or Dr. Drummond, for example—comply with the provisions of the Chace Bill, and print and publish in the United States contemporaneously with the Canadian publication, they secure British and American copyright, with all the protection of the local copyright laws of the two countries.

Now let us see how an American author, who does not copyright in England but seeks to publish simultaneously in Canada and the United States, would be treated in this country were he to seek to copyright his book in compliance with the provisions of our Canadian Act, an essential requirement of which is printing in this country.

In 1875 the Canadian Parliament passed an Act giving copyright for twenty-eight years from the date of recording to any author of a book domiciled in Canada² or in any part of the British dominions or being the citizen of any country having an International Copyright Treaty with the United Kingdom. To secure such copyright the Act provides that the book must be printed and published, or reprinted and republished in Canada, whether so published for the first time or contemporaneously with or subsequently to the publication elsewhere. This Act was reserved by the Governor General. In the same year an Imperial Statute was passed empowering Her Majesty in Council to assent to the reserved Act. On October 26, 1875, the Royal Assent was given, to take effect from December 11 following. Just as United States Copyright Legislation requires production in that country, so the Canadian Act of 1875 provides, as pointed out above, that to obtain 'Canadian' copyright for a literary work it must be produced in Canada.³
